1 NOTICE

2 PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that on August 14, 1998, at 10:00 a.m., in the United States
3 Courthouse at 450 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco, California, in the courtroom normally 4 occupied by the Hon. Charles R. Breyer, plaintiff, the United States of America, will move this 5 Honorable Court for an order to show cause why defendants Oakland Cannabis Buyer's 6 Cooperative ("OCBC") and Jeffrey Jones in Case No. C 98-0088 CRB; defendants Marin Alliance 7 for Medical Marijuana ("Marin Alliance") and Lynnette Shaw in Case No. C 98-0086 CRB; and 8 defendants Ukiah Cannabis Buyer's Club ("UCBC"), Cherrie Lovett, Marvin Lehrman, and 9 Mildred Lehrman in Case No. C 98-0087 CRB (collectively the "non-compliant defendants") 10 should not be held in civil contempt of this Court's May 19, 1998, Preliminary Injunction Orders.
11 This motion for an order to show cause is based on the non-compliant defendants' open, public, 12 and flagrant defiance of the Court's May 19, 1998, Preliminary Injunction Orders. The United 13 States will further move this Honorable Court for summary judgment on its claims that the non-14 compliant defendants are in civil contempt.

15 PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

16 On May 19, 1998, this Court entered Preliminary Injunctions and Orders in these related 17 actions, enjoining six cannabis dispensaries and several individuals associated with those 18 dispensaries from engaging in the distribution or manufacture of marijuana, or the possession of 19 marijuana with the intent to distribute or manufacture the substance, in violation of the Controlled 20 Substances Act, 21 U.S.C. § 841(a)(1). The Court further enjoined these defendants from using 21 the premises which house the dispensaries for the distribution or manufacture of marijuana, in 22 violation of 21 U.S.C. § 856(a)(1), and enjoined the named individual defendants from conspiring 23 to violate the Controlled Substances Act by engaging in the distribution or manufacture of 24 marijuana, in violation of 21 U.S.C. § 846.

25 Each of the non-compliant defendants is in blatant contempt of the May 19, 1998, 26 Preliminary Injunction Orders. Defendants Jeffrey Jones, Lynnette Shaw, and Marvin Lehrman

1 Mem. Op. & Order at 23. The Court further concluded that, because the United States had 2 established that it was likely to succeed on the merits, and because these cases were statutory 3 enforcement actions brought by the federal government, "irreparable injury is presumed and the 4 injunction must be granted." Id.

5 On May 19, 1998, the Court entered six Preliminary Injunction Orders which enjoined the 6 defendants from engaging in the manufacture of distribution or marijuana, or the possession of 7 marijuana with the intent to manufacture and distribute marijuana, in violation of 21 U.S.C. § 8 841(a)(1). The Preliminary Injunction Orders further enjoined the defendants from using the 9 premises of the buildings which house the defendant cannabis dispensaries for the purposes of 10 engaging in the manufacture and distribution of marijuana, in violation of 21 U.S.C. § 856(a)(1).
11 Finally, the Preliminary Injunction Orders enjoined the defendants from conspiring to violate 21 12 U.S.C. § 841(a)(1). The Preliminary Injunction Orders were served upon the non-compliant 13 defendants shortly after their entry.<sup>3</sup>

14 As described below, following entry of the Preliminary Injunction Orders, the defendants in 15 three of the related actions have continued to engage in the distribution of marijuana in flagrant 16 defiance of these orders.<sup>4</sup>

17 1. Defendants OCBC and Jeffrey Jones

18 On May 20, 1998, one day after this Court entered its May 19, 1998, Preliminary 19 Injunction Order, defendants OCBC and Jeffrey Jones issued a press release entitled "Oakland

21 <sup>3</sup> Defendants OCBC and Jeffrey Jones were served with the Preliminary Injunction Order in 22 Case No. C 98-0088 CRB on May 29, 1998. Defendants Marin Alliance and Lynnette Shaw were 23 served with the Preliminary Injunction Order in Case No. C 98-0086 CRB on May 25, 1998.
24 Defendants UCBC, Marvin Lehrman, and Mildred Lehrman were served with the Preliminary Injunction Order in Case No. C 98-0086 CRB on May 27, 1998.

25 <sup>4</sup> A fourth set of defendants, the Cannabis Cultivators Cooperative and Dennis Peron in Case 26 No. C 98-0085 CRB, also have made public statements that that cannabis dispensary would 27 violate the May 19, 1998, Preliminary Injunction Order. However, because the successor to the Cannabis Cultivators Cooperative has since been shut down by state and local officials, the United States is not seeking civil contempt against these defendants at this time.

1 Cooperative to Openly Dispense Medical Marijuana for First Time Since Preliminary Injunction - 2 U.S. Attorney to be Notified: HIV, Multiple Sclerosis and Other Seriously Ill Patients to Receive 3 Pot at 11:00 a.m., Thursday May 21, Oakland Buyers Cannabis Cooperative, 1755 Broadway, 4 Oakland.” See Exhibit 1 to Declaration of Mark T. Quinlivan (“Quinlivan Dec.”). The press 5 release states, in pertinent part, as follows:

6 Oakland, CA — Just hours after Federal Judge Charles Breyer signs into law a 7 preliminary injunction against six California medical marijuana clubs, Jeff Jones, Director of 8 the Oakland Cannabis Buyers Cooperative announced that he will openly dispense 9 marijuana to four seriously ill patients at 11:00 a.m. on Thursday May 21. U.S. Attorney 10 Michael Yamaguchi will be notified of the cooperative’s actions, Jones said.

11 “For these four patients, and others like them, medical marijuana is a medical necessity,” 12 said Jones. “To deny them access would be unjust and inhumane.”

13 Violation of the preliminary injunction could initiate Contempt of Court proceedings 14 against the Oakland Cooperative. A Contempt case, during which a medical necessity 15 argument would likely be made by attorneys for the cooperative, would be heard by a jury 16 who would have to reach a unanimous verdict.

17 “I’d trust a jury of Californians before federal bureaucrats,” said Jones. “All the evidence 18 shows that marijuana has medical qualities and should be re-scheduled. Voters in two 19 states have already endorsed medical marijuana, and others look set to follow. Yet the 20 federal government refuses to consider the facts and instead is hell-bent upon enforcing 21 outdated marijuana laws.”

22 Id. Defendant Jeffrey Jones faxed the press release to United States Attorney Michael Yamaguchi.

23 Id.

24 Similarly, on May 22, 1998, in an article entitled "Marijuana Clubs Defy Judge's Order by 25 Karyn Hunt, which appeared on AP Online, defendant Jeffrey Jones is quoted as stating, "We are 26 not closing down. We feel what we are doing is legal and a medical necessity and we're going to 27 take it to a jury to prove that." Exhibit 2 to Quinlivan Dec. The article further reported that, 28 notwithstanding the preliminary injunction entered against it, defendant Jones had stated the 29 OCBC had opened on time at 11:00 a.m., and had served 40 to 50 clients in the first half hour. Id.

30 These public pronouncements have been confirmed by agents of the DEA. On May 21, 31 1998, Special Agent Peter Ott, in an undercover capacity, entered the OCBC and observed an 32 individual who identified himself as defendant Jeffrey Jones distribute marijuana to four individuals, 33 in front of several news cameras. Declaration of Special Agent Peter Ott ("Ott Dec.") ¶¶ 3-4.

1 Special Agent Ott further observed ten additional over-the-counter sales of marijuana by the 2 OCBC to different individuals. Id. ¶ 4.

3 On May 27, 1998, Special Agent Bill Nyfeler placed a recorded telephone call to the 4 OCBC, at (510) 832-5346, to confirm that the club was continuing to distribute marijuana.
5 Declaration of Special Agent Bill Nyfeler ("Nyfeler Dec.") ¶ 5. The individual who answered the 6 phone informed Special Agent Nyfeler that the OCBC was still open for business, and told Special 7 Agent Nyfeler the club's business hours. Id.

8 On June 16, 1998, Special Agent Dean Arnold placed a recorded telephone call to the 9 OCBC, at (510) 843-5346, to again confirm that the club was still distributing marijuana.
10 Declaration of Special Agent Dean Arnold ("Arnold Dec.") ¶ 3. An unidentified male answered 11 the telephone and informed Special Agent Arnold that the OCBC was open for business and was 12 accepting new members. The unidentified male further informed Special Agent Arnold about the 13 requirements of becoming an OCBC member, the hours that the club was open (11 a.m. - 1 p.m., 14 and 5 p.m. - 7 p.m.), and the location of the OCBC, at 1755 Broadway Avenue, in Oakland. Id.

15 The World Wide Web site of the OCBC, which indicates that it was updated on June 1, 16 1998, also states: "Currently, we are providing medical cannabis and other services to over 1,300 17 members." Exhibit 3 to Quinlivan Dec. (emphasis supplied). The Web site also includes links to 18 this Court's May 19, 1998, Preliminary Injunction Order and May 13, 1998, Memorandum and 19 Order. Id.

20 Finally, a summary of the "Consortium Meeting of California Medical Marijuana 21 Dispensaries" (held on June 27, 1998, in Oakland, California), which was published in the Portland 22 NORML News on June 30, 1998, states that, "[t]he three remaining CBCs are still open. Ukiah, 23 Marin Alliance & Oakland." Exhibit 4 to Quinlivan Dec. The summary further states that: "The 24 Oakland CBC needs help financing the legal defense fund, recommendations are that the clubs 25 attach a surcharge on each transaction & give it to the defense fund. Second that the growers 26 knock off $100.00 per pound to be fed to the defense fund." Id.

27 2. Defendants Marin Alliance and Lynnette Shaw

28 Plaintiff's Motion for Order to Show Cause/Summary Judgment
Case Nos. C 98-0086 CRB; C 98-0087 CRB; C 98-0088 CRB

1 Notwithstanding the Court's May 19, 1998, Preliminary Injunction Orders, defendant 2 Lynnette Shaw, in an article entitled Federal Shutdown: Pot clinic could close its doors to sick
3 and dying, by Bill Meagher and Peter Seidman, which appeared in the June 3-9 edition of the 4 Pacific Sun, is quoted as stating: "We have moved all the patients' files already, and we are still 5 open seven days a week." Exhibit 5 to Quinlivan Dec. Defendant Shaw also is quoted as stating: 6 "Give me a jury, please give me a jury. We have our patients lining up waiting to testify. * * *
7 Show me a jury who will look at our patients and not understand the idea of medical marijuana 8 being a necessity for these people." Id. Finally, defendant Shaw is quoted as stating that, if the 9 Marin Alliance is closed, she will nonetheless continue to engage in the distribution of marijuana.
10 "We have a Plan B lined up that will allow us to continue to serve our patients, but we will have to 11 operate underground * * * ." Id.

12 These public pronouncements have been confirmed by agents of the DEA. On May 27, 13 1998, Special Agent Bill Nyfeler observed 14 individuals enter the Marin Alliance over a two and 14 one-half hour period. Declaration of Special Agent Bill Nyfeler ("Nyfeler Dec.") ¶ 3. Special 15 Agent Nyfeler further observed that several of these individuals, upon exiting the Marin Alliance, 16 would roll what appeared to be marijuana cigarettes and smoke them in the area directly outside 17 the Marin Alliance. Id.

18 On the same day, at approximately 3:15 p.m., Special Agent Nyfeler placed a recorded 19 telephone call to the Marin Alliance, at (415) 256-9328, to confirm that the club was continuing to 20 engage in the distribution of marijuana. Id. ¶ 6. A pre-recorded message stated that the caller had 21 reached the Marin Alliance, and that the club was still open under the "medical necessity defense."
22 Id.

23 On June 16, 1998, Special Agent Arnold placed a recorded telephone call to the Marin 24 Alliance at (415) 256-9328, to again confirm that the Marin Alliance was still distributing 25 marijuana. Arnold Dec. ¶ 4. An unidentified female answered the telephone by stating, "Marin 26 Alliance," and further informed Special Agent Arnold about the requirements of becoming a new 27 member of the Marin Alliance, and that the club was open that day until "five." Id.

1 The minutes of the Monthly Meeting of California Medical Marijuana Dispensaries (held on 2 May 30, 1998, in Oakland, California), which was published in the Portland NORML News, on 3 May 31, 1998, also reflects that the Marin Alliance remains in business, stating: "MARIN 4 UPDATE: Lynnette Shaw says she's laid off all but 1 other person to help her run her operation." 5 Exhibit 6 to Quinlivan Dec. Finally, as set forth above, a summary of the "Consortium Meeting of 6 California Medical Marijuana Dispensaries" (held on June 27, 1998, in Oakland, California), which 7 was published in the Portland NORML News on June 30, 1998, states that, "[t]he three remaining 8 CBCs are still open. Ukiah, Marin Alliance & Oakland." Exhibit 4 to Quinlivan Dec.

9 3. Defendants UCBC; Cherrie Lovett; Marvin Lehrman; and Mildred Lehrman

10 A May 30, 1998, article entitled Lake County struggles with pot grant use - Ukiah pot club 11 eviction withdrawn, by Jennifer Poole, which appeared in the Ukiah Daily Journal, states that, 12 notwithstanding the Court's May 19, 1998, Preliminary Injunction Orders, the UCBC is still open, 13 and has no plans to close, and quotes defendant Marvin Lehrman as saying, "We're continuing and 14 fulfilling our mission. I don't know what's next." Exhibit 7 to Quinlivan Dec. The article further 15 notes that defendants UCBC and Lehrman had been officially served with this Court's Preliminary 16 Injunction Order on Wednesday, May 27, 1998. Id.

17 Similarly, in a June 17, 1998, article entitled Board begins Prop 215 process - But backs 18 away from resolution proposed by Supervisor Peterson, by Jennifer Poole, which appeared in the 19 Ukiah Daily Journal, defendant Lehrman is quoted as saying, "And that's why we're here, to 20 supply medical marijuana to those people who need it now and who may not be alive by the time 21 the boards of supervisors and others get it together." Exhibit 8 to Quinlivan Dec.

22 These public pronouncements have been confirmed by agents of the DEA. On May 27, 23 1998, Special Agent Nyfeler placed a recorded telephone call to the UCBC, at (707) 462-0691, to 24 confirm that the club was continuing to distribute marijuana. Nyfeler Dec. ¶ 4. An individual who 25 identified himself as "Marvin" answered the phone and stated that, although the UCBC was in

1 receipt of an injunction, the club was still open for business. Id. "Marvin" further informed 2 Special Agent Nyfeler of the UCBC's business hours. Id.<sup>5</sup>

3 On June 16, 1998, Special Agent Arnold placed a recorded telephone call to the UCBC, at 4 (707) 462-0691, to again confirm that the club was still distributing marijuana. Arnold Dec. ¶ 5.
5 An unidentified male answered the telephone and stated, "UCBC." Id. Special Agent Arnold 6 asked whether the UCBC was still open for business, to which the unidentified male asked if 7 Special Agent Arnold was a member. Id. Special Agent Arnold stated that he was not a member, 8 to which the unidentified male responded, "We are officially closed." Id. Special Agent Arnold 9 then asked if the UCBC was accepting new members, to which the unidentified male responded, 10 "Why don't you come in and show me what you have, medical papers?" Id.

11 Finally, as set forth above, a summary of the "Consortium Meeting of California Medical 12 Marijuana Dispensaries" (held on June 27, 1998, in Oakland, California), which was published in 13 the Portland NORML News on June 30, 1998, states that, "[t]he three remaining CBCs are still

9 ARGUMENT

10 As evidenced by their public statements and confirmed by agents of the DEA, the non-11 compliant defendants are continuing to distribute marijuana, in flagrant violation of the May 19, 12 1998, Preliminary Injunction Orders. Under these circumstances, the Court should enter an order 13 to show cause why these defendants should not be held in civil contempt forthwith. Moreover, 14 because, as we demonstrate below, there is no factual dispute that the non-compliant defendants 15 are violating the Preliminary Injunction Orders, and because their anticipated defense of medical 16 necessity has no merit, the Court should find these defendants in civil contempt as a matter of law.

17 I. STANDARDS FOR CIVIL CONTEMPT

18 The United States is moving for civil contempt against the non-compliant defendants. A 19 contempt sanction is civil in nature if it either "coerce[s] the defendant into compliance with the 20 court's order, [or] * * * compensate[s] the complainant for losses sustained." United States v.
21 United Mine Workers of America, 330 U.S. 258, 303-04 (1947).

22 "[C]ivil contempt is appropriate when a party fails to comply with a specific and definite 23 court order." Balla v. Idaho State Bd. of Corrections, 869 F.2d 461, 466 (9th Cir. 1989). Two 24 elements are necessary in order for civil contempt to be established. First, there must be a valid 25 court order that is clear in its commands. Id. at 465. Second, the party (or other person or entity 26 bound by Rule 65(d)) must have failed to comply with the court's order. Id.; General Signal Corp.
27 v. Donallco, Inc., 787 F.2d 1376, 1380 (9th Cir. 1986). Failure to comply consists of not taking 28 "all the reasonable steps within [one's] power to insure compliance with the order[]." Sekaquaptewa v. McDonald, 544 F.2d 396, 406 (9th Cir. 1976), cert. denied, 430 U.S. 931 (1977).

29 The federal courts have wide discretion in the choice of remedies for civil contempt. "The 30 measure of the court's power in civil contempt proceedings is determined by the requirements of 31 full remedial relief." McComb v. Jacksonville Paper Co., 336 U.S. 187, 193 (1949). As one judge 32 of this Court has held, a court "has discretion in its choice of remedies for a civil contempt" and,

1 to effectuate full remedial relief, a court "can take whatever action is necessary to remedy the 2 contempt." Lovell v. Evergreen Resources, Inc., No. C 88-3467 DLJ, 1995 WL 761269, *3 (N.D.
3 Cal. Dec. 15, 1995) (Jensen, J.) (emphasis supplied) (citing McComb, 336 U.S. at 193).

4 II. THE NON-COMPLIANT DEFENDANTS ARE IN CONTEMPT OF THIS 5 COURT'S MAY 19, 1998, PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION ORDERS

6 Each of the elements necessary for a finding of civil contempt is present. First, this Court's 7 May 19, 1998, Preliminary Injunction Orders constitute valid orders that are clear in their 8 commands. In pertinent part, the Preliminary Injunction Orders provide:

9 1. Defendants [respective cannabis club and operator] are hereby preliminarily 10 enjoined, pending further order of the Court, from engaging in the manufacture or 11 distribution of marijuana, or the possession of marijuana with the intent to manufacture and 12 distribute marijuana, in violation of 21 U.S.C. § 841(a)(1); and

13 2. Defendants [respective cannabis club and operator] are hereby preliminarily 14 enjoined from using the premises of [building which houses respective club] for the 15 purposes of engaging in the manufacture and distribution of marijuana; and 16 3. Defendant [respective operator] is hereby preliminarily enjoined from conspiring 17 to violate the Controlled Substances Act, 21 U.S.C. § 841(a)(1) with respect to the 18 manufacture or distribution of marijuana, or the possession of marijuana with the intent to 19 manufacture and distribute marijuana.

20 The terms of these respective Preliminary Injunction Orders, therefore, are plain and clear.

21 Second, as set forth above, there is no factual dispute in these actions that the non-22 compliant defendants are engaged in ongoing violations of the Court's Preliminary Injunction 23 Orders. Defendants Jeffrey Jones, Lynnette Shaw, and Marvin Lehrman each have publicly stated 24 that their respective cannabis dispensaries are continuing to engage in the distribution of marijuana 25 despite the Preliminary Injunction Orders, see Quinlivan Dec. ¶¶ 1-8, and these statements have 26 been confirmed by agents of the DEA. See Ott Dec. ¶¶ 3-5; Nyfeler Dec. ¶¶ 3-6; Arnold Dec. ¶¶ 27 3-5.

28 Under these circumstances, the United States has more than established a prima facie case that the non-compliant defendants are in civil contempt of this Court's Preliminary Injunction Orders. Indeed, not only have the non-compliant defendants failed to take "all the reasonable steps within [their] power to insure compliance with the orders," Sekaquaptewa, 544 F.2d at 406, these

1 defendants have, obviously, failed to take any steps to comply with these orders. This Court, 2 therefore, should issue an order to show cause why the non-compliant defendants should not be 3 held in civil contempt.

4 III. THE NON-COMPLIANT DEFENDANTS SHOULD BE FOUND IN CIVIL 5 CONTEMPT AS A MATTER OF LAW

6 A. The Court Has Authority To Hold The Non-Compliant Defendants In Civil 7 Contempt As A Matter Of Law.

8 In its May 13, 1998, Memorandum Opinion and Order, the Court noted that, if it issued an 9 injunction, “defendants have a right to a jury in any proceeding in which it is alleged that they have 10 violated the injunction.” Mem. Op. & Order at 20. The Court allowed, however, that the federal 11 government might be able to move for summary judgment in a contempt proceeding, if there were 12 no material issues of fact in dispute and if “no reasonable jury could find for the nonmoving party.”
13 Id. at 20 (citing Matsushita Elec. Ind. Co. v. Zenith Radio, 475 U.S. 574, 587 (1986)).

14 The non-compliant defendants' actions present this very situation. As demonstrated above, 15 there is no factual dispute that the non-compliant defendants are violating the Court’s Preliminary 16 Injunction Orders and, indeed, the non-compliant defendants openly concede that they are 17 continuing to engage in the distribution of marijuana in defiance of this Court’s decrees. See 18 Quinlivan Dec. ¶¶ 1-8; Ott Dec. ¶¶ 3-5; Nyfelner Dec. ¶¶ 3-6; Arnold Dec. ¶¶ 3-5.

19 Under such circumstances, where there are no material issues of fact in dispute, the federal 20 courts have uniformly held that an evidentiary hearing is not required in a contempt proceeding.
21 See, e.g., Mercer v. Mitchell, 908 F.2d 763, 769 n.11 (11th Cir. 1990); Morales-Feliciano v.
22 Parole Bd., 887 F.2d 1, 6-7 (1st Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1046 (1990); Commodity
23 Futures Trading Comm'n v. Premex, Inc., 655 F.2d 779, 782 n.2 (7th Cir. 1981); New York State 24 Nat'l Org. for Women v. Terry, 697 F. Supp. 1324, 1330 n.6 (S.D.N.Y. 1988); Parker Pen Co. v.
25 Greenglass, 206 F. Supp. 796, 797 (S.D.N.Y. 1962); 11A Charles Alan Wright, Arthur R. Miller 26 & Mary Kay Kane, Federal Practice and Procedure § 2960, at 378 (2d ed. 1995). As the 27 Eleventh Circuit stated in Mercer, “when there are no disputed factual matters that require an

1 evidentiary hearing, the court might properly dispense with the hearing prior to finding the 2 defendant in contempt and sanctioning him." 908 F.2d at 769 n.11 (citing Morales-Feliciano, 887 3 F.2d at 6-7).

4 Nor is section 882(b) to the contrary. This statute provides that, "[i]n case of an alleged 5 violation of an injunction or restraining order issued under this section, trial shall, upon demand of 6 the accused, be by a jury in accordance with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure." 21 U.S.C. § 7 882(b) (emphasis supplied). Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, of course, where "there 8 is no genuine issue of material fact * * * the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of 9 law." Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c). See, e.g., Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323-27, (1986); 10 Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 250 (1986). Hence, when read in conjunction 11 with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, as it must be, section 882(b) allows a court to find a 12 party in contempt without a trial when there are no material issues of fact in dispute.

13 Accordingly, because there are no material issues of fact in dispute, the United States is 14 entitled to summary judgment on its claim that the non-compliant defendants are in civil contempt 15 of the May 19, 1998, Preliminary Injunction Orders.

16 B. The Non-Compliant Defendants' Anticipated Legal Defense Fails As A Matter Of 17 Law

18 Nor would the anticipated defense of medical necessity in any way change this analysis.
19 As we demonstrate below, such a defense fails as a matter of law.<sup>6</sup> See United States v. Bailey,

21 <sup>6</sup> Only one federal court (besides this Court) has considered the defense of medical necessity, 22 in a published opinion, in a case involving marijuana. In United States v. Burton, 894 F.2d 188
23 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 857 (1990), the Sixth Circuit rejected the claim that the trial 24 court had erred in refusing to allow a defendant to present evidence regarding his asserted defense 25 of necessity for glaucoma treatment. In pertinent part, the court held that, because a government 26 program to study the effects of marijuana on glaucoma sufferers was then in existence, a 27 reasonable legal alternative existed for the defendant which he failed to utilize. Id. at 191. We note that in United States v. Belknap, 985 F.2d 554, 1993 WL 30375 (4th Cir. 1993) (Mem.), the Fourth Circuit, in an unpublished memorandum, also rejected application of the defense of medical necessity to a charge of manufacturing marijuana because the defendant had refused to try alternative, legal treatments. 1993 WL 30375, *2.

1 444 U.S. 394, 412 n.9 (1980) ("In a civil action, the question whether a particular affirmative
2 defense is sufficiently supported by testimony to go to the jury may often be resolved on a motion 3 for summary judgment * * *").

4 1. Medical Necessity is Not a Defense to Civil Contempt

5 As a preliminary matter, even if it were a defense to the underlying crimes of distributing 6 and cultivating marijuana in violation of the Controlled Substances Act, medical necessity, as a 7 matter of law, cannot operate as a defense to civil contempt in these actions. The only proper 8 inquiry for the Court in these proceedings is whether the non-compliant defendants have actually 9 violated the Preliminary Injunction Orders. To hold otherwise would undermine the very 10 legitimacy of those orders. As the Supreme Court stated in Local 28 of the Sheet Metal Workers' 11 Int'l Ass'n v. Equal Employment Opportunity Comm'n, 478 U.S. 421 (1986), "a 'contempt 12 proceeding does not open to reconsideration the legal or factual basis of the order alleged to have 13 been disobeyed and thus become a retrial of the original controversy.'" Id. at 441 (quoting 14 Maggio v. Zeitz, 333 U.S. 56, 69 (1948). See also Walker v. City of Birmingham, 388 U.S. 307, 15 315-20 (1967) (holding that a person charged with contempt for violating a court order or decree 16 may not, upon appealing the contempt conviction, challenge the constitutional validity of that 17 order unless order is "transparently invalid"); Mine Workers, 330 U.S. at ___ (lack of wilfulness no 18 defense to charge of civil contempt). As the Maggio Court made clear, "[t]he procedure to 19 enforce a court's order commanding or forbidding an act should not be so inconclusive as to foster 20 experimentation with disobedience." 333 U.S. at 69. Here, any attempt to relitigate the medical 21 necessity issue in the context of a contempt proceeding would contravene Maggio.

1 Moreover, several courts have rejected the defense of necessity in contempt proceedings.
2 In Morgan v. Foretich, 546 A.2d 407 (D.C. 1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 1007 (1989), for 3 example, a case in which a party attempted to raise the defense of necessity in response to a charge 4 of civil contempt, the D.C. Court of Appeals held that:

5 [T]he situation here is far different from that facing one who violates a criminal law. Here 6 there was a specific court order, requiring specific conduct tailored to a specific fact 7 situation—an order which we on appeal had refused to stay. Civil contempt could become 8 meaningless if a lawful defense could rest on the ground that a party took a different view, 9 however reasonable, of the potential harm in compliance.

10 Id. at 411. To the same effect is Commonwealth v. Brogan, 415 Mass. 169, 612 N.E.2d 656 11 (1993), in which the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts held that “[i]t would be paradoxical 12 for the law to recognize justified necessity in a defendant’s violation of a court order that forbade 13 the very conduct that the defendant now claims was necessary. The defendant’s avenue of relief is 14 to challenge or seek to modify the court order, not to violate it.” Id. at 176, 612 N.E.2d at 660.

15 But cf. In re Grand Jury Proceedings, 894 F.2d 881, 882-83 (7th Cir. 1990) (assuming, without 16 deciding, that witness had right to present testimony on claim of duress in civil contempt 17 proceeding). Similarly here, if the defense of necessity were allowed to justify the very conduct 18 which this Court enjoined, the doctrine of civil contempt would have little meaning.

19 2. Congress Precluded the Defense of Medical Necessity for Schedule I Controlled
20 Substances

21 The defense of medical necessity also is legally unavailable to the non-compliant defendants 22 because it is precluded by the Controlled Substances Act. The defense of necessity, whether 23 medical or otherwise, is a common law defense. As such, it may be abrogated by statute. “The 24 defense of necessity is available only in situations wherein the legislature has not itself, in its 25 criminal statute, made a determination of values. If it has done so, its decision governs.” 1 Walter 26 LaFave & Austin W. Scott, Jr., Substantive Criminal Law § 5.4, at 631 (1986).

1           When it passed the Controlled Substances Act in 1970, Congress placed marijuana in 2 Schedule I,<sup>7</sup> which, by definition, means that the substance has "no currently accepted medical use 3 in treatment in the United States," and "a lack of accepted safety for use * * * under medical 4 supervision." Id. § 812(b)(1). Section 812, therefore, establishes a binding legislative 5 determination that marijuana has no medical value or use in the United States. See also id. §§ 6 829(a)-(c) (allowing practitioners to prescribe controlled substances in Schedules II-V, but not 7 Schedule I).

8           Likewise, while Congress allowed for research with controlled substances in Schedule I, it 9 delineated strict procedures for those who wish to conduct such research, and provided that "[t]he 10 Secretary [of Health and Human Services], in determining the merits of each research protocol, 11 shall consult with the Attorney General as to effective procedures to adequately safeguard against 12 diversion of such controlled substances from legitimate medical or scientific use." 21 U.S.C. § 13 823(f). Congress thereby indicated that the only legitimate medical or scientific use for a 14 substance in Schedule I is in the context of a controlled research project approved by the Secretary 15 of Health and Human Services and registered with the DEA under and authorized under section 16 823(f).

17           Finally, Congress enacted specific procedures for the rescheduling of controlled substances.
18 See 21 U.S.C. § 811(a). A proceeding to reschedule a controlled substance may be initiated by the 19 Attorney General, acting through the DEA Administrator: "(1) on his own motion, (2) at the 20 request of the Secretary [of Health and Human Services], or (3) at the petition of any interested 21 party." Id. The implementing regulations to the Controlled Substances Act thus allow "[a]ny 22 interested person to submit a petition" asking the DEA Administrator to initiate a rulemaking 23 proceeding to reschedule a controlled substance. 21 C.F.R. §§ 1308.44(a). Any person aggrieved 24 by a final DEA rescheduling decision may seek review in a court of appeals. See 21 U.S.C. § 877.

27

---

1 Accordingly, Congress expressly considered and rejected the possible medical uses of 2 marijuana (or any other Schedule I controlled substance) when it enacted the Controlled 3 Substances Act.<sup>8</sup> This conclusion is only bolstered by the fact that, since the passage of the 4 Controlled Substances Act, Congress has declined to enact legislation that would have specifically 5 allowed for the medical use of marijuana in certain specified circumstances on four separate 6 occasions.<sup>9</sup>

7 A conclusion by this Court that the defense of medical necessity is available for the use and 8 distribution of a Schedule I controlled substance would dramatically undermine the comprehensive 9 statutory scheme enacted by Congress; result in the Court substituting its judgment in place of the 10 statutorily assigned roles of the Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Drug 11 Enforcement Administration in determining whether marijuana has a medical value; and would 12 conflict with the unanimous view of the courts of appeals that the question whether marijuana 13 should be reclassified must be presented first to the Administrator of the DEA in the context of a

16
17 <sup>8</sup> Four state courts have reached this very conclusion upon analyzing nearly identical 18 provisions of their respective state codes. The leading case is State v. Tate, 102 N.J. 64, 505 19 A.2d 941 (1986), in which the New Jersey Supreme Court held that several provisions of the New 20 Jersey Code “compel the conclusion that [the defendant] is precluded from arguing the defense 21 that he seeks to assert.” 102 N.J. at 70, 505 A.2d at 944. In particular, the court pointed to 22 N.J.S.A. 24:21-5(a), where the legislature had classified marijuana as a Schedule I controlled 23 dangerous substance. Noting that this denomination reflected the legislature’s determination that 24 marijuana had “no accepted medical use in treatment” and lacked “accepted safety for use in 25 treatment under medical supervision,” the Tate court concluded that “[t]he possibility of medical 26 use of marijuana was thus specifically contemplated and specifically rejected.” Id. Accord State 27 v. Cramer, 174 Ariz. 522, 524, 851 P.2d 147, 149 (1992); State v. Hanson, 468 N.W.2d 77, 78-
79 (Minn. Ct. App. 1991); Kauffman v. State, 620 So.2d 90, 92 (Ala. Crim. App. 1992). But see Jenks v. State, 582 So.2d 676 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App.), review denied, 589 So.2d 292 (Fla. 1991).

28 <sup>9</sup> See H.R. 2618, 104th Cong., 1st Sess. (1995); H.R. 2232, 99th Cong., 1st Sess. (1985); H.R. 2282, 98th Cong., 1st Sess. (1983); H.R. 4498, 97th Cong., 1st Sess. (1981). A similar bill is currently pending in the House of Representatives. See H.R. 1782, 105th Cong., 1st Sess.
(1997).

1 rescheduling petition under 21 U.S.C. § 811(a).<sup>10</sup> The Court should reject this entreaty. As the 2 Sixth Circuit has held, a section 811 petition, "and not the judiciary, is the appropriate means by 3 which defendant should challenge Congress's classification of marijuana as a Schedule I drug."
4 Greene, 892 F.2d at 456.

5 3. The Defense Of Medical Necessity Was Never Intended To Allow Ongoing 6 Maintenance Of A Building For The Purpose Of Distributing Marijuana

7 Any assertion of the medical necessity defense by the non-compliant defendants also fails 8 because they cannot meet the standard established by the Supreme Court in Bailey. In that case, in 9 which a prison escapee had raised the defenses of duress and necessity in attempting to justify his 10 escape, the Court held that:

11 [I]n order to be entitled to an instruction on duress or necessity as a defense to the crime 12 charged, an escapee must first offer evidence justifying his continued absence from custody 13 as well as his initial departure and that an indispensable element of such an offer is 14 testimony of a bona fide effort to surrender or return to custody as soon as the claimed 15 duress or necessity has lost its coercive force.

16 444 U.S. at 412-13 (emphasis supplied) (internal footnote omitted). The Court determined that 17 such a requirement was necessary because the crime of escape from federal custody "is a 18 continuing offense and that an escapee can be held liable for failure to return to custody as well as 19 for his initial departure." Id. at 413. In then applying this standard, the Court held that the district 20 court had properly refused to give a necessity instruction to the jury because the evidence was "not 21 even close" that the defendants had "either surrendered or offered to surrender at their earliest 22 possible opportunity." Id. at 415.

23 Similarly here, each of the non-compliant defendants has been charged with a continuing 24 offense under the Controlled Substances Act; namely, violation of section 856(a)(1), which makes

25 <sup>10</sup> See, e.g., Burton, 894 F.2d at 192; United States v. Greene, 892 F.2d 453, 455-45 (6th Cir.
26 1989); United States v. Fry, 787 F.2d 903, 905 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 861 (1986); 27 United States v. Wables, 731 F.2d 440, 450 (7th Cir. 1984); United States v. Fogarty, 692 F.2d 28 542, 548 & n.4 (8th Cir. 1982); United States v. Middleton, 690 F.2d 820, 823 (11th Cir. 1982), cert. denied, 460 U.S. 1051 (1983); United States v. Kiffer, 477 F.2d 349, 356-57 (2d Cir. 1972), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 831 (1973).

1 it unlawful to "knowingly open or maintain any place for the purpose of manufacturing, 2 distributing, or using any controlled substance." 21 U.S.C. § 856(a)(1) (emphasis supplied).

3 Under Bailey, these defendants therefore must demonstrate that they have made a bona fide effort 4 to comply with section 856(a)(1) "as soon as the claimed duress or necessity has lost its coercive 5 force." 444 U.S. at 413.

6 The non-compliant defendants fail to meet this requirement. These are not cases involving 7 the maintenance of the three defendant cannabis dispensaries for a limited period of time to avert 8 an imminent harm. Rather, the non-compliant defendants are maintaining these cannabis 9 dispensaries on an ongoing basis so that they can continue to distribute marijuana (including 10 making sales to new or future customers), under the theory that all such sales will avert "imminent" 11 harms. Indeed, the non-compliant defendants, apparently, have failed to make any effort 12 whatsoever, let alone a bona fide effort as Bailey requires, to comply with section 856(a)(1). This 13 is precisely the type of ongoing conduct which the Supreme Court in Bailey stated would not 14 justify a jury instruction on necessity. See also Mem. Op. & Order at 20 ("[T]he defense of 15 necessity has never been allowed to exempt a defendant from the criminal laws on a blanket 16 basis.").

17 There are sound reasons for keeping any necessity defense narrowly circumscribed, and 18 these reasons have special force in the "medical marijuana" context.

19 If the [medical necessity] defense prevails it serves not only to exculpate defendant 20 of unlawfully using marijuana, but also as an invitation to him and to others to commit a 21 wide range of possessory infractions without hindrance in the future. The amnesty granted 22 is not only for possessory infractions immediately incidental to use, but for possession at all other 23 times as well. This follows because the need for therapeutic administration cannot be 24 forecast and defendant would have to have it available at all times for use when the need 25 arises. Furthermore, it would be left to defendant's unsupervised judgment to decide when, 26 under what circumstances and in what dosages it should be used. As the trial judge himself 27 recognized, the substance may not be prescribed for use and it would therefore be 28 impossible for defendant to obtain professional guidance when actually medicating.

* * * *

[T]he defense of necessity * * * should not be available where the alleged necessity is regularly recurrent and the violation evidences a calculated intention to disregard the 1 statutory prohibition. If there is to be a change in the legal status of his drug it should be 2 made by the legislature and not by the courts.

3 State v. Tate, 198 N.J. Super. 285, 288-89, 486 A.2d 1281, 1283-84 (1984) (Antell, P.J.A.D., 4 dissenting), rev'd, 102 N.J. 64, 505 A.2d 941 (1986). This Court should adopt this persuasive 5 reasoning. The very existence and continuing maintenance of the three defendant cannabis 6 dispensaries, in violation of section 856(a)(1), utterly ignores Bailey's requirement of imminent 7 harm and immediate abatement.

8 4. The Non-Compliant Defendants Have Not Availed Themselves Of Legal, Reasonable Alternatives

9 The defense of medical necessity also fails in this context because the non-compliant 10 defendants have failed to undertake any of several reasonable, legal alternatives to violating the 11 Preliminary Injunction Orders and the Controlled Substances Act. See Bailey, 444 U.S. at 410 12 (under any theory of necessity, "one principle remains constant: if there was a reasonable, legal 13 alternative to violating the law, 'a chance both to refuse to do the criminal act and also to avoid the 14 threatened harm,' the defenses will fail."). If the non-compliant defendants disagreed with this 15 Court's Preliminary Injunction Orders, they had the right, of course, to appeal these rulings. See 16 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a)(1). Alternatively, if these defendants believed that extenuating circumstances 17 would justify the distribution of marijuana in a particular instance, they could have moved to 18 modify the Preliminary Injunction Orders accordingly. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b).<sup>11</sup> And if these 19 defendants believed an emergency was present, they could have sought expedited relief from the 20 Court under the Local Rules. See Local Rule 7-10 (allowing for expedited motions); Local Rule 21 7-11 (allowing for ex parte motions).

22 The non-compliant defendants, however, made to effort to satisfy their obligations to take 23 "all the reasonable steps within [one's] power to insure compliance with the orders."
24 Sekaquaptewa, 544 F.2d at 406. To the contrary, they are simply continuing to distribute

26 <sup>11</sup> The United States does not concede, of course, that any such modification of the 27 Preliminary Injunction Orders would be allowed under the Controlled Substances Act.

1 marijuana in blatant defiance of the Preliminary Injunction Orders. Under these circumstances, the 2 defense of medical necessity is unavailable to them. See, e.g., Bailey, 444 U.S. at 410. As the 3 Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts aptly stated in Brogan, "[t]he defendant's avenue of 4 relief is to challenge or seek to modify the court order, not to violate it." 415 Mass. at 176, 612 5 N.E.2d at 660.

6 This conclusion is strongly supported by the Supreme Court's decision in McComb. There, 7 the Court rejected the argument that civil contempt would not lie for violation of a general 8 injunction on the ground that the specific conduct in question had not been enjoined. In pertinent 9 part, the Court noted that, if the non-compliant party believed it could not comply with the 10 injunction, it could take an appeal or, "if there were extenuating circumstances or if the decree was 11 too burdensome in operation, there was a method of relief apart from an appeal. Respondents 12 could have petitioned the District Court for a modification, clarification or construction of the 13 order." 336 U.S. at 192. But the Court condemned the practice of simply violating an injunction 14 without taking any of these available steps, stating that such practices "would give tremendous 15 impetus to the program of experimentation with disobedience of the law * * * * " Id.

16 Similarly here, to allow the non-compliant defendants to violate the Preliminary Injunction 17 Orders when they have sought no relief from this Court would undermine the rule of law, to say 18 nothing of the authority of this Court.

19 5. Even When Allowed, Medical Necessity Has Only Been Found to be a Defense to a 20 Charge of Possession, Not Distribution

21 Finally, even if the defense of medical necessity were allowed for controlled substances in 22 Schedule I, the only person who might have standing to raise a defense of medical necessity would 23 be an individual customer seeking to obtain and use marijuana for allegedly medical purposes. But 24 even if the Court were to conclude otherwise, any defense of medical necessity by the non-25 compliant defendants fails because they are engaged in the distribution, not merely the possession,

1 of marijuana.<sup>12</sup> Even those courts which have allowed for the possibility of a medical necessity 2 defense for marijuana have done so only in cases involving possession. See, e.g., State v. Diana, 3 24 Wash. App. 908, 916, 604 P.2d 1312, 1316 (1979) (“[W]e emphasize that medical necessity, as 4 a defense to possession, exists only under very limited circumstances not present in the routine
5 case involving controlled substances.”). The government is aware of no case in which the defense 6 of medical necessity has been allowed for a charge of distribution.

7 And for good reason. A defense of medical necessity in the context of distribution would 8 drive a gaping hole in the Controlled Substances Act, allowing any defendant charged with 9 cultivating or distributing marijuana to argue that he or she was compelled to engage in these 10 activities for the benefit of third parties in medical need. As the New Jersey Supreme Court 11 recognized in Tate, “it is inconceivable that the legislature intended to sanction this activity by 12 conferring a blessing on the use of the illicit drug.” 102 N.J. at 73, 505 A.2d at 945.<sup>13</sup>

13 C. The United States Is Entitled To Summary Judgment

14 Accordingly, because there are no material issues of fact in dispute, and because the non-15 compliant defendants' anticipated defense of medical necessity fails as a matter of law, the United 16 States is entitled to summary judgment on its claim that these defendants are in civil contempt of 17 the May 19, 1998, Preliminary Injunction Orders. Indeed, to hold otherwise in these 18 circumstances, where the non-compliant defendants are openly proclaiming their defiance of the 19 Preliminary Injunction Orders, would be to allow them to continue to blatantly violate these 20 decrees, to say nothing of the Controlled Substances Act, for weeks or months.

21 IV. RELIEF REQUESTED

23 <sup>12</sup> Indeed, by their own admissions, the non-compliant defendants are distributing marijuana to 24 hundreds, if not thousands of individuals. See, e.g., Exhibit 3 to Quinlivan Dec. (OCBC Website 25 stating that: “Currently, we are providing medical cannabis and other services to over 1,300 26 members.”).

27 <sup>13</sup> In these circumstances, any evidence offered by the non-compliant defendants regarding the 28 medical conditions of the customers of their dispensaries would therefore also be irrelevant to a determination of civil contempt.

1 Federal courts have wide latitude in determining an appropriate remedy for civil contempt.
2 "A primary aspect of [the court's inherent] discretion is the ability to fashion an appropriate 3 sanction for conduct which abuses the judicial process." Chambers v. NASCO, Inc., 501 U.S. 32, 4 44 (1991). Stated differently, "[t]he measure of the court's power in civil contempt proceedings is 5 determined by the requirements of full remedial relief," McComb, 336 U.S. at 193, and a court 6 "can take whatever action is necessary to remedy the contempt." Lovell, 1995 WL 761269, *3 7 (emphasis supplied). See also 11A Wright Miller & Kane § 2960, at 372-73 ("A federal court's 8 discretion includes the power to frame a sanction to fit the violation.").

9 Remedies for civil contempt often include incarceration, civil fines, and/or the payment of 10 attorney's fees, court costs, and discovery costs to an injured party. Lovell, 1995 WL 761269, *3.
11 Each of these remedies is imposed, either individually or collectively, to coerce the non-compliant 12 party to comply with the court's orders or to compensate the complainant for losses sustained.
13 See, e.g., Mine Workers, 330 U.S. at 303-04. As the Supreme Court stated in Gompers v. Buck's 14 Stove & Range Co., 221 U.S. 418 (1911), a civil contemnor "holds the keys of his prison in his 15 own pocket." Id. at 442 (internal quotation omitted)).

16 In these cases, stringent coercive remedies are in order. The non-compliant defendants 17 have not engaged in an isolated, particularized violation of the Preliminary Injunction Orders, but 18 rather have engaged in repeated and continuing violations of these decrees. Indeed, these 19 defendants are continuing to maintain the premises of their respective cannabis dispensaries for the 20 purposes of distributing marijuana, including to new and future customers, in the apparent 21 anticipation that all such sales will constitute alleged medical necessities. Thus, even assuming 22 these defendants had standing to assert such a defense, "the defense of necessity has never been 23 allowed to exempt a defendant from the criminal laws on a blanket basis." Mem. Op. & Order at 24 20.

25 Moreover, the non-compliant defendants' ongoing distribution of marijuana also are 26 independent violations of the Controlled Substances Act, see 21 U.S.C. §§ 841(a)(1); 846;

1 856(a)(1), which, by definition, constitutes irreparable injury to the United States. See Mem. Op.
2 & Order at 15-16, 26 (citing Miller v. California Pacific Medical Center, 19 F.3d 449, 459 (9th Cir.
3 1994) (en banc); United States v. Nutri-Cology, Inc., 982 F.2d 394, 398 (9th Cir. 1992); and 4 United States v. Odessa Union Warehouse Co-op, 833 F.2d 172, 175 (9th Cir. 1987)). The 5 United States therefore has moved ex parte, in an accompanying motion, to modify the Preliminary 6 Injunction Orders to authorize the United States Marshal to enforce these decrees by entering the 7 premises of the non-compliant cannabis dispensaries, evicting any and all tenants, inventorying the 8 premises, and padlocking the doors, until such time as the non-compliant defendants can "satisfy 9 [the Court] that [they are] no longer in violation of the injunctive order and that [they] would in 10 good faith thereafter comply with the terms of the order." Lance v. Plummer, 353 F.2d 585, 592 11 (5th Cir. 1965), cert. denied, 384 U.S. 929 (1966).

12 This proposed modification, at a minimum, will compel compliance with the Preliminary 13 Injunction Orders' requirement that the non-compliant defendants cease maintaining their 14 respective cannabis dispensaries for the distribution and cultivation of marijuana. The Court also 15 may institute civil fines to coerce the non-compliant defendants into complying with the 16 Preliminary Injunction Orders. Anything short of this relief "would give tremendous impetus to the 17 program of experimentation with disobedience of the law" that is being undertaken by the non-18 compliant defendants, in total disregard of the rule of law. See McComb, 336 U.S. at 192.

19 CONCLUSION

20 For the reasons set forth above, the Court should enter an order to show cause why the 21 non-compliant defendants should not be held in civil contempt of the May 19, 1998, Preliminary 22 Injunction Orders, and hold these defendants in civil contempt as a matter of law.

Oakland Cooperative to Openly Dispense Medical Marijuana For First Time Since Preliminary Injunction - U.S. Attorney to be Notified

HIV, Multiple Sclerosis and Other Seriously Ill Patients to Receive Pot at 11:00 a.m., Thursday May 21, Oakland Buyers Cannabis Cooperative, 1755 Broadway, Oakland

11:00 a.m. Press Conference with:

- Jeff Jones, Director, Oakland Cannabis Buyers Cooperative
- Gerald Uelman, Professor of Law, former Dean, Santa Clara University School of Law
- David Sanders, HIV and chronic pain patient, 43
- Yvonne Westbrook, Multiple Sclerosis patient, 45
- Ken Estes, Quadriplegic patient, 40
- Ima Carter, Congenital Scoliosis - Diverticulosis patient, 55

Oakland, CA -- Just hours after Federal Judge Charles Breyer signs into law a preliminary injunction against six California medical marijuana clubs, Jeff Jones, Director of the Oakland Cannabis Buyers Cooperative announced that he will openly dispense medical marijuana to four seriously ill patients at 11:00 a.m. on Thursday May 21. U.S. Attorney Michael Yamaguchi will be notified in advance of the cooperative's actions, Jones said.

"For these four patients, and others like them, medical marijuana is a medical necessity," said Jones. "To deny them access would be unjust and inhumane."

Violation of the preliminary injunction could initiate Contempt of Court proceedings against the Oakland Cooperative. A Contempt case, during which a medical necessity argument would likely be made by attorneys for the cooperative, would be heard by a jury who would have to reach a unanimous verdict.

"I'd trust a jury of Californians before federal bureaucrats," said Jones. "All the evidence shows that marijuana has medicinal qualities and should be re-scheduled. Voters in two states have already endorsed medical marijuana, and others look set to follow. Yet the federal government refuses to consider the facts and instead is hell-bent upon enforcing outdated marijuana laws."

Ken Estes, 40, a Quadriplegic patient who uses medical marijuana from the OCBC to relieve chronic pain and control muscle spasms, says he fears for his safety should the club be closed. "I feel that my only alternative would be to go out on the street to find the medicine that helps me," he said.

To: ralphkat@hotmail.com
Subject: Update of the Consortium meeting in Oakland 6-27-98
Date: Tue, 30 Jun 1998 00:15:40 PDT

From the Information Center in Hayward
Ralph Sherrow

Update of the Consortium Meeting June 27 1998

Defense Fund: The Oakland CBC needs help financing the legal defense fund, recommendations are that the clubs attach a surcharge on each transaction & give it to the defense fund. Second that the growers knock off $100.00 per pound to be fed to the defense fund.

Federal Lawsuit: The defense denied all allegations & has filed 19 affirmative defenses. The government has not responded. The three remaining CBCs are still open. Ukiah, Marin Alliance & Oakland.

Passed the hat for the defense fund.

Fremont Cannabis Coop joined a class action suit against the government to reschedule marijuana.

Bill Simpage needs volunteers without assets to sue Lungren. In case they lose they don't have assets to lose. I don't know how to contact him, but call around & you'll find him.

July 7 1998: City Council meeting to vote on the limits patients can possess. The meeting is at the Oakland City Hall & starts at 7pm. It will go about 1 1/2 hours. If you come be sure to wear clean clothes. no tie dies.

There will be a meeting at the San Francisco Medical Society located at 1409 Sutter Street @ Franklin. The name of the meeting is Common Sense Drug Policy. July 16 1998 5 to 7pm. For more info & to reserve your seats call 415 921-4987.

Ed Rosenthal: According to an article in HERBALGRAM the FDA has been promulgating the use of herbs. (Marijuana is an herb). The publisher is american botanical council.

In the news: Richard "HEMP" Davis (sold pot at the super bowl in Arizona with marijuana tax stamps) was given probation.

The Los Angeles chapter of Americans for Medical Rights, headed by David Ries, has asked to be put on the email list of the info center.

Marvin Chavez has been finally freed on bail. They still owe the bondsman $6,000.00 plus they borrowed $3,000.00 from the bank. They need donations to help pay off this debt. For more info or to donate call Bill Britt 562-421-9027 or Jack Shachter 714-537-4880.

San Jose City Council Meeting update: June 23 1998 1pm. Dr. Dennis Augustine thanked the city attorneys office for setting up a meeting with the heads of city government in San Jose. Then Jesse Garcia showed up at the last minute & asked to be at that meeting, sat down, got up & told the Council that he was against the ordinance. Outside, Dr. Augustine explained to Jesse what the change to the ordinance was & Jesse said, ok I like that. Jesse & Peter had threatened to show up at that meeting & the Consortium meeting on the 27th in Oakland & disrupt the meetings. Jesse says they don't want any clubs to open up in San Jose because it will not look good for Peter. He did not show at the Consortium meeting Saturday.

The Info center may be getting funded by the Mens Wearhouse in August.

Mike Barnhart from East Bay medical Cannabis was stopped in Danville, California last week. Two ounces of Medicine was confiscated. The Police said that there ain't no prop 215 in Danville. I recommended him to Rob Raich & Bill Panzer.

Todd McCormick who was arrested for growing 4,116 plants in his BelAire home, talked me into emailing him my list of Providers & Associates & asked to be put on the info centers email list. The Providers list went thru & immediately all other email was returned. I called & asked him why, but he just said he would call me when to send more email. I haven't heard a word from him since & that's been a couple weeks ago. I've left messages but haven't got any return calls. I guess he was only interested in the Providers list of addresses, email & phone numbers. I don't like what he's done. If anybody talks to him ask him, for me, what the F___?

Southern California Update: Sunday 6-28-98 I called Dr. Dalton's office at noon to speak on the speaker phone with their Consortium group. We exchanged info. Marvin Chavez, Bill Britt & Jack Shachter were all there. They've been working on implementing a new program whereas the patient members pay monthly dues of $100.00 & all their medicine is given to them for free, at the rate of 1 ounce per week, maximum. I filled them in on Senator Vasconcellos's bill to make dispensaries immune to federal prosecution. They got excited about that. I pointed out that they should have Lawyer (s) at their meetings & referred James Silva, Which some of them knew already & liked. I will be calling back each last Sunday of every month to share & exchange info & I will pass it on to you.

Gene Weeks is in a wheel chair now, due to degrading spinal problems.

The next meeting of the Consortium in Oakland will be held July 25 1998 1 pm. See you there Ralph

Federal shutdown

Pot clinic could close its doors to sick and dying

BY BILL MEAGHER AND PETER SEIDMAN

One day in the not too distant future, chances are good that federal marshals will show up in Fairfax and padlock the doors of the Marin Alliance, the county's principal distributor of medical marijuana. As a matter of fact, founder Lynette Shaw is counting on it.

The feds already stopped by very quietly on May 25 with a preliminary order to shut the bare-bones office, says Shaw. "Just one marshal came, and he was very cool. He was in shirt sleeves, no badge showing, and he was here for maybe 30 seconds. Very polite."

Because Shaw refused to pack up the office and close the doors, the Alliance is now in contempt of court.

The Alliance, along with five other similar operations across the state, was ordered to close after U.S. District Court Judge Charles Breyer ruled on a suit brought by the federal government. The feds argued that the medical marijuana operations in California violate federal drug laws. The court agreed.

The suit also alleged that the Fairfax operation specifically violated provisions in California's Prop 215, the state law that legalized the distribution of marijuana for legitimate medical reasons. The suit alleged that Marin Alliance sold pot to undercover agents who had no medical reason for using the marijuana.

Shaw says she intends to stay open, in part to force the court to slap her with a contempt-of-court charge that would lead to a jury trial. "Give me a jury, please give me a jury," Shaw says, as a steady rain pounds on the roof of her office. "We have our patients lining up waiting to testify. We have people who are dying and need their medicine. Show me a jury who will look at our patients and not understand the idea of medical marijuana being a necessity for these people."

Shaw isn't just the executive director of the alliance; she also is one of its 160 active patients. Clinically depressed as well as a victim of myriad allergies, Shaw cannot take conventional medications because they only aggravate her conditions. She says marijuana has been the only medication that has allowed her to participate in a normal life. "I was suicidal before I found a doctor who said, 'How come you are on all these medicines that make you sick? Let's try something else.'"

By defying the court order to shut down, Shaw is risking a mandatory federal sentence if the government decides to prosecute her under criminal statute and is successful. The lawsuit originally filed by the feds was a civil action, but because she has remained open, they still have the option of filing criminal narcotics charges against Shaw. She already has a felony marijuana conviction on her record, stemming from an East Bay marijuana possession arrest in 1990. If she is arrested on marijuana possession charges again and found guilty, she would face a prison sentence of between 10 and 20 years.

"Obviously I hope they stay with the civil charges and give us a jury trial, but, yeah, I'm taking a personal chance by staying open," Shaw says. "But I don't really have a choice; these people need their medicine and I won't be the one to tell people dying of AIDS and cancer that they have to suffer."

Back in January, U.S. Attorney Michael Yamaguchi filed the federal civil suit that asked the court to shut down a total of six clubs in California. On May 15, Judge Breyer ruled that while Prop 215 is a laudable idea, the proposition that voters passed overwhelmingly in November 1996 is in violation of federal law. The judge also ruled that the medical marijuana clinics are violating federal

No hotel here, thanks

Hilton's planned 200-room hotel on the east side of Corte Madera was slammed around during a crowded meeting of the planning commission. Residents said the buildings of three and four stories are too bulky and would wreck the Mt. Tam views of neighbors. There were also complaints about parking and traffic. Corte Madera hopes to upgrade the stretch of San Clemente Drive which runs south from The Village.

$24 million is missing

The $216 billion transportation and pork bill passed by Congress included $8.8 million toward widening the Novato Narrows on Highway 101. However, for months the sum aimed at the Narrows was $33 million. Congresswoman Lynn Woolsey of Petaluma says Congressman Frank Riggs of Windsor let the money shrink to $8.8 million at the last minute. Riggs said he couldn't help it, but concedes that because he's a lame duck, his fellow Republicans might have felt it was OK to shrink that slice of the pie. The Narrows are out of Riggs's district, and anyway, he's moving to Virginia.

Prudent or uptight?

Santa Rosa High School officials announced they will search all graduates at commencement ceremonies for illegal beach balls, confetti, silly string, Frisbees and glow sticks. Contraband will be confiscated and it's even possible that guilty parties will be banned from the ceremony. Backers of the move say Santa Rosa High has grown a reputation for increasingly rowdy graduations. Others say that beach balls and the like are just good-natured fun.

Horse lovers skittish

The Golden Gate Recreation Area wants to phase out its three stables and build a spiffy new equestrian center in Tennessee Valley. The three targeted stables are Presidio Stables at Fort Cronkhite, Miwok Stables in Tennessee Valley and Golden Gate Dairy Stables at Muir Beach. Park officials say the horses at Muir Beach are contaminating the lagoon. Some horse lovers deny this is the case and want all three stables kept in business.

New trial in Italy

Prosecutors are trying a second time to convict two Italian gang members in the shooting death of 7-year-old Nicholas Green of Bodega Bay during a family vacation. The two were not convicted the first time, but new evidence has surfaced and in Italy there can be a second trial in an appeals court. Green's family galvanized the nation by donating Nicholas's organs to those needing transplants, until then a rare occurrence in Italy.

The Mill Valley Public Library will be closed from June 15 until Labor Day to accommodate the final phase of its expansion ... Delivery of a high-speed ferry for the Larkspur-San Francisco run has been delayed a second time, until October.

drug laws by continuing to dispense marijuana.

Shaw is quick to point out that state Attorney General Dan Lungren has encouraged the show-down with the federal authorities over the dispensation of Prop 215. "He is supposed to enforce the laws of the state, not just the ones he agrees with," she says. "He has encouraged the federal government to get involved and has played a key role in calling for raids in San Francisco."

Mill Valley criminal attorney Kim Kruglick, who frequently does legal battle with the federal government, says the legal problem facing the Alliance and the other marijuana clinics is pretty clear. "In a case where federal and state law conflict, state law can be more restrictive in terms of protecting citizens but not less restrictive," he says. "In this case, the federal law is more restrictive and says it is illegal to grow, possess or sell marijuana. The state can't simply say, 'No it isn't, and get away with it.'"

Steve Mayer, an attorney with the San Francisco law firm of Howard, Rice, Nemerovski, Canady, Falk and Rabkin, concurs with the assessment offered by Kruglick. "The primary problem facing Prop 215 is that federal law trumps state law," says Mayer, who is an expert in initiative law. "The initiative process is not a great way set public policy in general. It has become too costly, and instead of being a way to avoid special interest groups, the process has been taken over by special interest groups." According to many experts, it also has become the too-frequent victim of anti-reforms writing laws that later are overturned. Regardless of the flaws of Prop 215, the town of Fairfax has supported the Alliance and its mission. The town issued a use permit allowing the organization to open its office, and police Chief Jim Anderson walked a fine line in allowing the organization to remain open. The Fairfax Police Department kept an eye on the Alliance to ensure it complied with the proposition, but otherwise it kept hands off, even while local authorities were fully aware that the state attorney general and the feds were interested in quashing the new law.

"We have followed the charge of the [town] council, and upheld the [state] law," Anderson says, clearly uncomfortable with the situation. "I don't think I would say we [the police] have been supportive, but the Alliance has been very cooperative in working with us."

Now that Shaw is expecting the feds to drop by any day for more than just a social call, the county has announced that starting in July, it will begin issuing cards that will identify eligible medical marijuana users. Although the move is somewhat pro forma, it nevertheless puts the county clearly on the side of the medical marijuana clinics. Theoretically, the county cards would prove the legitimacy of patients' need for medical marijuana. But with the clinics closed down, where would they obtain their medication?

"We have a Plan B lined up that will allow us to continue to serve our patients," Shaw says, "but we will have to operate underground and maybe go back to dealing with the gangsters and the hustlers."

Unless a bill that was introduced in Congress in June 1997 can successfully make it through a gauntlet of political hazards and become law, Congresswoman Lynn Woolsey (D-6th District) is one of the strongest supporters of the bill, H.R. 1782, which would prevent federal law from banning medical marijuana in states that allow it.

The bill currently is bottled up in a health and environment subcommittee, where, according to Woolsey staff member Tom Reed, it is growing whiskers without garnering much support. "It's a good bill that addresses what needs to happen," says Reed, "but you have to keep in mind that it would have to get through a place where Newt Gingrich is trying to make drug use a primary issue. Realistically, it is a long shot."

When and if the feds slam the doors on the Alliance, patients in Marin will have only two choices: go underground or seek help from Marin RX, a very quiet Point Reyes medical marijuana cooperative run by Dance McKay. "We have a hundred people on our books, but we have only 20 active patients," she says. "All of our people participate in either growing, cleaning, packaging or delivering our product, and we don't sell it. By being part of the cooperative and paying the overhead, our patients are entitled to a share."

Because Marin RX is not an over-the-counter storefront operation, the feds have paid no attention to it, at least not yet. "We want to remain quiet and low profile," McKay says.

The troubles that have dogged the Alliance have made a significant impact on McKay. "Because the feds went in undercover there, I have been much more careful in terms of screening our potential patients," she says. "I know everyone we work with now." She will have to keep her organization relatively small in order to maintain that tight rein on security. "If the Alliance ends up closed," she says, "patients in Marin will have a real problem."

Shaw vows to stay open as long as possible. "We have moved all the patients' files already, and we are still open seven days a week," she says, sounding a bit weary of the fight. "We survived underground before, and we will continue to get medicine to those who need it. It is just a shame that the government has chosen to make victims of people who are either very sick or dying."

"They've needed to correct this for some time, and they know they've needed to do it." He refers to numerous deficiencies in the town's housing element, a planning document required under California law to ensure that land-use decisions are made in accordance with an area's affordable housing needs. Indeed, Corte Madera's most recent housing element, adopted in 1989, was so off target that state officials refused to certify it in 1990. With no valid document on file, Marcantonio calls for a residential building moratorium until changes are made.

For the period from 1990 to 1995, he explains, the Association of Bay Area Governments (ABAG) determined that Corte Madera's share of the regional need for new housing included 140 low- and very-low-income units. According to Legal Aid and Marin Family Action, not a single unit of very-low-income housing has been added since the discredited element's adoption in 1989.

Although often used generically, the term 'affordable housing' encompasses options available to three distinct income groups: Very-low-income families are defined as those making 50 percent or less of the county median. Low-income families earn from 50 to 80 percent of the same figure. At the top, moderate-income families bring in 80 to 150 percent. As of the 1990 census, Marin's annual median was a hair under $50,000. Today it hovers around $53,000 for a family of three.

Housing Issues
Programs take Corte Madera to task over development

BY MIKE THOMAS

Unlike the shadowy authority figures in Joni Mitchell's famous lyric, Corte Madera town planners don't aim to pave Paradise (Shopping Center) and put up a parking lot.

But that's not welcome news to frustrated advocates and seekers of low-cost, workforce housing, in particular, employees who commute to hourly wage jobs at the town's cash-cow retail centers. Why? Because after years of false starts and official resistance to affordable projects at other sites, recently approved plans to rejuvenate the run-down Paradise location fail to address the town's longstanding low-income shelter needs. This time, a legal challenge looms.

The proposed development, approved nearly in its entirety by the planning commission on May 13, would involve construction of a 124-unit assisted living center for seniors and 12,000 square feet of retail space. Area residents, many of whom have long clamored for improvements on the property, solidly support the plan.

Many others do not. Citing Corte Madera's failure to comply with state law that requires local governments to plan ahead for reaching low- and very-low-income housing goals, Legal Aid of Marin is prepared to block the Paradise overhaul in court. The group represents Marin Family Action, a nonprofit focused on affordable housing issues.

"The town is way out of compliance," says Richard Marcantonio of Legal Aid.

It's not that opportunities didn't present themselves. Two attempts by the Ecumenical Association for Housing (EAIH), a San Rafael-based nonprofit builder of affordable homes, have been thwarted in the last decade. An approximately 60-home project in the late 1980s stalled when the town enacted a development moratorium.

In 1993, EAIH's bid to construct 50 or more units on the "Habitat" site near the Village shopping plaza was similarly derailed. (At the time, town policymakers cited a survey of homeowners that indicated little interest in the project.) To this day, the site remains an overflow parking lot, despite a town resolution expressly requiring that 65 housing units be built there.

Along with civic opposition, Legal Aid's Marcantonio continues, a major stumbling block is the incomplete housing element. Among other shortcomings, it neglects to adequately identify potential development sites. Notably absent from the site inventory rejected by the state in 1990 was the Paradise Shopping Center location. In addition, however meticulously derived, the ABAG requirements issued every five years carry no clout.

"The numbers are out there, but there's no enforcement. There's no teeth," admits Dawn Weisz, Marin Family Action's project coordinator. But where housing elements are out of compliance, notes an Oakland-based affordable housing advocate, people have the power.

"It's only toothless because there's no state-sponsored enforcement," says Mike Rawson of the California Affordable Housing Law Project. "The attorney general has never taken any steps other than sending letters. It falls to community groups and citizens to file a suit." Rawson

Ladd also is dreading the breakup of her team, which has learned to work well together.

She knows that the inmates who remain will be the most dangerous of the lot and that they will understand how understaffed the jail will be.

"It's certainly going to be more hazardous," she said.

So July 31 will be a joyous day for inmates who had expected to spend this summer behind bars, but it will seem like a day of reckoning for many others.

In a last-minute pitch for swing votes, California gubernatorial candidates Gray Davis and Jane Harman said they would support city officials seeking to provide medical marijuana in San Francisco, according to a report in the S.F Examiner, May 30.

"I'm not in favor of legalizing marijuana," explained the ever-cautious Davis, "On the other hand, I don't believe politics should interfere with medical judgments."

Rep. Harman said she would back San Francisco officials "taking whatever steps they think they need to take," although she wasn't sure that it was the right answer for the entire state.

SENATE HEARINGS UPDATE: Jeff Jones says the Feds say we're illegal.

Bob Ames says the California Medical Association, (CMA) & the Police Officers Association, (FOA) want to reschedule Marijuana to schedule 2. The Feds were invited but they didn't show up.

Dale Geiringer says at least they've stopped talking bad about MMJ. Now, when people talk about MMJ they talk favourable. This is good.

MARIN UPDATE: Lynnette Shaw says she's laid off all but 1 other person to help her run the operation. On June 2nd the town council will meet to re-affirm their support for the Marin Alliance & MMJ & declare their opposition to the Feds & their actions. Other supporters include The Police Chief & the District Attorney.

OAKLAND UPDATE: Jeff Jones says Oakland Police & the Co-op have agreed on the amount of MMJ a patient can be in possession of. The limits are 48 plants in the budding stage & 48 plants in the vegetative stage. This overlaps on a 3 month basis because it takes 3 months to grow & harvest. & because of the understanding that some plants could be male & some could die. Also the limits of dry MMJ a patient can possess is 1 1/2 lbs. (24 ounces). Also if a garden is discovered by the police you will have 48 hours to come forward with the documentation needed to show Patient Status before they turn it in to the proper channel. Once that is done, the case proceeds as a criminal case. This seems to be very fair.

Misc. John Odell says we ought to have a slogan saying "WHAT'S SO BAD ABOUT FEELING GOOD"

DENNIS PERON UPDATE: Since Dennis has been closed the other clubs are getting lots of extra Patients. Dennis is trying to get back into the building so he can continue running his Governor Campaign. CCU is in there too.

MISC: There is an 800 number to call to verify a doctors are real. They can also verify his or her address.

SAN JOSE UPDATE: Dr. Dennis Augustine says a co-operative structure like the one in Arcata might work in San Jose, notwithstanding the transportation issue. He has been working on this for quite some time now. Ralph Sherrow has volunteered to head this venture. He has the right qualifications for this job, first, he is a patient, second, he is a grower & third, he has run several of his own businesses along with his wife, who he has been married to for 37 years, since january of 1972. Ralph has the backing of the clubs & has an advisory board & lawyers in place to guide his movements in this endeavour. To quote Ralph, "It has never been about money". It is about providing MMJ to patients who can't, for one reason or another, grow their own MMJ in a "WHITE MARKET" atmosphere.

Next Meeting is scheduled for the last saturday in June. 6-27- 1998 @ 1pm. See you there.

Unless you happen to be out of the area on vacation (such as gone camping or to a festival or seminar for a three-day-weekend), in the hospital for treatment, or otherwise out of touch. This is not totally fair, but it's fairly reasonable. The message is, don't leave your plants alone! The message to law enforcement is if you want to bust someone you know is legal, wait till they are gone to a seminar for three days, THEN bust the joint just as they are hitting the highway out of town.

Lake County struggles with pot grant too - Ukiah pot club eviction withdrawn

By JENNIFER POOLE/The Daily Journal

In Lake County, the Board of Supervisors - like the Mendocino board - voted 3-2 this year to accept the state marijuana eradication grant.

But the Lake County board members, like a majority of the Mendocino County board, do have misgivings about the program.

A May 26 letter from the Lake County board to each one of the county's state and federal representatives says the decision to OK the grant was made "with considerable doubt as to the effectiveness of the program."

The letter continues: "It is the feeling of this board that the most serious problem in our county is the manufacture, sale and use of hard drugs (methamphetamine, etc.), and that the funds currently dedicated to the Marijuana Eradication Program would be much better spent in attempting to control these hard drugs."

The letter concludes by asking Lake County's elected representatives to "seriously consider making those changes to current laws and regulations which would allow Lake County to use this grant money in a manner which would produce far more beneficial results, a decision that would be made with the advice and discussion with all units of our law enforcement system."

All five board members voted to approve this letter.

"This is the first time the board has written a letter like this," said Supervisor Carl Larson, who voted against accepting the grant.

"Probably it will have very little effect, but we feel somewhat good about expressing our opinion," he said.

"With no change from above, we might as well start making noises from down here."

Larson said that, unlike in Mendocino County, "nobody shows up to any extent," when the board considers the marijuana grant.

Nonetheless, he said, his colleagues are afraid of being tagged as "pro-drug" during their next election campaigns.

"It bugs me," he said. "It's one of those things where if you could have a secret ballot, we'd get a 5-0 to reject it."

"I'm too old to run again," he laughed. "I'm going to be 70 at the end of this term."

In a more serious tone of voice, Larson said: "Not too many people approve of the result of drugs, but I totally disapprove of wasting money the way we do."

"We have one deputy at least who's making better than $70,000 a year (with overtime due to marijuana eradication).

"I don't care where the money comes from - it's still all our taxpayer money, even if it comes from the state."

"We need to change our laws," he continued, "take the profit out of it as much as possible, and recognize that you can't ban it, and do the best you can."

"And at least tax the heck out of a lot of it, get some money for rehabilitation."

Larson said he also had problems with the general philosophy of funding local government by grants.

"It's just another instance where the state operates our county business by grant, with our property taxes that they took away from us."

"They've told us exactly what to do with it, how to spend it, and if you need money for anything else, tough luck - regardless of the $4.4 billion surplus."

Larson attended the private meeting on marijuana policy issues hosted by Mendocino County Supervisors Richard Shoemaker and Charles Peterson in Ukiah at the end of April.

Mendocino supervisors to talk pot again

In Mendocino County, the matter of the state's letter requesting changes in the Board of Supervisors' resolution accompanying the eradication grant application is formally on the agenda next week.

That resolution says eradication of marijuana "is not a reasonable and attainable goal, and that to attempt this is not a wise use of public funds."

Supervisor Shoemaker said he took advantage of a previously scheduled trip to Sacramento to meet with the Office of Criminal Justice Planning's James Roth, who wrote the letter.

But, he said, nothing conclusive came out of the meeting.

"I still think things are up in the air," he said. "No decisions have been made."

The supervisors are scheduled to discuss their response to the letter - which has been requested by June 4 - at 2:15 p.m. on Tuesday.

Cannabis Buyers Club may stay in place

The Ukiah Cannabis Buyers Club officially got served a preliminary injunction order Wednesday, Executive Director Marvin Lehrman said.

Two U.S. marshals served the order, which enjoins the club from "engaging in the distribution of marijuana" and "conspiring to violate the Controlled Substances Act with respect to the manufacture and distribution of marijuana," among other things.

But, Lehrman said, the club is still open, and has no plans to close.

"We're continuing and fulfilling our mission," he said. "I don't know what's next."

If it stays open, the club won't have to move, according to Lehrman. He said that he had worked things out with landlord Joe Schwede, who has decided not to evict his tenants, after all.

Board begins Prop. 215 process - But backs away from resolution proposed by Supervisor Peterson

By JENNIFER POOLE/The Daily Journal

Eighteen months after Proposition 215 was passed by California voters, the Mendocino County Board of Supervisors has directed its Public Health Department to begin to "identify strategies" to address medical marijuana issues.

Tuesday's board resolution, passed 4-1, asks Public Health to "work cooperatively" with District Attorney Susan Massini and with County Counsel Peter Klein to convene a medical marijuana meeting.

The resolution, brought to the board by 5th District Supervisor Charles Peterson, was changed significantly during the course of Tuesday's discussion.

It originally stated that the board wanted to "facilitate implementation" of an effective medical marijuana distribution program through the Department of Public Health, working with a number of other local agencies and interested parties.

Public Health Administrator Carol Mordhorst told the board she wasn't opposed to holding such a meeting, but she wasn't sure it was "the best use of the county's resources."

"I don't think I'd be doing my job if I didn't tell you I don't think it's our highest priority," she said.

Mordhorst also said she didn't think that having Public Health actually operate any distribution system should be "a foregone conclusion."

"We're not a dispensary," she said. "We're not a pharmacy."

"Public Health is not in the acute care/urgent care business."

Mordhorst also told the board her department would need extra funding to put together such a meeting.

The supervisors' reactions to Peterson's proposal were mixed.

First District Supervisor Michael Delbar read from the court decision stating that cannabis buyers' clubs didn't qualify as primary caregivers under Prop. 215.

That proposition didn't decriminalize marijuana, Delbar said, and it's up to the state Legislature or the people of California - by ballot initiative - to do so, not the county.

"I would not favor putting our county's limited resources into this effort that's changing daily," he said. "I'm not saying I won't support it on some later date, after things shake out on the federal or state front."

Delbar was the lone vote against the resolution.

Third District Supervisor John Pinches, a well-known advocate of legalizing marijuana, said he didn't want Public Health to be in the business of dispensing marijuana.

"To just go out there and start a distribution program and wait 'til the feds come in and bust us - I don't want no part of that," he said.

Pinches also said that since he was against spending taxpayers' money on the war on drugs, "starting another bureaucracy to sell it would be inconsistent with my position."

Pinches suggested several times that the counties needed "a united voice" to get the state and federal government to pay attention.

"Unless we start partnering with other counties that have similar issues, we're not going to get anywhere," he said.

Fourth District Supervisor Patti Campbell said she was worried about the board sending "mixed messages" about drug abuse by spending so much time talking about marijuana.

But, she said, she was willing to support setting up a meeting for an open-ended discussion.

Second District Supervisor Richard Shoemaker said he'd been looking into asking the California State Association of Counties to sponsor a workshop on medical marijuana at its annual meeting in November.

His colleagues supported that idea, and directed him to move forward with it.

After the vote, board members also directed Mordhorst to come back within 60 days with a report on how the meeting process was going.

Supervisor Peterson then withdrew a proposed letter on medical marijuana to Attorney General Dan Lungren, saying he felt the meetings were a "better route."

The board did vote 3-2, Delbar and Campbell opposed, to send a letter to the state Legislature, asking for oversight hearings on marijuana eradication programs in California.

After the meeting, Ukiah Cannabis Buyers Club Director Marvin Lehrman said that although he saluted the supervisors' efforts to set up the meetings, he was "kind of disappointed" with Tuesday's decision.

"They're still talking months and years away," he said. "I have to be concerned with today and tomorrow."

Lehrman said he suspects the federal government will soon be moving to close the three cannabis buyers' clubs left open in California, here in Ukiah, in Marin County and in Oakland.

"The Task Force has contacted the county's Building and Planning Department to get our floor plans," he said, as they have in Marin County.

That is standard procedure, Lehrman said, before a raid.

"They keep talking about 'implementing the proposition,'" he said, "but it's not happening. At least it's not happening for the immediate future.

"And that's why we're here, to supply medical marijuana to those people who need it now and who may not be alive by the time the boards of supervisors and the others get it together."

DECLARATION OF

19 I, PETER OTT, do hereby declare and say as follows: 20

21 1. I am a Special Agent with the San Francisco Field Division of the Drug Enforcement 22 Administration ("DEA"), United States Department of Justice, and have been so employed since 23 September 1990.

24 2. As is set forth in my declarations of January 9, 1998, filed in connection with the 25 government's motions for preliminary injunctions in these related actions, I have received training 26 from the DEA and Federal Bureau of Investigation in specialized narcotic investigative matters 27 including, but not limited to, the following: drug interdiction and detection, money laundering

1 techniques and schemes, drug identification, and asset identification and forfeiture. This training 2 included specialized training in the preparation of narcotic and document search warrants for 3 residences and businesses. I also have participated in numerous investigations specifically 4 involving both the indoor and outdoor manufacture or cultivation of marijuana. In the course of 5 these investigations, I have personally participated in the eradication of over 10,000 indoor and 6 25,000 outdoor marijuana plants, and the arrest of more than 300 individuals for violations of 7 federal and state law regarding controlled substances. I also have received specialized training 8 regarding the techniques used to grow marijuana. Based on my experience and training, I am 9 familiar with the smell and appearance of growing and processed marijuana, as well as the smell 10 of marijuana when it is burning. I also have participated in the obtaining and/or execution of 11 over 100 federal and California state warrants to search a particular place or premises for 12 controlled substances and/or related paraphernalia, indicia, and other evidence of the commission 13 of state and/or federal felony violations of law.

14 3. On May 21, 1998, acting in an undercover capacity, I approached and entered a 15 building located at 1755 Broadway Avenue, in Oakland, California, which houses the Oakland 16 Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative ("OCBC"). After showing an undercover driver's license to a 17 security guard on the first floor of this building, I was allowed to proceed to the third floor, where 18 the OCBC is located.

19 4. Upon entering the OCBC, I observed approximately six television crew teams taking 20 statements from OCBC club members, and videotaping the distribution of marijuana to four 21 persons by an individual who identified himself as Jeffrey Jones, the director of the OCBC. In 22 addition, I observed an additional ten over-the-counter sales of marijuana to individuals by other 23 OCBC personnel.

24 5. On May 26, 1998, at approximately 7:00 p.m., I walked through an open field which 25 was adjacent and to the north of 40A Pallini Lane, in Ukiah, California, the home of the Ukiah 26 Cannabis Buyer's Club ("UCBC"). I observed at least 10 marijuana plants in this field, which 27

1 were approximately 6 inches in height and were being cultivated in black plastic bags filled with 2 soil.

3 I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

12 place or premises for controlled substances and/or related paraphernalia, indicia, and other 13 evidence of the commission of state and/or federal felony violations of law.

14         3. On May 27, 1998, at approximately 9:30 a.m., I established surveillance of the Marin 15 Alliance for Medical Marijuana ("Marin Alliance"), located at 6 Old School Street Plaza, Suite 16 210, in Fairfax, California. During the next two and one-half hours, I observed 14 individuals 17 enter the Marin Alliance. These persons varied in age from the late teens/early twenties to the 18 elderly. I further observed that, upon exiting the Marin Alliance, several of these individuals 19 would roll what appeared to be marijuana cigarettes, and smoke the cigarettes directly outside the 20 club.

21         4. On May 27, 1998, at approximately 3:10 p.m., I placed a recorded telephone call to the 22 Ukiah Cannabis Buyer's Club ("UCBC"), at (707) 462-0691, to confirm that the UCBC was 23 continuing to engage in the distribution of marijuana. The person who answered the phone 24 identified himself as "Marvin," and stated that, although the UCBC was in receipt of an 25 injunction, the club was still open for business. "Marvin" also informed me of the business hours 26 of the UCBC.

1 5. Thereafter, at approximately 3:12 p.m., I placed a recorded telephone call to the 2 Oakland Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative ("OCBC"), at (510) 843-5346, to confirm that the OCBC
3 was continuing to engage in the distribution of marijuana. The person who answered the phone 4 informed me that the OCBC was still open for business, and told me the hours when the club was 5 open.

6 6. Thereafter, at approximately 3:15 p.m., I placed a telephone call to the Marin Alliance
7 at (415) 256-9328, to confirm that the Marin Alliance was still distributing marijuana. Noone 8 answered the phone. However, a pre-recorded message stated that the Marin Alliance was still 9 open for business under the "medical necessity defense." The message also indicated the club's 10 business hours.

11 I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

12         3. On June 16, 1997, acting in an undercover capacity, I placed a recorded telephone call 13 to the Oakland Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative ("OCBC"), at (510) 843-5346, to confirm that the 14 club was still distributing marijuana. An unidentified male answered the telephone and informed 15 me that the OCBC was open for business and was accepting new members. The unidentified 16 male also informed me about the requirements of becoming an OCBC members, the hours that the 17 club was open (11 a.m. - 1 p.m., and 5 p.m. - 7 p.m.) on that date, and the location of the OCBC, 18 at 1755 Broadway Avenue, in Oakland.

19         4. Thereafter, on the same day, I placed a recorded telephone call to the Marin Alliance 20 for Medical Marijuana ("Marin Alliance"), at (415) 256-9328, to confirm that the Marin Alliance 21 was still distributing marijuana. An unidentified female answered the telephone by stating, 22 "Marin Alliance," and told me what the requirements of becoming a new member of the Marin 23 Alliance were, and that the club was open that day until "five."

24         5. I then placed a recorded telephone call to the Ukiah Cannabis Buyer's Club ("UCBC"), 25 at (707) 462-0691, to confirm that the club was still distributing marijuana. An unidentified male 26 answered the telephone and stated, "UCBC." I asked whether the UCBC was still open for 27

1 business, to which the unidentified male asked me if I was a member. I responded that I was not a 2 member, to which the unidentified male responded, "We are officially closed." I then asked if the 3 UCBC was accepting new members, to which the unidentified male responded, "Why don't you 4 come in and show me what you have, medical papers?" I took this to mean that this individual 5 was "officially" stating that the UCBC was closed to new members over the telephone, but was 6 suggesting that I could become a member if I went to the UCBC and presented medical 7 documentation.

INTRODUCTION

2 Defendants Oakland Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative and Jeffrey Jones submit this 3 memorandum in support of their motion to dismiss the complaint. The motion is based on two 4 grounds. First, effective August 12, 1998, defendants Oakland Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative and 5 Jeffrey Jones have been "duly authorized officer[s]" of the City of Oakland "lawfully engaged in the 6 enforcement of" two laws relating to controlled substances — California Health and Safety Code 7 section 11362.5 and Oakland Ordinance No. 12076 C.M.S. ("Ordinance No. 12076") These 8 defendants are immune from liability pursuant to Section 885(d) of Title 21 of the United States 9 Code. Therefore, this Court must dismiss the complaint against these defendants.

10 Second, defendants move to dismiss under the Ninth Amendment to the United States 11 Constitution. The Ninth Amendment, individually and together with the Due Process Clause of the 12 Fifth Amendment, protects from encroachment by the federal government the fundamental "liberty" 13 and "life" interests of the defendant cooperatives and their patient-members. The State of California 14 and the City of Oakland have determined that the right to receive cannabis for medical treatment is 15 fundamental. Because the federal Controlled Substances Act, as applied to the particular facts here, 16 infringes upon this fundamental right, and because the government cannot establish a compelling 17 interest justifying this infringement, this Court should determine that the Controlled Substances Act 18 is unconstitutional as applied to the Oakland defendants and dismiss the government's complaint 19 against them.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

21 In November 1996, 56% of California voters who participated in the state-wide election voted 22 in support of Proposition 215, the "Medical Use of Marijuana" initiative, known also as the 23 "Compassionate Use Act of 1996" (the "Act"). This Act made it legal under California law for 24 seriously ill patients and their primary caregivers to possess and cultivate marijuana for use by the 25 seriously ill patient if the patient's physician recommends such treatment. Specifically, the Act 26 exempts a seriously ill patient and the patient's primary caregiver from prosecution under California 27 Health and Safety Code § 11357, relating to the possession of marijuana, and § 11358, relating to the 28 cultivation of marijuana. See California Health & Safety Code § 11362.5(d). The Act expressly

1 states that “[t]he people of the State of California hereby find and declare that . . . seriously ill
2 Californians have the right to obtain and use marijuana for medical purposes. . . .” California 3 Health & Safety Code § 11362.5(b).

4 The City of Oakland recently expressed its desire to further the purposes of the 5 Compassionate Use Act of 1996 and to protect the life and liberty interests of its citizens who need 6 medical cannabis. On July 28, 1998, the City Council of the City of Oakland, California 7 unanimously passed Ordinance No. 12076 — An Ordinance of the City of Oakland Adding 8 Chapter 8.42 to the Oakland Municipal Code Pertaining to Medical Cannabis. (A copy of this 9 Ordinance is attached as Exhibit A to Defendants’ Request For Judicial Notice, filed herewith.) The 10 City Council’s express purpose in passing the Ordinance was to ensure that seriously ill persons and 11 their primary caregivers who obtain and use marijuana for medical purposes, on a doctor’s 12 recommendation, are not criminally prosecuted.

13 [S]eriously ill Californians have the right to obtain and use marijuana 14 for medical purposes where that medical use is deemed appropriate and 15 has been recommended by a physician who has determined that the 16 person’s health would benefit from the use of marijuana in the 17 treatment of cancer, anorexia, AIDS, chronic pain, spasticity, 18 glaucoma, arthritis, migraine, or any other illness for which marijuana 19 provides relief. . . . [P]atients and their primary caregivers who obtain 20 and use marijuana for medical purposes upon the recommendation of a 21 physician [should not be] subject to criminal prosecution or sanction.

22 Ordinance No. 12076, Section 1.A. (quotations and citations omitted).

23 The Oakland Ordinance provides “immunity to medical cannabis provider associations 24 pursuant to Section 885(d) of Title 21 of the United States Code . . . .” Ordinance No. 12076, 25 Section 1.D. Section 3 of the Oakland Ordinance provides that the City Manager shall designate one 26 or more entities as medical cannabis provider associations as follows:

27 The City of Oakland hereby establishes a Medical Cannabis 28 Distribution Program. Such program shall be administered by medical cannabis provider associations. The City Manager shall designate one or more entities as a medical cannabis provider association. Any designated medical cannabis provider association shall enforce the provisions of this Chapter, including enforcing its purpose of insuring that seriously ill Californians have the right to obtain and use marijuana for medical purposes. For the purposes of this Chapter only, a medical cannabis provider association, and its agents, employees and directors while acting within the scope of their duties on behalf of the association, shall be deemed officers of the City of Oakland.

1 Ordinance No. 12076, Section 3.

2 On August 12, 1998, the Oakland City Manager designated the Oakland Cannabis Buyers'
3 Cooperative as a medical cannabis provider association pursuant to Section 3 of Ordinance 4 No. 12076. (A copy of this designation is attached as Exhibit B to Defendants' Request For Judicial 5 Notice, filed herewith.)

6 ARGUMENT

7 I. THIS COURT MUST DISMISS THE GOVERNMENT'S COMPLAINT 8 AGAINST THE OAKLAND CANNABIS BUYERS' COOPERATIVE AND 9 JEFFREY JONES BECAUSE THESE DEFENDANTS ARE STATUTORILY 10 IMMUNE FROM CIVIL OR CRIMINAL LIABILITY.

11 The Oakland City Council recently passed a City Ordinance authorizing the Oakland City 12 Manager to designate a medical cannabis provider association and its agents, employees, and 13 directors as city officers duly authorized to enforce the City Ordinance and California Health and 14 Safety Code Section 11362.5. On August 12, 1998, the Oakland City Manager so designated the 15 Oakland Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative and Jeffrey Jones. As a result, these defendants are immune 16 from liability pursuant to 21 U.S.C. § 885(d). Their cases should therefore be dismissed. See, e.g., 17 Martinez v. Newport Beach City, 125 F.3d 777, 780 (9th Cir. 1997) (affirming dismissal for failure to 18 state a claim as a result of defendant's immunity); Garcia v. Williams, 704 F. Supp. 984, 1004, 1005 19 (N.D. Cal. 1988) (motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim lies where a complaint is brought 20 against defendants who have immunity from liability).

21 The Federal Controlled Substances Act provides immunity to federal, state, and local officials 22 from any civil or criminal liability as follows:

23 no civil or criminal liability shall be imposed by virtue of this 24 subchapter upon any . . . duly authorized officer of any State, territory, 25 political subdivision thereof, the District of Columbia, or any 26 possession of the United States, who shall be lawfully engaged in the 27 enforcement of any law or municipal ordinance relating to controlled 28 substances.

29 21 U.S.C. § 885(d). On July 28, 1998, the Oakland City Council enacted an Ordinance to further the 30 purposes of the Compassionate Use Act of 1996, codified at California Health and Safety Code

1 section 11362.5, and to provide immunity to designated medical cannabis providers pursuant to 2 21 U.S.C. § 885(d).<sup>1</sup> The Ordinance states that “[t]he City of Oakland supports the use of medical 3 cannabis in accordance with the Compassionate Use Act of 1996.” Ordinance No. 12076, 4 Section 1.A. It further states that its purpose “is to recognize and protect the rights of qualified 5 patients, their caregivers, physicians, and medical cannabis provider associations, and to ensure 6 access to safe and affordable medical cannabis. . . .” Ordinance No. 12076, Section 1.C. Finally, the 7 Ordinance specifies that “[a]n additional purpose of this Chapter is to provide immunity to medical 8 cannabis provider associations pursuant to Section 885(d) of Title 21 of the United States Code . . . .”
9 Ordinance No. 12076, Section 1.D.

10 In order to further the purposes of the Compassionate Use Act, Section 3 of the Oakland 11 Ordinance authorizes the City Manager to designate one or more entities as medical cannabis 12 provider associations. Section 3 further provides that a designated medical cannabis provider 13 association and its agents, employees and directors “shall be deemed officers of the City of Oakland” 14 and “shall enforce the provisions of this Chapter, including enforcing its purpose of insuring that 15 seriously ill Californians have the right to obtain and use marijuana for medical purposes.”
16 Ordinance No. 12076, Section 3. Thus, an entity designated by the Oakland City Manager as a 17 medical cannabis provider association is by definition “lawfully engaged in the enforcement of [a] 18 law or municipal ordinance relating to controlled substances,” 21 U.S.C. § 885(d)—indeed enforcing 19 both section 11362.5 of the California Health & Safety Code and Oakland Ordinance No. 12076.<sup>2</sup> 20 This same association and its director are therefore immune from liability pursuant to 21 U.S.C.

23 <sup>1</sup> A Court deciding a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim may consider the complaint 24 and any matter that is properly the subject of judicial notice. MGIC Indem. Corp. v. Weisman, 25 803 F.2d 500, 504 (9th Cir. 1986) (court may take judicial notice of official records and reports without converting Rule 12(b)(6) motion into Rule 56 motion for summary judgment); Mack v. South Bay Beer Distributors, Inc., 798 F.2d 1279, 1282 (9th Cir. 1986) (same).

26 <sup>2</sup> “Enforcement” has been defined as “[t]he act of putting something such as a law into 27 effect.” Black’s Law Dictionary 528 (6th ed. 1990).

1 On August 12, 1998, the Oakland City Manager designated the Oakland Cannabis Buyers'
2 Cooperative as a medical cannabis provider association pursuant to Section 3 of Ordinance
3 No. 12076. Accordingly, the Oakland Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative and its "agents, employees, 4 and directors" have been duly authorized officers of the City of Oakland "lawfully engaged in the 5 enforcement of" section 11362.5 of the California Health & Safety Code and Oakland Ordinance 6 No. 12076 — both "law[s] . . . relating to controlled substances[.]" pursuant to 21 U.S.C. § 885(d).
7 Thus, defendants Jeffrey Jones and the Oakland Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative are immune from 8 civil or criminal liability. 21 U.S.C. § 885(d).

9 II. THE CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES ACT IS UNCONSTITUTIONAL UNDER 10 THE FIFTH AND NINTH AMENDMENTS AS APPLIED TO THE OAKLAND
11 DEFENDANTS.

12 Both the people of the State of California, through its legislative initiative process resulting in 13 the enactment of Health and Safety Code Section 11362.5, and the people of the City of Oakland, 14 through unanimous vote by its City Council resulting in the passage of City Ordinance No. 12076, 15 have unequivocally identified a patient's right to medical cannabis as a "fundamental right[] and 16 liberty interest[ ]." Memorandum and Order dated May 13, 1998 ("Mem. Op. & Order") at 21
17 (citing Washington v. Glucksberg, __ U.S. __, 117 S.Ct. 2258, 2267 (1997)). See California Health 18 & Safety Code § 11362.5; Oakland Ordinance No. 12076, Section 1.A. As such, the Fifth and Ninth 19 Amendments to the United States Constitution protect the right to medical cannabis for seriously ill 20 patients from infringement by the federal government.

21 The Fifth Amendment provides that "[n]o person shall . . . be deprived of life, liberty, or 22 property, without due process of law. . . ." U.S. Const., Amdt. 5. All patient-members of the 23 defendant cooperatives have a fundamental right to medical cannabis based upon the "liberty" 24 interest specified in the Due Process Clause. Moreover, those patients whose lives depend on access 25 to medical cannabis have the additional fundamental right based upon their right to "life" guaranteed 26 by the same Clause. The Ninth Amendment guarantees these same rights to the patients.

28

1           A.     Patient-Members Have A Fundamental Liberty Interest In Medical
2                   Cannabis.

3           As discussed more fully in Defendants' Memorandum In Opposition To Plaintiff's Motion To 4 Show Cause, And For Summary Judgment, the government's application of the Controlled 5 Substances Act to the distribution of medical cannabis violates the substantive due process rights of 6 defendants' patient-members to be free from unnecessary pain, to receive palliative treatment for a 7 painful medical condition, to care for oneself and to preserve one's own life. As this Court 8 recognized, defendants are entitled to present evidence of this defense in a contempt trial. Mem. Op.
9 & Order at 23.

10           The United States Supreme Court has established that individuals are protected under the Due 11 Process clauses of the Fourteenth and Fifth Amendments from state or federal infringement upon
13 Glucksberg, ___ U.S. ___, 117 S. Ct. 2258 (1997).

14                   The Due Process Clause guarantees more than fair process, and the 15 "liberty" it protects includes more than the absence of physical 16 restraint . . . . The Clause also provides heightened protection against government interference with certain rights and liberty interests.

17 Glucksberg at 2267 (citations omitted). In applying substantive due process analysis, the Chief 18 Justice in Glucksberg explained that where a fundamental liberty interest is involved, government 19 action must be "narrowly tailored to serve a compelling [government] interest." Id. at 2268.

20           In Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Pennsylvania v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833 (1992), the 21 Supreme Court recognized a woman's fundamental liberty interest to control her own body. The 22 Court's description of this interest applies no less forcefully in the context of a patient's right to be 23 free from pain and discomfort, and to maintain the ability to eat food or to retain vital medication 24 without vomiting.

25                   We conclude, however, that the urgent claims of the woman to retain 26 the ultimate control over her destiny and her body, claims implicit in 27 the meaning of liberty, require us to [derive a specific rule from a 28 general standard in the Constitution.] Liberty must not be extinguished for want of a line that is clear. And it falls to us to give some real substance to the woman's liberty to determine whether to carry her pregnancy to full term.

1 Id. at 869. It is just this patient-member’s right to “retain the ultimate control over her destiny and 2 her body” that is “implicit in the meaning of liberty,” and that therefore must be protected from 3 infringement by the federal government absent a compelling state interest. Id.

4 The Ninth Amendment operates independently of the Due Process Clause to protect rights 5 retained by the people from arbitrary encroachment by the federal government. It provides that “the 6 enumeration in the Constitution, of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others 7 retained by the people.” U.S. Const., Amdt. 9. While “[i]t is tempting, as a means of curbing the 8 discretion of federal judges, to suppose that liberty encompasses no more than those rights already 9 guaranteed to the individual against federal interference by the express provisions of the first eight 10 Amendments to the Constitution . . . [,] [the Supreme] Court has never accepted that view.” Casey, 11 505 U.S. at 847. See also Griswold v. Connecticut, 381 U.S. 479, 488-96 (1965) (Goldberg, J., 12 concurring). The Supreme Court continued in Casey:

13 It is a promise of the Constitution that there is a realm of 14 personal liberty which the government may not enter. . . .

15 Neither the Bill of Rights nor the specific practices of States at 16 the time of the adoption of the Fourteenth Amendment marks the outer 17 limits of the substantive sphere of liberty which the Fourteenth 18 Amendment protects. See U.S. Const., Amdt. 9. As the second Justice 19 Harlan recognized: “[T]he full scope of the liberty guaranteed by the 20 Due Process Clause cannot be found in or limited by the precise terms 21 of the specific guarantees elsewhere provided in the Constitution. This 22 ‘liberty’ is not a series of isolated points pricked out in terms of the 23 taking of property; the freedom of speech, press, and religion; the right 24 to keep and bear arms; the freedom from unreasonable searches and 25 seizures; and so on. It is a rational continuum which, broadly speaking, 26 includes a freedom from all substantial arbitrary impositions and 27 purposeless restraints, . . . and which also recognizes, what a reasonable 28 and sensitive judgment must, that certain interests require particularly careful scrutiny of the state needs asserted to justify their abridgment.”

23 Id. at 847-48 (citing Poe v. Ullman, 367 U.S. 497, 543 (1961) (Harlan, J., dissenting from dismissal 24 on jurisdictional grounds). For the reasons set forth above and in Defendants’ Memorandum In 25 Opposition to Plaintiff’s Motion To Show Cause, the “federal interference” with patients’ proven 26 rights to palliative treatment, to be free from pain, and to life-sustaining nutrients and medication

1 cannot survive such scrutiny.<sup>3</sup> Because the government cannot establish the necessary compelling 2 governmental interest in prohibiting the use of medical cannabis, the Court should declare the 3 Controlled Substances Act unconstitutional as applied to the Oakland defendants and dismiss the 4 complaint.

5 B. Many Patient-Members Have A Fundamental Life Interest In Medical 6 Cannabis.

7 The Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment, together with the Ninth Amendment, 8 additionally protects the “life” of many of the patient-members of the defendant medical cannabis 9 cooperatives, in addition to their “liberty,” to the extent their very lives depend on availability of 10 medical cannabis. “It cannot be disputed that the Due Process Clause protects an interest in life . . . .”
11 Cruzan v. Director, Missouri Dep’t of Health, 497 U.S. 261, 281 (1990). The Controlled Substances 12 Act therefore is unconstitutional as applied to those patient-members of the Oakland Cooperative 13 who, but for their access to medical cannabis, would die. Because defendants serve a vital function 14 in preserving their patient-members’ lives, this Court should find the Act unconstitutional as applied 15 to the defendants and dismiss the complaint.

26 the right of privacy”); Doe v. Bolton, 410 U.S. 179, 213 (1973) (Douglas, J., concurring) (“[T]he

INTRODUCTION

By its motion, the government asks this Court to take the extraordinary step of summarily determining, without evidence, a hearing, or a jury, that defendants are guilty of violating the Court's Preliminary Injunction Order. The Constitution requires more, however. Before the government can obtain a show cause hearing, much less a finding of contempt, it must present a prima facie case, based at least upon clear and convincing evidence, of acts which constitute contempt. The government has failed to do so, and this Court should decline to issue an order to show cause.

The Court need not reach the issues raised by the government's motions, however. On July 28, 1998, the Oakland City Council passed an ordinance pertaining to medical cannabis. This ordinance provides immunity to defendants Jones and the Oakland Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative from federal civil or criminal liability. The case against these defendants is moot and should be dismissed.

If, however, the Court deems it appropriate to set this matter for a show cause hearing, the defendants are entitled to a jury trial. The Court already has stated, and the government does not dispute, that a contempt trial should be by jury. Seeking to avoid that jury, the government now claims that there are no disputed issues of material fact concerning defendants' alleged contempt. Given this Court's explicit recognition that the "specific facts and circumstances" surrounding the alleged distribution of medical cannabis to patient-members must be examined, a summary determination of contempt cannot be made. Defendants are entitled to present their case to a jury. For this reason, the government's summary judgment motion must be denied.

Defendants believe that they have taken all reasonable steps to comply with this Court's Preliminary Injunction Order. This Court specifically recognized, and defendants sincerely believe, that the alleged distribution of medical cannabis to particular patients under particular sets of circumstances is subject to several defenses. Defendants thus are entitled to a hearing where a jury

1 may determine for itself whether defendants have disobeyed this Court's Preliminary Injunction 2 Order.<sup>1</sup>

3 STATEMENT OF FACTS AND PROCEEDINGS

4 A. The Court's Order

5 On May 19, 1998, this Court issued a Preliminary Injunction Order ("Order"). The Order 6 enjoined defendants from engaging in the manufacture or distribution of marijuana, or the possession 7 of marijuana with the intent to manufacture and distribute marijuana, from using the premises for 8 these purposes, and from conspiring to do the same—in violation of 21 U.S.C. §§ 841(a)(1), 846, and 9 856. Order at ¶¶ 1-3.

10 This Court's Memorandum and Order explicitly contemplated a jury trial to determine the 11 validity of any subsequent allegations that the injunction had been violated. The Court stated: "[i]f 12 the Court issues an injunction, defendants have a right to a jury in any proceeding in which it is 13 alleged that they have violated the injunction." Memorandum and Order dated May 13, 1998 14 ("Mem. Op. & Order") at 24 (emphasis added).

15 This Court specifically stated that the defendants may raise, at a jury trial, several defenses to 16 any possible future allegations of contempt — including the medical necessity defense, a substantive 17 due process defense, and the joint users defense. As to medical necessity, the Court stated:

18 The Court is not ruling, however, that the defense of necessity is 19 wholly inapplicable to these lawsuits. If a preliminary or permanent 20 injunction is granted, and the federal government alleges that 21 defendants have violated the injunction, there will be specific facts and 22 circumstances before the Court from which the Court can determine if 23 the jury should be given a necessity instruction as a defense to the 24 alleged violation of the injunction. As such facts are not presently 25 before the Court, it is premature for the Court to decide whether such a 26 defense is available.

27 <sup>1</sup> For the reasons stated in this memorandum and also in their separately filed Memorandum 28 In Opposition To Plaintiff's Ex Parte Motion To Modify May 19, 1998 Preliminary Injunction Orders, defendants also request that the government's motion to modify the Preliminary Injunction be denied.

1 Id. at 21 (emphasis added). This Court further recognized that a substantive due process defense 2 might be available “in a contempt proceeding where the trier of fact is presented with a particular 3 transaction to a particular patient under a particular set of facts.” Id. at 23 (emphasis added).
4 Finally, the Court cautioned “that it is not ruling that defendants are not entitled to [a joint users] 5 defense at trial or in a contempt proceeding for violation of a preliminary or permanent injunction or 6 that defendants could not as a matter of law defeat a motion for summary judgment with evidence of 7 mere possession.” Id. at 18-19.

8 B. The City of Oakland Ordinance

9 Since this Court’s May 19, 1998 Order, the Oakland City Council has enacted an ordinance 10 which renders the government’s case against the Oakland Cannabis Buyers’ Cooperative and Jeffrey 11 Jones moot. On July 28, 1998, the City Council of the City of Oakland unanimously passed “An 12 Ordinance of the City of Oakland Adding Chapter 8.42 to the Oakland Municipal Code Pertaining to 13 Medical Cannabis” (“Ordinance”). The Ordinance was passed to “ensure that seriously ill 14 Californians have the right to obtain and use marijuana for medical purposes” and to “ensure that 15 patients and their primary caregivers who obtain and use marijuana for medical purposes . . . are not 16 subject to criminal prosecution or sanction.” Ordinance, Section 1.A. The Ordinance also provides 17 “immunity to medical cannabis provider associations pursuant to Section 885(d) of Title 21 of the 18 United States Code . . . .” Ordinance, Section 1.D.<sup>2</sup>

19 Pursuant to the Ordinance, the City of Oakland has established a Medical Cannabis 20 Distribution Program. On August 12, 1998, the City Manager designated the Oakland Cannabis 21 Buyers’ Cooperative a “medical cannabis provider association” authorized to enforce the Ordinance.
22 As such, the Oakland defendants are by definition “lawfully engaged in the enforcement of”

24 <sup>2</sup> 21 U.S.C. § 885(d) provides:

25 no civil or criminal liability shall be imposed by virtue of this 26 subchapter upon any . . . duly authorized officer of any State, . . .
27 political subdivision thereof, . . . who shall be lawfully engaged in the 28 enforcement of any law or municipal ordinance relating to controlled substances.

1 California Health & Safety Code § 11362.5 and the Ordinance, “law[s] . . . relating to controlled 2 substances[ ]”. 21 U.S.C. § 885(d). They are immune from civil and criminal liability and their 3 cases, therefore, should be dismissed.<sup>3</sup>

4 C. The Government’s Contempt Allegations

5 The government’s current motions seek a summary finding of contempt. The government has 6 failed to allege, however, the evidence of “specific facts and circumstances” and “a particular 7 transaction to a particular patient under a particular set of facts” contemplated by this Court. Instead, 8 the government has submitted a series of conclusory affidavits, completely lacking in factual support, 9 to support its request for a summary finding of contempt.<sup>4</sup> These allegations are fatally deficient and 10 cannot be relied upon to initiate contempt proceedings.

11 ARGUMENT

12 I. THIS COURT SHOULD DENY THE GOVERNMENT’S REQUEST FOR AN 13 ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE BECAUSE THE CONCLUSORY ALLEGATIONS
14 OF CONTEMPT ARE FATALLY DEFICIENT.

15 To make a prima facie showing of contempt the government “must demonstrate that the 16 alleged contemnor violated the court’s order . . . .” Go-Video, Inc. v. Motion Picture Ass’n of 17 America, 10 F.3d 693, 695 (9th Cir. 1993). In a civil contempt proceeding, this proof of contempt 18 must be by clear and convincing evidence. Id. In a criminal contempt proceeding, the proof of 19 contempt must be beyond a reasonable doubt. United States v. Powers, 629 F.2d 619, 626 n. 6 (9th 20 Cir. 1980) Regardless of whether these proceedings are viewed as civil or criminal (See Section III infra) the government has failed to meet its burden of proof.

21 The government’s moving papers fail to comply with the minimal procedural requirements 22 for contempt proceedings set forth in Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 42(b). Powers, 629 F.2d at

24 <sup>3</sup> Defendants have filed a separate motion to dismiss concerning the immunity provided by 25 the Ordinance. For the reasons stated in that motion, and incorporated by reference herein, the Court should dismiss the case as moot.

26 <sup>4</sup> Defendants have submitted concurrently herewith their objections and motion to strike the 27 affidavits supporting the government’s motions for the order to show cause and for summary judgment.

1 624. This Rule requires not only a reasonable time for the preparation of a defense, but also notice of 2 the “essential facts constituting the criminal contempt charged. . . .” Fed. R. Crim. P. 42(b). “The 3 purpose of notice is to inform the contemnor of the nature of the charge and enable the contemnor to 4 prepare a defense.” Powers, 629 F.2d at 625. Such notice is necessary in contempt proceedings 5 because “reasonable notice of a charge and an opportunity to be heard in defense before punishment 6 is imposed are basic in our system of jurisprudence.” Taylor v. Hayes, 418 U.S. 488, 498-99 (1974)
7 (emphasis added) (requiring notice of “specific charges” in contempt proceedings). This Court itself 8 noted that in any contempt proceeding in this case, the government would present “specific facts and 9 circumstances.” Mem. Op. & Order at 21.

10 The government’s contempt allegations fail to satisfy the specificity and notice requirements 11 of Rule 42(b) and this Court’s Order. The government’s only “evidence” consists of four conclusory 12 and speculative declarations. For example, the Declaration of Mark T. Quinlivan does not cite any 13 specific instance of an alleged violation of the Order. The Declaration of Peter Ott, Jr. opines without 14 evidentiary foundation that he witnessed the distribution of marijuana. Neither Special Agent 15 Nyfeler, nor Special Agent Arnold, who also submitted declarations, observed any alleged 16 distribution or sale of anything at the defendant cooperatives.

17 Because the government’s allegations are vague and conclusory, neither the Court nor the 18 defendants know who is alleged to have purchased medical cannabis and when (other than the date) 19 they are alleged to have done so. Defendants also are unable to rebut the government’s vague and 20 conclusory allegations for fear of criminal prosecution. Defendants thus cannot properly defend 21 themselves against the government’s charges. Because the government’s declarations fail to comply 22 with basic evidentiary standards, they cannot be relied upon, and do not provide a basis to issue an 23 Order to Show Cause.

25 II. DEFENDANTS ARE IN GOOD FAITH AND SUBSTANTIAL COMPLIANCE WITH THE COURT’S ORDER.

26 In this Circuit, a party should not be held in contempt if its action “appears to be based on a 27 good faith belief and reasonable interpretation of the [court’s order].” Go-Video, Inc., 10 F.3d at 695 28 (citations and quotations omitted). Moreover, “[s]ubstantial compliance with a court order . . . is

1 [also] a defense to an action for civil contempt.” General Signal Corp. v. Donallco, Inc., 787 F.2d 2 1376, 1379 (9th Cir. 1986); Go-Video, 10 F.3d at 695. Defendants believe that the Oakland 3 Ordinance also precludes a finding of contempt for the reasons stated in its separately filed Motion to 4 Dismiss, and renders the government’s case moot. If this Court finds, however, that the government 5 has met its burden of establishing that defendants are in contempt of the Order, then defendants must 6 be allowed to present detailed evidence that they are in good faith and substantial compliance with 7 the Order. They rely on at least three defenses, specifically left open by this Court, to exempt 8 themselves from liability for any acts alleged to violate 21 U.S.C. §§ 841, 846, and 856 and the 9 Order. These defenses include medical necessity, substantive due process, and the joint users 10 defenses.

12 A. Defendants Are Not In Contempt Because Any Cannabis They Distribute Is A Medical Necessity To Their Members.

13 The medical necessity defense includes the following elements: “(1) [defendants] were faced 14 with a choice of evils and chose the lesser evil; (2) [defendants] acted to prevent imminent harm; 15 (3) [defendants] reasonably anticipated a direct causal relationship between their conduct and the 16 harm to be averted; and (4) [defendants] had no legal alternatives to violating the law.” United 17 States v. Aguilar, 883 F.2d 662, 693 (9th Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1046 (1991). The 18 medical necessity defense is a specialized application of the common law defense of necessity 19 available in federal prosecutions. 1 LaFave & Scott, Substantive Criminal Law, § 5.4(c)(7), pp. 631-20 33 (1986). Thus, contrary to the government’s contention, medical necessity is available in 21 prosecutions for marijuana distribution or possession as a corollary of the common law defense of 22 necessity, and presents a factual question for the jury to determine in a particular case.

23 Defendants can establish each element of the medical necessity defense at trial. First, they are 24 faced with a choice of evils. Cannabis cooperative members suffer from debilitating and deadly 25 diseases, including cancer, AIDS, and glaucoma. See Declarations of Kenneth Estes, Yvonne 26 Westbrook, David Sanders. Cannabis provides relief in numerous respects, including as a pain 27 reliever, an anti-nauseant, and as an appetite stimulant. See e.g. Estes Declaration ¶ 7-10. For many 28 patient-members, such as those experiencing debilitating pain, undergoing chemotherapy or

1 experiencing AIDS-related conditions, medical cannabis saves their lives. See e.g. Estes Declaration, 2 Westbrook Declaration, Sanders Declaration.

3 Second, supplying cannabis to patient-members is necessary to avert severe pain, blindness, 4 or imminent and life-threatening harm. Defendants believe that without medical cannabis, these 5 members cannot survive their debilitating illnesses. See e.g. Estes Declaration, Westbrook 6 Declaration, Sanders Declaration.

7 Third, there is clearly a direct causal relationship between defendants' supplying medical 8 cannabis and the harm they seek to avert. Defendants can show that medical cannabis in fact 9 alleviates the life-threatening symptoms of cooperative members. See e.g. Estes Declaration, Sanders 10 Declaration, Westbrook Declaration.

11 Finally, defendants can show that there are no legal alternatives to the distribution of medical 12 cannabis. Specifically, defendants can show that (1) their members have no legal or safe alternative 13 to acquire medical cannabis from other sources; (2) other drugs do not work or they are not nearly as 14 effective; and (3) a rescheduling petition already has been submitted to the relevant administrative 15 agency; the Court has recognized the futility of awaiting a decision on that petition. Mem. Op. &
16 Order at 20.

17 The government argues, however, that this Court should deny the defendants the right to 18 present evidence concerning their medical necessity defense. In support of its argument, the 19 government contends that (a) the medical necessity defense cannot be raised in contempt 20 proceedings, (b) the Controlled Substances Act precludes the medical necessity defense, and (c) the 21 medical necessity defense is inapplicable to the defendants' alleged conduct.

22 None of the government's arguments establish that the defendants are precluded from 23 presenting at trial evidence of medical necessity. Moreover, because the defense requires an 24 examination of sharply contested factual issues, the validity of the medical necessity defense cannot 25 be determined in a summary proceeding and must be decided by a jury.

28

1                   1. Defendants Are Entitled To Assert The Medical Necessity Defense
2                   In These Contempt Proceedings.

3                   This Court already has recognized that the defense of medical necessity would be available in 4 any proceedings alleging a violation of the Court's order:

5                   If a preliminary or permanent injunction is granted, and the federal 6 government alleges that defendants have violated the injunction, there 7 will be specific facts and circumstances before the Court from which 8 the Court can determine if the jury should be given a necessity 9 instruction as a defense to the alleged violation of the injunction.

10                   Mem. Op. & Order at 21. The government has conveniently ignored this aspect of the Court's Order 11 and now contends that defendants cannot raise the medical necessity defense in these proceedings.
12 Gov't's Mot. at 13.

13                   None of the government's cited cases hold that the medical necessity defense is unavailable in 14 contempt proceedings. Gov't's Mot. at 13 (citing Local 28 of the Sheet Metal Workers' Intern.
15 Assoc. v. Equal Employment Opportunity Comm., 478 U.S. 421, 441 (1986)); Walker v. City of 16 Birmingham, 388 U.S. 307, 315-20 (1967); Maggio v. Zeitz, 333 U.S. 56, 69 (1948); United States v.
17 United Mine Workers, 330 U.S. 258, 303 (1947). These cases simply recognize the principle that a 18 contempt proceeding does not open for reconsideration the legal or factual basis of the order alleged 19 to have been disobeyed. Maggio, 333 U.S. at 69 citing Mine Workers; Local 28, 478 U.S. at 441 20 citing Maggio and Walker. None of these cases address the issue here, which is whether defendants 21 are in fact in contempt for violation of the Order.<sup>5</sup>

22                   The government also ignores the numerous decisions that recognize the availability of the 23 medical necessity defense in prosecutions concerning marijuana. United States v. Burton, 894 F.2d 24 188 (6th Cir. 1990), the only published federal case to consider the defense of medical necessity in 25 connection with the use of marijuana, did not question the applicability of the defense. Rather, the 26                   <sup>5</sup> The other cases cited by the government do not question the applicability of the necessity 27 defense in contempt proceedings, but rather hold that the defense had not been established.

12 marijuana and was established by defendants); and People v. Trippet, 56 Cal. App. 4th 1532, 1538, 13 review denied, 1997 Cal. LEXIS 8225 (1997) (assumed validity of medical necessity defense).

15 2. The Controlled Substances Act Does Not Preclude The Defense Of 16 Medical Necessity.

16 It is well established that common-law defenses may be raised as defenses to a statutory 17 crime. United States v. Newcomb, 6 F.3d 1129, 1134 (6th Cir. 1993) (holding necessity defense 18 available to defendant charged with violations of federal firearm possession statutes). As the 19 Newcomb court explained:

20 [United States v. Bailey, 444 U.S. 394 (1980),] teaches that Congress's 21 failure to provide specifically for a common-law defense in drafting a 22 criminal statute does not necessarily preclude a defendant charged with 23 violating that statute from relying on such a defense. This conclusion is unassailable; statutes rarely enumerate the defenses to the crimes they describe. . . .

24 Newcomb, 6 F.3d at 1134.

25 State courts also have held, consistent with Newcomb and Bailey, that the defense of medical 26 necessity in cannabis possession cases is not precluded by the fact that the state legislature may have 27 placed cannabis in a category analogous to Schedule I of section 812 of the Federal Controlled 28 Substances Act. For example, in Jenks, the court of appeal reversed a lower court decision to 1 preclude the defense of medical necessity in a case involving marijuana cultivation and possession of 2 drug paraphernalia. The Jenks court ruled that the defense should have been allowed even though the 3 Florida legislature had placed marijuana on its Schedule I, which is analogous to Schedule I of 4 section 812. The court concluded: “the defense [of medical necessity] was recognized at common 5 law and that there has been no clearly expressed legislative rejection of such defense.” Id. at 678.

6 The court continued, “It is well-established that a statute should not be construed as abrogating the 7 common law unless it speaks unequivocally, and should not be interpreted to displace common law 8 more than is necessary.” Id. at 67.<sup>6</sup>

9 This Court has recognized that, consistent with the rule permitting such defenses, defendants 10 are entitled to present at trial a common law defense to the government’s charges. The government 11 argues, however, that the provisions of the Controlled Substances Act require a departure from this 12 general rule. Nothing in the Controlled Substances Act prohibits the medical necessity defense.

13 The government’s argument confuses a determination on a petition to reschedule a controlled 14 substance pursuant to 21 U.S.C. §811 with a party’s ability to present a common law necessity 15 defense to a statutory crime. The cases relied upon by the government simply hold that a court 16 should not determine whether marijuana should be reclassified pursuant to § 811(a). See Gov’t’s 17 Mot. at 16-17 and note 10. Indeed, the case upon which the government principally relies, United 18 States v. Burton, 894 F.2d 188 (6th Cir. 1990), implicitly recognized the validity of the medical 19 necessity defense. Although the Burton court stated that “reclassification is clearly a task for the 20

21 <sup>6</sup> The government also relies upon state court cases interpreting state legislation, not the 22 federal Controlled Substances Act, to support its argument that Congress precluded common law 23 defenses to controlled substances violations. These state cases are distinguishable, however, because, 24 unlike Congress, the state legislatures had expressly considered the applicability of defenses to 25 marijuana possession or distribution. See e.g. State v. Tate, 102 N.J. 64, 71, 505 A.2d 941 (1986) 26 (medical necessity defense unavailable where defendant did not have statutorily required valid 27 prescription). See also State v. Cramer 174 Ariz. 147, 149, 851 P.2d 522, 524, 534 (Ct. App. 1992) (medical necessity defense not available to defendant where “Legislature has addressed exceptions and exemptions [to its criminal possession laws] in detail by statute... and concluded[d] that unlawful possession of marijuana does not fall within those protected categories”); Kauffman v. State, 620 So.2d 90, 92 (Ala. Crim. App. 1992) (defendant’s quadriplegia did not fall within enumerated exceptions).

1 legislature and the attorney general and not a judicial one[.]” it did not hold that Congress precluded 2 the medical necessity defense in the context of medical cannabis. Id. at 192 (emphasis added). To 3 the contrary, the Burton court held that the defense was unavailable on the facts because the 4 defendant could have enrolled himself in a government program to study the effects of marijuana on 5 glaucoma sufferers. Id. at 191. The remaining federal courts of appeals cases the government cites 6 in this context are similarly inapposite. See Gov’t’s Mot. at 16-17 and note 10.

8 3. The Defense Of Medical Necessity Applies To Distribution Of Medical Cannabis By Cannabis Cooperatives.

9 This Court’s Order implicitly recognizes that a medical necessity defense must be available to 10 entities such as the defendant cooperatives. The government asserts, however, that as a matter of law 11 the medical necessity defense is not available to the defendants because they distribute, rather than 12 possess, marijuana. This argument is senseless. Distribution is the necessary antecedent to 13 possession. If possession is legally justified as to a person for whom medical cannabis is a necessity, 14 then so too is distribution to this person. “The ‘right to obtain’ marijuana is, of course, meaningless if 15 it cannot legally be satisfied.” Lungren v. Peron, 59 Cal. App. 4th 1383, 1401 (1997) (Kline, J., 16 concurring), review denied, 1998 Cal. LEXIS 1321 (1998).

17 The necessity defense necessarily embodies the principle that otherwise unlawful conduct 18 may be justified when undertaken to prevent harm to a third party. See Aguilar, 883 F.2d at 693 19 (necessity defense applies when defendant chose lesser evil); see also United States v. Contento- 20 Pachon, 723 F.2d 691, 695 (9th Cir. 1984) (“The defense of necessity is usually invoked when the 21 defendant acted in the interest of the general welfare”); United States v. Simpson, 460 F.2d 515, 517-22 18 (9th Cir. 1972) (“[t]he theoretical basis of the justification defenses is the proposition that, in 23 many instances, society benefits when one acts to prevent another from intentionally or negligently 24 causing injury to people or property”). Thus, the act of distributing medical cannabis to prevent 25 imminent harm to a third party clearly falls within the parameters of the necessity defense.

26 The government also argues that in order to make out a medical necessity defense, under 27 United States v. Bailey, 444 U.S. 394 (1980), the defendants “must demonstrate that they have made 28 a bona fide effort to comply with section 856(a)(1) ‘as soon as the claimed duress or necessity has

1 lost its coercive force[.]” Gov’t’s Mot. at 18 (citing Bailey, 444 U.S. at 413). This argument makes 2 no sense in the context of medical necessity.

3 Bailey, a prison escapee case, is inapposite. Bailey requires that, in order to establish a 4 necessity defense, a prison escapee must introduce evidence of having made a “bona fide effort to 5 surrender or return to custody as soon as the claimed duress or necessity had lost its coercive force.”
6 Bailey, 444 U.S. at 413. Assuming arguendo that this element applies to the non-prison escapee case, 7 defendants have no trouble establishing this element of the defense. The declarations submitted 8 herewith establish that patient-members with a current medical necessity receive cannabis. See, e.g., 9 Estes Declaration, Sanders Declaration. Conditions such as cancer, HIV, glaucoma, and quadriplegia 10 do not subside readily, if ever. For most patients, these conditions never lose their “coercive force,” 11 the way a prisoner’s conditions may change. Id. And even if the medical condition were mercifully 12 to subside for one patient on a given day, even Bailey would not require the defendant cooperatives to 13 close their doors to all other patient-members who still medically require the cannabis.

15 4. There Are No Reasonably Available Alternatives To Defendants’ Distribution Of Medical Cannabis.

16 The government has posited various procedural alternatives to continuing to provide medical 17 cannabis to patients in need. The defendants have not pursued these theoretical avenues, however, 18 for the simple reason that they believe they are in compliance with this Court’s Preliminary 19 Injunction Order (as explained in the Court’s Memorandum and Opinion). While the government 20 asserts that “[t]he defendant’s avenue of relief is to challenge or seek to modify the court order, not 21 to violate it[.]” Gov’t’s Mot. at 20, the defendants herein, who do not believe they violated any Court 22 order, have had no reason to seek the relief suggested by the government.

23 Moreover, defendants are entitled to show in any contempt proceedings that there were no 24 viable alternatives to their alleged conduct. Defendants are entitled to submit evidence that for most 25 patient-members no other medicine provides the same effective relief in such a safe and reliable 26 manner. Alternative medications either do not work or they have such significant adverse side effects 27 that patients cannot use them. Moreover, no drug works as expeditiously as medical cannabis. For 28

1 some patient-members, medical cannabis saved their lives when it is doubtful any other drug would 2 have.

4 B. Defendants Are Not In Contempt Because Application Of The Controlled 5 Substances Act Violates Their Patient-Members' Substantive Due Process 6 Rights.

7 The United States Supreme Court has established that individuals are protected under the Due
8 Process clauses of the Fourteenth and Fifth Amendments from state or federal infringement upon 9 their "fundamental liberty interests." As Justice Rehnquist recently described in Washington v.
10 Glucksberg, ___ U.S. ___, 117 S. Ct. 2258 (1997):

11 The Due Process Clause guarantees more than fair process, and the 12 "liberty" it protects includes more than the absence of physical 13 restraint . . . . The Clause also provides heightened protection against 14 government interference with certain fundamental rights and liberty 15 interests.

16 Glucksberg at 2267 (citations omitted). In applying substantive due process analysis, the Chief
17 Justice in Glucksberg explained that where a fundamental liberty interest is involved, government 18 action must be "narrowly tailored to serve a compelling [government] interest." Id. at 2268.

19 The government's application of the Controlled Substances Act to the distribution of medical 20 cannabis violates the substantive due process rights of defendants' patient-members to be free from 21 unnecessary pain, to receive palliative treatment for a painful medical condition, to care for oneself 22 and to preserve one's own life. As this Court recognized, defendants are entitled to present evidence 23 of this defense in a contempt trial.<sup>7</sup>

25
26 <sup>7</sup> Defendants clearly have standing to assert the due process rights of their patient- members.
27 See Singleton v. Wulff, 428 U.S. 106, 114, 115-116, 96 S. Ct. 2868 (1976) (recognizing physician's 28 right to assert privacy rights of female patients in abortion case because of closeness of relationship and obstacles faced by women in asserting right).

1                                   1. Defendants' Patient-Members Have A Substantive Due Process
2                                   Interest In Receiving Medical Cannabis.

3           Defendants assert Constitutional protection from the federal government's interference with 4 patient-members' right legally to obtain medical cannabis, with a doctor's recommendation, for 5 treatment of painful and life-threatening medical conditions. Defendants can show that their patient-6 members have medical conditions for which a physician has recommended treatment with cannabis.
7 Without the treatment some will suffer pain, some will risk blindness, and others will die by wasting 8 away. The only barrier to this treatment is the broad federal proscription against the distribution of 9 marijuana. For three separate and independent reasons, the interests asserted by defendants are 10 fundamental rights that are protected by the Constitution.

11           First, there is no liberty more firmly established than the fundamental interest to be free from 12 physical pain imposed by the government for arbitrary and capricious reasons. The Supreme Court 13 has continuously and persistently measured and evaluated substantive due process claims in terms of 14 the physical pain imposed upon the individual by government restraints. See e.g. Furman v. Georgia, 15 408 U.S. 238 (1972) (substantive due process implicated where death penalty imposed under a 16 method inflicting "unnecessary pain"); Cruzan v. Director, MDH, 497 U.S. 261 (1990) (pain suffered 17 by patient in persistent vegetative state relevant to inquiry of fundamental interest to deprive oneself 18 of nutrition and hydration); Planned Parenthood v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833 (1992) ("anxieties," 19 "physical constraints," and "pain" of women carrying child to term basis of substantive due process 20 right to elect abortion); and Washington v. Glucksberg, ___ U.S. ___, 117 S. Ct. 2258 (1997) 21 (terminally ill patient rights to palliative treatment implicate substantive due process).

22           The concurring opinions in Glucksberg also suggest that substantive due process protects an 23 individual's right to obtain medical treatment to alleviate unnecessary pain. Justice O'Connor's 24 opinion makes clear that suffering patients are presumed to have access to any palliative medication 25 that would alleviate pain even where such medication might hasten death. "[A] patient who is 26 suffering from a terminal illness and who is experiencing great pain has no legal barriers to obtaining 27 medication, from qualified physicians." Glucksberg, at 2303 (emphasis added).
28

1 Similarly, Justice Breyer’s concurrence suggested that a “right to die with dignity” would 2 include a right to “the avoidance of unnecessary and severe physical suffering.” Glucksberg at 2311
3 (J. Breyer, concurring). “This liberty interest in bodily integrity was phrased . . . by [Justice] Cardozo 4 when he said, ‘[e]very human being of adult years and sound mind has a right to determine what shall 5 be done with his own body’ in relation to his medical needs.” Glucksberg at 2288 (Souter, J., 6 concurring).

7 Justice Stevens asserted with regard to the protected “sphere of substantive liberty”:

8 Whatever the outer limits of the concept may be, it definitely includes 9 protection for matters “central to personal dignity and autonomy.” It 10 includes, “the individual’s right to make certain unusually important 11 decisions that will affect his own, or his family’s, destiny. The Court 12 has referred to such decisions as implicating ‘basic values,’ as being 13 ‘fundamental,’ and as being dignified by history and tradition.

14 Glucksberg, at 2307 (Stevens, J., concurring) (citation omitted) (emphasis supplied).

15 Finally, Justice Stevens observed that “[a]voiding intolerable pain and the indignity of living 16 one’s final days incapacitated and in agony is certainly ‘[a]t the heart of [the] liberty . . . to define 17 one’s own concept of existence, of meaning, of the universe, and of the mystery of human life.’” 18 Glucksberg at 2307 (quoting Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Pa. v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833, 851 19 (1992)).

20 Second, defendants’ patient-members have an established fundamental interest in the right to 21 provide care for oneself. The Supreme Court has found due process interests in preserving life and 22 caring for oneself. Deshaney v. Winnebago Cty. Soc. Servs. Dept., 489 U.S. 189, 200 (1989).
23 Although this right is usually implicated where an individual is incarcerated and does not have access 24 to necessary medical treatment, the argument is equally applicable to a situation where the 25 government denies medical treatment by enacting laws proscribing such treatment:

26 In the substantive due process analysis, it is the State’s affirmative act 27 of restraining the individual’s freedom to act on his own behalf—28 through incarceration, institutionalization, or other similar restraint of personal liberty—which is the “deprivation of liberty” triggering the protections of the Due Process Clause.

Deshaney, 489 U.S. at 200 (citation omitted) (emphasis supplied).

1 The government's restraint on the distribution of cannabis prevents patient-members from 2 obtaining medical care for themselves. This restraint is particularly egregious where the treatment 3 sought is that to alleviate pain.

4 Third, patient-members have a an unquestionable and firmly rooted liberty interest in 5 preserving their lives. As the Supreme Court explained in Cruzan, supra, "[i]t cannot be disputed 6 that the Due Process Clause protects an interest in life." Cruzan, at 281. Defendants can show that 7 many patient-members would find their lives needlessly placed in jeopardy were they denied the right 8 to the medical use of cannabis. For example, many chemotherapy patients and AIDS patients are so 9 plagued with nausea and discomfort that they are unable to eat. Without basic nourishment, their 10 conditions are aggravated and they are essentially at risk of starving to death.

11 For all of these reasons, the government's actions plainly infringe upon the well-established 12 fundamental rights of defendants' patient-members. Accordingly, the government bears the heavy 13 burden of justifying these restrictions. As discussed below, the government cannot meet this burden.

14 2. The Broad Federal Proscription Against Distribution And Use Of 15 Medical Cannabis Is Not Narrowly Tailored To Meet A 16 Compelling Government Interest.

17 Where fundamental liberty interests have been demonstrated, any restraint on those interests 18 must be narrowly tailored to serve a compelling state interest. Glucksberg at 2268. The federal 19 proscription against the possession and distribution of medical cannabis is unnecessarily overbroad 20 and arbitrary where it restrains the terminally ill and others in chronic pain from obtaining an 21 essential medication to alleviate their pain and in some cases contribute to the preservation of life.
22 See Andrews v. Ballard, 498 F. Supp. 1038, 1044-1051, 1052, 1056 (S.D. Tx. 1980) (recognizing 23 constitutional right to obtain medical treatment for pain and holding that state restriction on 24 availability of acupuncture was not narrowly drawn to further compelling state interest).<sup>8</sup>

25

26 <sup>8</sup> Even if the patient-members' rights are not deemed fundamental (see Carnohan v. United 27 States, 616 F.2d 1120 (9th Cir. 1980)), the government still cannot meet its burden of justifying its 28 arbitrary restriction on this life-saving medication.

1 The government has a legitimate interest both in assuring that appropriate medicines are made 2 available, and in stemming the abuse of controlled substances. The government cannot show, 3 however, that a blanket prohibition, disregarding the medical needs of seriously ill persons, furthers 4 any legitimate interest. In the case of numerous other substances, the government has acted to 5 provide for medical use while limiting abuse. In the case of medical cannabis, however, the means 6 employed by the government abysmally fail to accomplish the government's purposes and are 7 therefore an affront to the concept of substantive due process.

9 C. Defendants Are Not In Contempt Because Their Patient-Members Are 10 Joint Users Of Medical Cannabis.

11 The government cannot obtain a summary finding of contempt or summary judgment because 12 defendants are entitled to present to a jury evidence concerning the joint users defense. This Court 13 has recognized that the joint users defense may be asserted in contempt proceedings and may defeat a 14 motion for summary judgment:

15 The Court cautions, however, that it is not ruling that defendants are 16 not entitled to such a defense at trial or in a contempt proceeding for 17 violation of a preliminary or permanent injunction, or that defendants 18 could not as a matter of law defeat a motion for summary judgment 19 with evidence of mere possession. The Court's ruling is narrow.

20 Mem. Op. & Order at 18-19.

21 The Preliminary Injunction prohibits the unlawful distribution of cannabis by the defendants, 22 not its mere possession, however unlawful. In United States v. Swiderski, 548 F.2d 445 (2d Cir.
23 1977), the Court held that defendants who jointly purchase drugs and share them among themselves 24 are not engaged in "distribution" within the meaning of the Controlled Substances Act. The 25 Swiderski court applied the defense to the simultaneous purchase and immediate consumption by a 26 husband and wife.

27 Swiderski's rationale applies with equal force to the use of medical cannabis in compliance 28 with state and local laws. Judicial resistance to expansion of the Swiderski doctrine clearly has been based on concerns about its possible use as a "cover" for illicit drugs. Those concerns are not present in this context, however. Just as in Swiderski, no one other than the copurchasers is involved in the use of the medical cannabis. The members are not drawn into drug use through the defendants;

1 rather. they seek the cannabis to alleviate their serious medical conditions. and receive a doctor's 2 approval to do so. These individuals are not using cannabis for recreational purposes. They are 3 merely attempting to alleviate their painful ailments. No "distribution" takes place because the 4 cooperatives and their patient-members jointly acquire the cannabis for medical purposes to be shared 5 among themselves and not with anyone else.

6 The Oakland defendants can establish that when the use of medical cannabis is shared by 7 members of the Oakland Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative, the participants agree to the following 8 statement of conditions:

9 The Oakland Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative would like to assure all 10 Members that the Cooperative will continue to operate in the good faith 11 belief that it is not engaging in the distribution of cannabis in violation 12 of law. Federal law excludes from the definition of "distribution" the 13 joint purchase and sharing of controlled substances by users. As a 14 Member of the Oakland Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative, you are a joint 15 participant in a cooperative effort to obtain and share medical cannabis.
16 Each transaction in which you participate is not a "sale" or 17 "distribution," but a sharing of jointly obtained medical cannabis. If 18 you make a payment to the Cooperative, such payment is a 19 reimbursement for administrative expenses and operations, which all 20 Members who utilize the services of the Cooperative agree to share.

21 Oakland Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative Statement of Conditions.

22 The Oakland defendants can further establish that the sharing of jointly purchased medical 23 cannabis is conducted in complete conformity with state law requiring medical approval, and with 24 local regulations that govern the use of medical cannabis. Immediate consumption in each other's 25 presence is precluded by a prohibition of consumption of cannabis on the premises of a cannabis 26 dispensary.

27 The Oakland defendants can demonstrate that no third persons are involved other than 28 "primary caregivers," and that no one else is brought into a "web" of drug use. Evidence will establish that the joint users are bound together by a shared commitment to the alleviation of each other's pain and compassion for each other's suffering.

Thus, all of the circumstances that led the Swiderski court to recognize the joint user defense can be established by the evidence, and all elements of the defense can be proven to a jury's satisfaction. The jury should be instructed that the Order does not preclude mere possession of 1 medical cannabis, even if unlawful, and that the joint use of medical cannabis under the heavily 2 regulated and controlled circumstances of this case is simple possession of the substance, not 3 distribution.

4 III. IF THIS COURT ISSUES AN ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE, THE CONTEMPT 5 TRIAL MUST BE BY JURY.

6 A. Defendants Are Entitled To A Jury Trial In These Quasi-Criminal 7 Proceedings.

8 The government's assertion that it seeks civil sanctions in civil contempt proceeding is a 9 transparent attempt to deprive defendants of their right to a jury trial. The government's reasoning is 10 flawed however. The contempt here is charged under criminal statutes authorizing criminal penalties 11 of up to 25 years in prison and $250,000 to $1,000,000 in fines. 21 U.S.C. § 841(b)(1)(D) Thus, 12 regardless of the self-serving label that the government ascribes to these proceedings, defendants are 13 entitled to a trial by jury. See, e.g., Powers, 629 F. 2d at 627 (no distinct line can be drawn between 14 civil and criminal contempt); Whittaker Corp. v. Execuair Corp., 953 F. 2d 510, 518 (9th Cir. 1992) 15 (sanctions reviewed under procedural requirements for criminal contempt where elements of both 16 criminal and civil contempt are present).<sup>9</sup>

17 This case represents one of the rare situations in which the federal government has sought an 18 injunction to enforce federal criminal laws under 21 U.S.C. 882(b). See Mem. Op. & Order at 23 19 (“The Court has located only five published opinions in which the federal government sought relief 20 based on the statute”). In this unique situation, regardless of what punishment the government seeks 21 or the Court may impose, the defendants have a Sixth Amendment a right to a jury trial on the 22 contempt charges. As the Court stated in United States v. Rylander, 714 F.2d 996 (9th Cir. 1983) 23 “[i]f the contempt is charged under a statute that authorizes a maximum penalty greater than $500 or 24 six months’ imprisonment, there is a right to a jury trial regardless of the penalty actually imposed.”

25 <sup>9</sup> The government in fact appears to be seeking criminal contempt, noting that “[t]he federal 26 courts have wide discretion in the choice of remedies for civil contempt[,]” (Gov’t’s Motion at 9) 27 and it appears to call for criminal punishment for past acts, claiming that “stringent coercive remedies 28 are in order.” Id. at 22. The Court therefore should also require that the government prove contempt beyond a reasonable doubt.

1 Rylander, 714 F.2d at 1005 (emphasis added); see also Bloom v. Illinois, 391 U.S. 194, 211 (1968)
2 (sixth and fourteenth amendments require jury trial for prosecutions for criminal contempt punishable 3 by more than $500 or six months' imprisonment). The Supreme Court in Bloom reasoned, "[i]f the 4 right to jury trial is a fundamental matter in other criminal cases, which we think it is, it must also be 5 extended to criminal contempt cases." Bloom, 391 U.S. at 208. Since the federal criminal statutes at 6 issue here authorize maximum penalties far greater than $500 and six months' imprisonment, a jury 7 trial is required should this Court issue an order to show cause.<sup>10</sup>

8 B. Defendants Are Entitled To A Jury Trial Even In A "Civil" Contempt
9 Proceeding.

10 This Court stated throughout its Memorandum and Order that a jury would be the trier of fact 11 in any future contempt proceedings: "In any contempt proceeding, the Court will determine the 12 appropriate number of jurors, up to twelve, which still must return a unanimous verdict. . . ." Order 13 at 24 (emphasis added). This statement is entirely consistent with the law of this circuit: "[I]n this 14 circuit the procedural safeguards available in criminal contempt proceedings under Fed. R. Crim. P.
15 42(b) apply also to civil contempt proceedings." Pennwalt Corp. v. Durand-Wayland, Inc., 708 F.2d 16 492, 495 (9th Cir. 1983); see also Powers, 629 F.2d at 624 (same). Fed. Rule Crim. Pr. 42(b) 17 provides in pertinent part that a defendant in contempt proceedings "is entitled to a trial by jury in 18 any case in which an act of Congress so provides." Fed. R. Crim. P 42(b). The act of Congress 19 which governs these proceedings provides that "[i]n case of an alleged violation of an injunction or 20 restraining order issued under this section, trial shall, upon the demand of the accused, be by jury in 21 accordance with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure." 21 U.S.C. § 882(b) (emphasis added). This 22 Ninth Circuit rule ensuring a jury trial to an alleged contemnor charged under an act of Congress

24 <sup>10</sup> International Union, UMWA v. Bagwell, 512 U.S. 821, 833-34 (1994) is not inconsistent 25 with this conclusion. While that case held that neither a jury trial nor proof beyond a reasonable 26 doubt are required in civil contempt proceedings, it also stated that "[c]ontempts involving out-of-27 [u]nder these circumstances, criminal procedural protections such as the rights to counsel and proof beyond a reasonable doubt are both necessary and appropriate to protect the due process rights of parties and prevent the arbitrary exercise of judicial power." Id. at 833-34.

1 which so provides is straightforward and unambiguous and requires that defendants receive a trial by 2 jury.

4 IV. THE COURT SHOULD DENY THE GOVERNMENT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT.

5 For the reasons stated in defendants' separately filed Motion to Dismiss, and incorporated by 6 reference herein, defendants believe that the government's case should be dismissed. Accordingly, 7 the Court need not reach the issues raised by the government's request for summary judgment. In 8 any event, the recent enactment of the Oakland Ordinance precludes the entry of summary judgment 9 on the government's vague and conclusory allegations of contempt.

10 The threshold inquiry in summary judgment motions is "determining whether there is the 11 need for a trial - whether, in other words, there are any factual issues that can be properly resolved 12 only by a finder of fact because they may reasonably be resolved in favor of either party."
13 Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 250 (1986). Defendants have identified a multitude of 14 facts, based on the defenses expressly left open by this Court, that illustrate the presence of genuine 15 issues requiring a trial. Thus, the government's assertion that summary judgment is appropriate here 16 should be rejected by this Court.

17 Summary judgment is particularly inappropriate in contempt proceedings. The Supreme 18 Court has declared that: "[s]ummary adjudication of indirect [i.e., out of court] contempts is 19 prohibited . . ." International Union, UMW v. Bagwell, 512 U.S. 821, 833 (1994). Indeed, the 20 only circumstance under which this Court envisioned it might consider the government's motion for 21 summary judgment in a contempt proceeding would be if there were no material issues of fact and if 22 "no reasonable jury could find for the nonmoving party." Mem. Op. & Order. at 24 (citing 23 Matsushita Elec. Ind. Co. v. Zenith Radio, 475 U.S. 574, 587 (1986)) (emphasis added).<sup>11</sup> That 24 circumstance does not exist here.

25 _____
26 <sup>11</sup> The other cases cited by the government are inapposite because they too are limited to 27 circumstances where no material issues of fact are in dispute. See, e.g., Morales-Feliciano v. Parole
Bd., 887 F.2d 1, 6-7 (1st Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1046 (1990) (no disputed factual matters);

1 As demonstrated in Section II supra, there are many material issues of fact in dispute 2 concerning each and every element of the defenses specifically left open by this Court. The issue 3 here is not simply whether defendants have distributed medical cannabis; it is whether and, if so, 4 under what circumstances and to whom defendants have distributed medical cannabis. The 5 government has conveniently overlooked these sharply contested factual issues.

6 CONCLUSION

7 Defendants are in good faith and substantial compliance with the Court's Order. The recently 8 enacted Oakland Ordinance provides immunity to the Oakland defendants and requires dismissal of 9 the government's case against them. The conclusory allegations offered by the government simply 10 do not provide a basis for the issuance of an order to show cause. Even if the Court concludes that 11 the government's allegations are sufficient, defendants are entitled to a jury's determination of the 12 specific facts and circumstances concerning their alleged contempt, and of the applicability of any 13 defenses to those charges.

INTRODUCTION

By its ex parte motion, the government asks this Court to ignore the well-established contempt process and to relinquish to law enforcement officers the Court's power to determine whether defendants are in contempt of its Preliminary Injunction Order. This Court previously has denied the government's request to modify the Order. Because the government fails to allege any change in circumstances since its last request, the government's motion should be denied.

As is set forth more fully in Defendants' Memorandum In Opposition To Plaintiff's Motion To Show Cause, And For Summary Judgment, all defendants categorically deny the alleged violations of the Preliminary Injunction Order. In fact, the government has failed to satisfy its burden of presenting evidence to this Court of any violation of the Preliminary Injunction Order. If and when the government presents a prima facie case of contempt, the defendants would be entitled to a jury trial to determine whether they are in contempt of the Order. At trial, defendants would be entitled to present evidence on all defenses specifically left open by this Court in its Memorandum and Order of May 13, 1998. Only if a contempt finding is made would it become appropriate to consider the issue of enforcement of the injunction. Yet, with this motion the government seeks enforcement for something it has not appropriately alleged, much less proven at trial.

STATEMENT OF FACTS AND PROCEEDINGS

On May 13, 1998, this Court issued a Memorandum and Order in which it granted the government's request for a preliminary injunction enjoining defendants' activities. Memorandum and Order dated May 13, 1998 ("Mem. Op. & Order") at 26-27. The Court invited the parties "to file a written submission" with the Court with any comments or revisions "as to the form of the [proposed preliminary injunction] order." Mem. Op. & Order at 27. On May 18, 1998, both parties submitted written responses. See Defendants' Submission Re: Proposed Order for Preliminary Injunction, dated May 18, 1998, and Plaintiff's Response to Memorandum Opinion and Order, dated May 18, 1998, ("Plntf's Resp. Mem. Op. & Order"). In its response, the government requested the Court to include the following language in the Preliminary Injunction Order:

Disobedience of the Preliminary Injunction or resistance to this Court's order may subject any Defendant or person within the scope of this Preliminary Injunction to prosecution for contempt of Court and the 1 imposition of such sanctions as the Court deems proper. The United 2 States Marshal is empowered to enforce this Preliminary Injunction 3 including, but not limited to, effectuating closure of the defendant 4 cannabis clubs.

5 Plntf's Resp. Mem. Op. & Order at 3. On May 19, 1998, the Court issued its Preliminary Injunction 6 Order, rejecting the government's request to include the language above.

7 On July 6, 1998, the government filed the current Plaintiff's Ex Parte Motion to Modify 8 May 19, 1998, Preliminary Injunction Orders in Cases No. C98-0086 CRB, No. C98-0087 CRB, And 9 No. C98-0088 CRB ("Government's Ex Parte Motion") seeking the same relief requested on 10 May 18, 1998. By its motion, the government again requests this Court to modify the Preliminary 11 Injunction Order to authorize the United States Marshals to "enter the [defendants'] premises . . . at 12 any time of day or night, evict any and all tenants, inventory the premises, and padlock the doors, 13 until such time as the defendants can 'satisfy [the Court] that [they are] no longer in violation of the 14 injunctive order . . . ." Government's Ex Parte Motion at 5.

15 ARGUMENT

16 I. THIS COURT'S CONTEMPT POWERS SHOULD NOT BE 17 RELINQUISHED TO LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICERS.

18 As this Court is aware, injunctions are enforced through the district court's civil contempt 19 power. See, e.g., In Re Grand Jury Proceedings, 142 F.3d 1416, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 12629, *21 20 (11th Cir. 1998). While "[t]he inherent power of the courts to punish contempt of their authority and 21 to coerce compliance with orders is not disputed[,]" the court's powers "are defined by statute and 22 limited by the requirements of due process." United States v. Powers, 629 F.2d 619, 624 (9th Cir.
23 1980). A plaintiff seeking to obtain a defendant's compliance with the provisions of an injunction 24 must "move[] the court to issue an order requiring the defendant to show cause why [it] should not be 25 held in contempt and sanctioned for . . . noncompliance." In Re Grand Jury Proceedings, 1998 U.S.
26 App. LEXIS at *21. Thereafter, if the court is satisfied that "the plaintiff has made out a case for an 27 order to show cause," it issues such an order. Id. at 21-22. After the defendant files a response, the 28 dispute is resolved at a show cause hearing. Id. at 22. At the hearing, the plaintiff is required to

1 present evidence of contempt by at least clear and convincing evidence before the court may find a 2 defendant in contempt. Powers, 629 F.2d at 626 n.6.

3 The government seeks to put the cart before the horse when it asks this Court by this ex parte
4 motion to find summarily that the defendants are in fact violating the Preliminary Injunction Order
5 and to empower the United States Marshals to evict defendants from their premises and to padlock 6 their doors. Due process of law does not, however, permit such summary sanctions for disobeying 7 an injunction absent a finding of contempt.

8 Due process of law . . . in the prosecution of contempt . . . requires that 9 the accused should be advised of the charges and have a reasonable 10 opportunity to meet them by way of defense or explanation . . .
11 includ[ing] the assistance of counsel . . . and the right to call witnesses to give testimony, relevant either to the issue of complete exculpation or in extenuation of the offense and in mitigation of the penalty to be imposed.

12 Cooke v. United States, 267 U.S. 517, 537 (1925); see also United States v. Alter, 482 F.2d 1016, 13 1023 (9th Cir. 1973) (alleged contemnor has a “paramount due process right . . . to have adequate 14 notice and a fair opportunity to defend himself”).

15 The government asserts no extraordinary circumstances that would compel this Court to 16 summarily sidestep the due process protections of a show cause hearing. Indeed, not one case cited 17 by the government supports the proposition that the Court’s contempt power should be ceded to law 18 enforcement authorities. In fact, the authorities the government cites suggest that a contempt hearing 19 is required before the Court should consider such a drastic modification of its Order.

20 For example, the government indiscriminately borrows the language for its proposed 21 modification from Lance v. Plummer, 353 F.2d 585 (5th Cir. 1965), cert. denied, 384 U.S. 929 22 (1966), without any reference to its facts or to its specific legal holding. Plummer involved an 23 appeal of a judgment of civil contempt after a civil contempt hearing, and an appeal of the underlying 24 injunction. Id. at 587. Plummer did not address empowering United States Marshals to enforce an 25 injunction. Nor did either party in Plummer request the court to modify its original injunction. The 26 Fifth Circuit upheld both the injunction and the contempt sanction as within the civil powers of the 27 court, stating:

28

1 [S]ince sanctions imposed in civil contempt proceedings must always 2 give to the alleged contemnor the opportunity to bring himself into 3 compliance, the sanction cannot be one that does not come to an end 4 when he repents his past conduct and purges himself. . . . The 5 [contempt sanction] . . . should last only until [the alleged contemnor] 6 should satisfy the trial court that he was no longer in violation of the 7 injunctive order and that he would in good faith thereafter comply with 8 the terms of the order.

9 Id. at 592. Thus, Plummer supports the defendants' position that, provided the government can 10 present a prima facie case of noncompliance, a contempt trial is required before enforcement options 11 should even be considered. If, and only if, a contempt sanction is issued, would it then become the 12 duty of the contemnor to "satisfy the trial court that he was no longer in violation of the injunctive 13 order" before relief from the sanction would be granted. Id.

14 The government also seeks support for its modification request from two cases concerning the 15 application of the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act ("FACE")<sup>1</sup> to facts very different from 16 those in the case at bar. In United States v. White, 893 F. Supp. 1423 (C.D. Cal. 1995), the 17 government sought a preliminary injunction against the director and certain members of Operation 18 Rescue from using force or threats of force to interfere with or intimidate a reproductive health doctor 19 (who performed abortions) or his wife. Id. at 1424. In 1989, those same defendants had previously 20 been found in contempt for violating another similar preliminary injunction, and had previously been 21 convicted of resisting arrest. Id. at 1430-31. The Court recognized the many past acts of violence

22
23 <sup>1</sup> Congress enacted the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act in 1993 to protect 24 women's abilities to exercise their rights of abortion and to protect a person's right of religious 25 freedom and access to places of religious worship. 18 USCS § 248 (1998). Because of the violent 26 nature of some groups' opposition to the exercise of a woman's right to choose and the importance of 27 the constitutional rights of privacy and of the free exercise of religion, FACE specifically authorizes 28 courts to award "appropriate relief, including temporary, preliminary or permanent injunctive relief and compensatory and punitive damages" to any person aggrieved under any subsection of the act.

1 against abortion providers,<sup>2</sup> and the Court made specific factual findings based on testimony and 2 documents of numerous acts of violence and threatened violence against the doctor and his wife. Id.
3 at 1430-32. Moreover, the Court found that local law enforcement had limited resources to devote to 4 this problem, id. at 1432, and that the doctor and his wife lived in a rural and remote area where the 5 defendants and others had gathered to demonstrate and harass the doctor most Friday mornings at 6 7:00 a.m. Id. at 1431. As part of its preliminary injunction prohibiting certain contact with the 7 doctor or his wife, the Court stated that “[d]ue to the remoteness of Dr. Morris’ residence, the Court 8 hereby empowers both the United States Marshals and the San Bernardino Sheriff’s Department with 9 the authority to enforce this preliminary injunction and arrest violators for willful violations. . . .” Id.
10 at 1440 (emphasis added). In this case, by contrast, this Court is presented neither with any violence 11 or threats of violence, nor with a remote locale, nor with local law enforcement’s strained resources.

12 The government’s reliance upon United States v. Roach, 947 F. Supp. 872 (E.D. Pa. 1996), 13 another case applying FACE, is similarly misplaced. When it issued its preliminary injunction,<sup>3</sup> the 14 Roach Court specifically limited the Marshals’ powers only (1) to communicate the terms of the 15 Court’s order to potential violators, (2) to immediately report to the Court and plaintiff’s counsel 16 events and circumstances showing a violation, (3) to keep good records of any violations, and (4) if 17 ordered by the Court, and authorized by law, to detain for purposes of identification and 18 investigation, and for purposes of transporting them to be brought before the Court, those persons 19 determined by the Court based upon good cause shown, to have violated any term of the Order. Id.

1 contempt finding. Thus, neither Roach nor any case cited by the government supports the 2 government's request that this Court relinquish its contempt power to law enforcement officers.

3 The clear purpose of the government's request to modify the injunction is to punish 4 defendants' "[d]isobedience of the Preliminary Injunction or resistance to this Court's order" by 5 calling in the United States Marshals. Government's Ex Parte Motion at 2. The government's 6 complaint concerns as yet unsubstantiated allegations of violations of the Court's Preliminary 7 Injunction Order. The complaint does not concern any defect in the original Order. Accordingly, the 8 only lawful means at its disposal is to institute a contempt of court proceeding.<sup>4</sup> A motion to modify 9 the injunction, under these circumstances, therefore, is inappropriate and should be denied.<sup>5</sup>

10 II. THE GOVERNMENT HAS FAILED TO DEMONSTRATE THAT 11 CHANGED CIRCUMSTANCES REQUIRE MODIFICATION OF THE 12 PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION.

13 It is well established that a court should modify an injunction only where there is "some 14 change in the circumstances or an element of 'unforeseenness' surrounding the enjoined activity[.]" 15 Transgo, Inc. v. Ajac Transmission Parts Corp., 911 F.2d 363, 367 (9th Cir. 1990) (modification 16 request denied where movant had not seriously alleged changed circumstance in law or fact); see also 17 System Federation No. 91, Ry. Employees' Dep't, AFL-CIO v. Wright, 364 U.S. 642, 647 (1961)

20 <sup>4</sup> As set forth fully in their accompanying Memorandum In Opposition To Plaintiff's Motion 21 To Show Cause, And For Summary Judgment, all defendants categorically deny all allegations of 22 contempt.

23 <sup>5</sup> The government mistakenly equates the fact the Court may presume irreparable injury to 24 the United States in the context of the preliminary injunction standard with actual evidence of its 25 unsubstantiated assertion that defendants have in fact violated this Court's order. See Government's 26 Ex Parte Motion at 3 (citing Mem. Op. & Order at 15-16); Miller v. California Pac. Medical Ctr., 27 19 F.3d 449, 459 (9th Cir. 1994) (en banc); United States v. Nutri-Cology, Inc., 982 F.2d 394, 398 28 (9th Cir. 1992); and United States v. Odessa Union Warehouse Co-op, 833 F.2d 172, 175 (9th Cir.
1987). The Court's opinion and these cases, however, only apply a legal presumption in the context of the preliminary injunction standard — a presumption applicable only if the government establishes a probability of success on the merits. See Mem. Op. & Order at 15; Miller, 19 F.3d at 459; Nutri- Cology, 982 F.2d at 398. Irreparable injury cannot be presumed here because the government has not established any violation of the relevant statutes.

1 fact have changed). The government has failed to demonstrate that any such changed circumstances 2 exist. Instead, the government purports to invoke the authority of this Court to modify the 3 Preliminary Injunction Order to impose more stringent terms on the defendant because it alleges “the 4 original purposes of the injunction are not being fulfilled in any material respect.” Government’s Ex
5 Parte Motion at 3-4 (citation and quotation omitted). The government’s claims are unfounded.

6 First, the government has not demonstrated that the defendants have violated the injunction.
7 Second, the government has neither alleged nor established the existence of any changed 8 circumstances. Finally, none of the cases cited by the government in support of its request to modify 9 the injunction authorize the relief the government seeks here. These cases permit modifications 10 either to relieve or to increase a defendant’s duties or responsibilities as a result of changed 11 circumstances — not to coerce defendants to do what was already required by the original injunction.
12 See, e.g., System Federation No. 91, 364 U.S. 642, 651-53 (1961) (modification of injunction to 13 allow enjoined party to avail itself of newly granted statutory privilege was appropriate); United 14 States v. United Shoe Machinery Corp., 391 U.S. 244, 251-52 (1968) (modification of injunction 15 after ten years was appropriate because the injunction had not achieved its intended effect of 16 restoring competition to market); Exxon Corp. v. Texas Motor Exchange, Inc., 628 F.2d 500, 503 (5th 17 Cir. 1980) (modification appropriate only if plaintiff can establish defendant’s new trademarks also 18 infringe plaintiff’s rights).

19 Nothing has changed since the government first requested that this Court modify its proposed 20 Order to include virtually the same language requested in this Ex Parte Motion. In the absence of 21 new facts or conditions occurring since that time, this Court, having denied this request once, should 22 deny it again. See, e.g., Allergan Sales, Inc. v. Pharmacia & Upjohn, Inc., 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23 21048 *2 (S.D. Cal. 1996) (Court summarily denied defendant’s request to amend preliminary 24 injunction after having already denied similar earlier request).

25 CONCLUSION

26 In short, because the government seeks to coerce defendants to do what is already required by 27 the existing Preliminary Injunction Order, this is a premature enforcement request and not an 28 appropriate request for modification. The government’s unilateral assertion that the defendants have

1 "openly and flagrantly violated" this Court's Order, Government's Ex Parte Motion at 2, is 2 insufficient to support a modification. This Court has not yet made that determination. Therefore, 3 the government's request for a modification of the Preliminary Injunction Order is improper and 4 should be denied.

24 AND RELATED ACTIONS.

 27 28

1 Defendants Oakland Cannabis Buyer's Cooperative ("OCBC") and Jeffrey Jones: defendants 2 Marin Alliance for Medical Marijuana ("Marin Alliance") and Lynnette Shaw; and defendants Ukiah
3 Cannabis Buyer's Club ("UCBC"), Cherrie Lovett, Marvin Lehrman, and Mildred Lehrman 4 (collectively the "defendants") hereby object to and move to strike the declarations of Mark T.
5 Quinlivan, Bill Nyfeler, Dean Arnold and Peter Ott submitted in support of plaintiff's motion to show 6 cause and for summary judgment.

7 Each of these declarations submitted by the government violates the requirements of 8 Rule 56(e) that "affidavits shall be made on personal knowledge, shall set forth facts as would be 9 admissible in evidence, and shall show affirmatively that the affiant is competent to testify on the 10 matters stated therein." Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e). They are also replete with hearsay, conclusory 11 statements, and the declarant's speculation as to factual matters.

12 The Declaration of Mark T. Quinlivan and the accompanying exhibits are insufficient to 13 establish a violation of the Preliminary Injunction. Instead, they are a compilation of press releases, 14 articles and web site excerpts which do not cite any specific instance of an alleged violation of the 15 Preliminary Injunction Order. At most, these exhibits are alleged admissions of intent to do an act, 16 which of course, is not evidence of any act itself. Mitchell v. Sharon, 59 F. 980, 983 (1894) ("Words
17 which merely impute a criminal intention, not yet put into action, are not actionable. Guilty thoughts 18 are not a crime.") Furthermore, this declaration should be stricken in its entirety because it contains 19 hearsay and is not based upon personal knowledge. Fed. R. Evid. 602, 801, 802. In addition, as set 20 forth in detail below, much of the Quinlivan declaration consists of improper opinion testimony, and 21 impermissible legal conclusions as to whether defendants were in fact in violation of the Preliminary 22 Injunction Order. Fed. R. Evid. 701, 702; see Maffei v. Northern Ins. Co., 12 F.3d 892, 898-99 (9th 23 Cir. 1993) (declaration with unsupported legal conclusions rejected). Accordingly, the declaration 24 should be stricken in its entirety.

25 The Declarations of Bill Nyfeler, Dean Arnold and Peter Ott are similarly deficient. None of 26 these declarants identify the individuals involved in the alleged distribution or sale of marijuana nor 27 do they claim personal knowledge that medical marijuana was in fact distributed to anyone. These 28 declarations are vague, ambiguous, and conclusory. Fed. R. Evid. 602, 701, 702; See Lujan v.

1 National Wildlife Fed'n, 497 U.S. 871, 889 (1990) (conclusory, non-specific statements in affidavits
2 insufficient); Hansen v. United States, 7 F.3d 137, 138 (9th Cir. 1993) (conclusory, self-serving 3 affidavit lacking detailed facts insufficient). Likewise, the phone calls regarding club business hours 4 are also improper on the grounds that they are irrelevant, hearsay, conclusory and constitute improper 5 opinion testimony as to whether defendants have in fact violated the Preliminary Injunction Order 6 and thus do not comply with the Northern District Local Rules or with the Federal Rules of Evidence.
7 See Civil L.R. 7-5(b), Fed. R. Evid. 602, 801, 802.

8 Declaration of Mark T. Quinlivan

9 Specifically, the following paragraphs of, and exhibits to, the Declaration of Mark T.
10 Quinlivan should be stricken:

11 1. Paragraph 2 and Exhibit 1: Defendants object to this press release on the grounds that 12 it is vague, conclusory and lacks foundation as this declarant has no personal knowledge of the 13 purported contents. Fed. R. Evid. 602. Defendants object to this exhibit on the grounds that it 14 constitutes hearsay to the extent it relies on statements of others. Fed. R. Evid. 801. Any alleged 15 admission by a party-opponent contained therein is inadmissible as a result of the first-level hearsay.
16 Fed. R. Evid. 802. Defendants further object to this exhibit as irrelevant as a statement of intent is 17 not evidence the defendants have in fact violated the Preliminary Injunction Order. Fed. R.
18 Evid. 401, 402.

19 2. Paragraph 3 and Exhibit 2: Defendants object to this article on the grounds that it is 20 vague, conclusory and lacks foundation as this declarant has no personal knowledge of the purported 21 contents. Fed. R. Evid. 602. Defendants further object to this exhibit on the grounds that it
22 constitutes hearsay to the extent it relies on statements of others. Fed. R. Evid. 801, 802. Defendants 23 further object to this exhibit as irrelevant as a statement of intent is not evidence the defendants have 24 in fact violated the Preliminary Injunction Order. Fed. R. Evid. 401, 402.

25 3. Paragraph 4 and Exhibit 3: Defendants object to Exhibit 3 as irrelevant as to whether 26 defendants are in violation of the Preliminary Injunction Order. Fed. R. Evid. 401, 402. Defendants 27 object to this exhibit on the grounds that it constitutes hearsay to the extent it relies on the statements 28 of others.

1           4. Paragraph 5 and Exhibit 4: Defendants object to these excerpts on the grounds that it 2 is vague, conclusory and lacks foundation as this declarant has no personal knowledge of the 3 purported contents. Fed. R. Evid. 602. Defendants object to this exhibit on the grounds that it
4 constitutes hearsay to the extent it relies on statements of others. Fed. R. Evid. 801, 802. Defendants 5 further object to this exhibit on the ground that it is irrelevant, argumentative, and speculative. Fed.
6 R. Evid. 401, 402.

7           5. Paragraph 6 and Exhibit 5: Defendants object to this article on the grounds that it is 8 vague, conclusory and lacks foundation as this declarant has no personal knowledge of the purported
9 contents. Fed. R. Evid. 602. Defendants object to this exhibit on the grounds that it constitutes 10 hearsay to the extent it relies on statements of others. Fed. R. Evid. 801, 802. Defendants further 11 object to this exhibit on the ground that it is irrelevant, argumentative, and speculative. Fed. R.
12 Evid. 401, 402.

13           6. Paragraph 7 and Exhibit 6: Defendants object to this excerpt on the grounds that it is 14 vague, conclusory and lacks foundation as this declarant has no personal knowledge of the purported
15 contents. Fed. R. Evid. 602. Defendants object to this exhibit on the grounds that it constitutes 16 hearsay to the extent it relies on statements of others. Fed. R. Evid. 801, 802. Defendants further 17 object to this exhibit on the ground that it is irrelevant, argumentative, and speculative. Fed. R.
18 Evid. 401, 402.

19           7. Paragraph 8 and Exhibit 7: Defendants object to this article on the grounds that it is 20 vague, conclusory and lacks foundation as this declarant has no personal knowledge of the purported
21 contents. Fed. R. Evid. 602. Defendants object to this exhibit on the grounds that it constitutes 22 hearsay to the extent it relies on statements of others. Fed. R. Evid. 801, 802. Defendants further 23 object to this exhibit on the ground that it is irrelevant and speculative. Fed. R. Evid. 401, 402.

24           8. Paragraph 9 and Exhibit 8: Defendants object to this article on the grounds that it is 25 vague, conclusory and lacks foundation as this declarant has no personal knowledge of the purported
26 contents. Fed. R. Evid. 602. Defendants object to this exhibit on the grounds that it constitutes 27 hearsay to the extent it relies on statements of others. Fed. R. Evid. 801, 802. Defendants further 28 object to this exhibit on the ground that it is irrelevant and speculative. Fed. R. Evid. 401, 402.

Declaration of Bill Nyfeler

Specifically, the following paragraphs of the Declaration of Bill Nyfeler should be stricken:

1. Paragraph 3: Defendants object to paragraph 3, lines 15-20, on the grounds that it is vague, ambiguous and lacks foundation as this declarant has no personal knowledge as to who the "14 individuals" or "several of these individuals" are. Fed. R. Evid. 602. Furthermore, declarant has no personal knowledge as to what "these individuals" did upon entering Marin Alliance thus it is irrelevant what they allegedly did or had upon exiting. Fed. R. Evid. 401, 402, 602. Defendants further object to this declaration on the ground that it constitutes improper opinion testimony and impermissible legal conclusions as to whether "what appeared to be marijuana" was in fact marijuana. Fed. R. Evid. 701, 702.

2. Paragraph 4: Defendants object to paragraph 4, lines 21-26, on the grounds that it is vague, ambiguous and lacks foundation as this declarant has no personal knowledge of any purported distribution of marijuana. Fed. R. Evid. 602. Defendants object to this testimony on the ground that it constitutes improper opinion testimony and impermissible legal conclusions as to whether UCBC was in fact "continuing to engage in distribution of marijuana." Fed. R. Evid. 701, 702. Defendants object to this testimony on the grounds that it constitutes hearsay to the extent it relies on the statements of others. Fed. R. Evid. 801, 802. Defendants further object to this testimony on the grounds that it is irrelevant that the "club was open for business;" this statement does not constitute evidence of a violation of the Preliminary Injunction Order. Fed. R. Evid. 401, 402.

3. Paragraph 5: Defendants object to paragraph 5, lines 1-5, on the grounds that it is vague, ambiguous and lacks foundation as this declarant has no personal knowledge of any purported distribution of marijuana. Fed. R. Evid. 602. Defendants object to this testimony on the ground that it constitutes improper opinion testimony and impermissible legal conclusions as to whether OCBC was in fact "continuing to engage in distribution of marijuana." Fed. R. Evid. 701, 702. Defendants object to this testimony on the grounds that it constitutes hearsay to the extent it relies on the statements of others. Fed. R. Evid. 801, 802. Defendants further object to this testimony on the grounds that it is irrelevant that the "club was open for business;" this statements does not constitute evidence of a violation of the Preliminary Injunction Order. Fed. R. Evid. 401, 402.

1 this testimony on the ground that it constitutes improper opinion testimony and impermissible legal 2 conclusions as to whether any substance was in fact marijuana, or was in fact located on premises 3 belonging to UCBC. Fed. R. Evid. 701, 702. Defendants further object to this testimony on the 4 grounds that it is irrelevant, as it does not constitute evidence of a violation of the Preliminary 5 Injunction Order. Fed. R. Evid. 401, 402.

6 Conclusion

7 For all the foregoing reasons, and for the reasons cited in Defendants' Memorandum In 8 Opposition to Plaintiff's Motion to Show Cause and For Summary Judgment, defendants hereby 9 object to and request that the identified portions of the declarations of Mark T. Quinlivan, Bill 10 Nyfeler, Dean Arnold and Peter Ott be stricken.

DEFENDANTS' REQUEST FOR JUDICIAL NOTICE

Date: August 31, 1998
Time: 2:30 p.m.
Courtroom: 8
Hon. Charles R. Breyer

1 Defendants Oakland Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative and Jeffrey Jones hereby request the 2 Court to take judicial notice pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 201 of the following:

3 1. On July 29, 1998, the City Council of the City of Oakland, California unanimously 4 passed Ordinance No. 12076 C.M.S.—An Ordinance of the City of Oakland Adding Chapter 8.42 to 5 the Oakland Municipal Code Pertaining to Medical Cannabis, a copy of which is attached hereto as 6 Exhibit A. It is appropriate for a court to take judicial notice of a City ordinance. Fed. R. Evid. 201; 7 Zimomra v. Alamo Rent-A-Car, Inc., 111 F.3d 1495, 1503-04 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 118 S.Ct. 365 8 (1997) (judicial notice of city ordinance appropriate in context of motion to dismiss); Anheuser- 9 Busch, Inc. v. Schmoke, 63 F.3d 1305, 1312 (4th Cir. 1995) (same).

10 2. On August 12, 1998, the Oakland City Manager designated the Oakland Cannabis 11 Buyers' Cooperative and its agents, directors, and employees as a medical cannabis provider

ORDINANCE NO. 12 0 7 6 C.M.S.

AN ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF OAKLAND ADDING CHAPTER 8.42 TO THE OAKLAND MUNICIPAL CODE PERTAINING TO MEDICAL CANNABIS

The City Council of the City of Oakland does ordain as follows:

Article 1. Chapter 8.42 is hereby added to the Oakland Municipal Code to read as follows:

MEDICAL CANNABIS

Section 1. Findings and Purposes

A. On November 5, 1996, the voters of the State of California adopted by initiative the Compassionate Use Act of 1996, codified at Health and Safety Code Section 11362.5, pertaining to medical use of marijuana. As stated therein, the purposes of the Compassionate Use Act of 1996 are in part to "ensure that seriously ill Californians have the right to obtain and use marijuana for medical purposes where that medical use is deemed appropriate and has been recommended by a physician who has determined that the person's health would benefit from the use of marijuana in the treatment of cancer, anorexia, AIDS, chronic pain, spasticity, glaucoma, arthritis, migraine, or any other illness for which marijuana provides relief" and to "ensure that patients and their primary caregivers who obtain and use marijuana for medical purposes upon the recommendation of a physician are not subject to criminal prosecution or sanction." The City of Oakland supports the use of medical cannabis in accordance with the Compassionate Use Act of 1996. The purposes of the compassionate Use Act of 1996 are herewith also made purposes of this Chapter.

B. Long before the passage of the Compassionate Use Act of 1996, the City of Oakland was on record as being in support of medical cannabis and in support of Oakland medical cannabis providers, as exemplified by unanimously passed Oakland City Council Resolutions numbered 72379 C.M.S. and 72516 C.M.S.

C. The purpose of this Chapter is to recognize and protect the rights of qualified patients, their caregivers, physicians, and medical cannabis provider associations, and to ensure access to safe and affordable medical cannabis pursuant to the Compassionate Use Act of 1996. In support of this purpose, the City of Oakland recognizes that a medical cannabis provider association, as defined herein, may provide educational information concerning access to safe, affordable, and lawful medical cannabis, and may also distribute safe and affordable medical cannabis in a consistent, reliable, and legal fashion.

D. An additional purpose of this Chapter is to provide immunity to medical cannabis provider associations pursuant to Section 885(d) of Title 21 of the United States Code, which provides that no liability shall be imposed under the federal Controlled Substance Act upon any duly authorized officer of a political subdivision of a state lawfully engaged in the enforcement of any municipal ordinance relating to controlled substances.

Section 2. Definitions

The following words and phrases, whenever used in this Chapter, shall be construed as herein defined.

A. Qualified Patient: "Qualified patient" means a person who obtains a written or oral recommendation or approval from a physician to use cannabis for personal medical purposes.

B. Primary Caregiver: "Primary caregiver" means the person or persons designated by a qualified patient who have consistently assumed responsibility for the housing, health, or safety of that qualified patient.

C. Cannabis: "Cannabis" means marijuana and all parts of the plant Cannabis, whether growing or not; the seeds thereof; the resin extracted from any part of the plant; and every compound, manufacture, salt, derivative, mixture, or preparation of the plant, its seeds or resin. It does not include the mature stalks of the plant, fiber produced from the stalks, oil or cake made from the seeds of the plant, any other compound, manufacture, salt, derivative, mixture, or preparation of the mature stalks (except the resin extracted therefrom), fiber, oil, or cake, or the sterilized seeds of the plant that are incapable of germination.

D. Medical Cannabis Provider Association: "Medical cannabis provider association" means a cooperative, affiliation, association, or collective of persons who are qualified patients or primary caregivers, the main purposes of which are to provide education, referral, or network services, and to facilitate or assist in the lawful production, acquisition, and distribution of medical cannabis. An entity may function as a medical cannabis provider association only if designated as such by the City of Oakland pursuant to Section 3 of this Chapter.

E. Officer: "Officer" means designee and shall not have the meaning of that term as used in Section 400 of the Oakland City Charter.

Section 3. Medical Cannabis Distribution Program

The City of Oakland hereby establishes a Medical Cannabis Distribution Program. Such program shall be administered by medical cannabis provider associations. The City Manager shall designate one or more entities as a medical cannabis provider association. Any designated medical cannabis provider association shall enforce the provisions of this Chapter, including enforcing its purpose of insuring that seriously ill Californians have the right to obtain and use marijuana for medical purposes. For the purposes of this Chapter only, a medical cannabis provider association, and its agents, employees and directors while acting within the scope of their duties on behalf of the association, shall be deemed officers of the City of Oakland.

Section 4. No Liability

To the fullest extent permitted by law, the City of Oakland shall assume no liability whatsoever, and expressly does not waive sovereign immunity, with respect to the Medical Cannabis Distribution Program established herein, or for the activities of any medical cannabis provider association. Each medical cannabis provider association designated by the City shall (1) indemnify the City of Oakland; (2) carry insurance in the amounts and of the types that are acceptable to the City's Risk Manager; and (3) name the City as an additional insured.

Section 5. Qualified Patients, Primary Caregivers, and Medical Cannabis Provider Associations

In order to ensure that qualified patients and primary caregivers are not subject to criminal prosecution or sanction, and to ensure that only qualified patients and primary caregivers have access to medical cannabis, the City of Oakland, or medical cannabis provider associations on behalf of the City of Oakland, may issue valid identification cards to qualified patients and primary caregivers upon receipt of a physician's recommendation or approval for medical cannabis.

Section 6. Physician-Patient Confidentiality

Certification processes conducted pursuant to this Chapter shall preserve to the maximum extent possible all legal protections and privileges, consistent with reasonably verifying the qualifications and status of qualified patients and primary caregivers. Disclosure of any patient information to assert facts in support of a qualified status shall not be deemed a waiver of confidentiality of that information under any provision of law.

Section 7. Transportation of Medical Cannabis

All activities entailing the transportation of medical cannabis, in accordance with this Chapter, shall be lawful when conducted by qualified patients, primary caregivers, or medical cannabis provider associations where the quantity transported and the method, timing, and distance of the transportation are reasonably related to the medical needs of qualified patients.

Section 8. Miscellaneous Applications

Possession and use of the following items shall be lawful when used in accordance with the Compassionate Use Act of 1996 or this Chapter:

- A. Pipes, papers, water pipes, vaporizers, and other related paraphernalia:
- B. Cannabis products, such as baked goods, tinctures, concentrated cannabis, infusions, oils, salves, and any other cannabis derivatives.

Section 9. Violations and Penalties

A violation of any provision of this Chapter shall be a misdemeanor.

Article 2. Severability

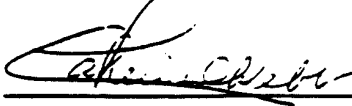

If any provision of this Chapter, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is held invalid, that invalidity shall not affect any other provision or application of this Chapter that can be given effect without the invalid provision or application; and to this end, the provisions or applications of this Chapter are severable.

JOHN P. MORGAN, M.D.

AND RELATED ACTIONS.

1 I. JOHN P. MORGAN, declare:

2 1. I am a medical doctor and Professor of Pharmacology at the City University of New 3 York Medical School. I have personal knowledge of the facts stated herein, and if called as a 4 witness, I could and would testify competently as to them.

5 2. I am co-author of the book entitled "Marijuana Myths, Marijuana Facts—A Review of 6 the Scientific Evidence," published in 1997.

7 3. Marijuana, also known as cannabis, has many proven medical uses. Medical cannabis 8 reduces nausea and vomiting induced by cancer chemotherapy, stimulates appetite and promotes 9 weight gain in AIDS patients, reduces intraocular pressure in people suffering from glaucoma, 10 reduces muscle spasticity in patients with neurological disorders, spinal cord injuries, and multiple 11 sclerosis. Furthermore, patients and physicians have reported that smoked marijuana also provides 12 relief from migraine headaches, depression, seizures, and pain.

13 4. Recent studies have shown that cannabinoids may also be useful for other neurological 14 disorders, such as stroke.

15 5. There are no reasonable legal alternatives to medical cannabis for many patients.
16 Delta-9-THC is the main active ingredient in marijuana. While synthetic THC is available in capsule 17 form, it is not nearly as effective as smoked marijuana for many patients. For people suffering from 18 nausea and vomiting, who are unable to swallow and hold down a pill, smoking marijuana is often 19 the only reliable way to deliver THC to the body. Smoking marijuana delivers THC quickly, 20 providing relief in a few minutes, compared to an hour or more when THC is swallowed.

21 6. Smoking marijuana not only delivers THC to the bloodstream more quickly than 22 swallowing synthetic THC, but smoking delivers most of the THC inhaled. When synthetic THC is 23 swallowed, 90 percent or more of it never reaches sites of activity in the body as a result of the 24 body's extensive metabolism of swallowed THC.

25 7. Another problem with swallowed THC is that its effects vary considerably, both from 26 one person to another and in the same person from one episode of use to another. Further, because 27 the onset of effect is an hour or more, patients using synthetic THC have difficulty achieving just the 28 effective dose. Moreover, when THC is swallowed, the effects last longer (up to six hours) compared

1 to one or two hours when marijuana is smoked. Thus, smoking marijuana is a more flexible route of 2 administration than swallowing because smoking allows patients to adjust their dose to coincide with 3 the rise and fall of symptoms. For people suffering from nausea and vomiting from AIDS or cancer 4 chemotherapy, smoked marijuana provides rapid relief with lower overall doses of THC.

5 8. The psychoactive side effects of swallowed synthetic THC may be more intense than 6 those that occur from smoking, thereby increasing the likelihood of adverse psychological reactions.
7 This occurs because the liver actually produces, in high concentration, an active metabolite.

8 9. Smoking is a highly unusual way to administer a drug. Many drugs could be smoked, 9 but there is no good reason to do so because oral preparations produce adequate blood concentrations.
10 This is not the case with THC. Inhaling is a better route of administration than swallowing. Inhaling 11 is about equal in efficiency to intravenous injection, and considerably more practical.

12 10. "Cannabis buyers' cooperatives" are the best and safest way for patients to obtain 13 medical cannabis. Patients who rely on the criminal street markets to obtain marijuana necessarily 14 acquire cannabis of unknown potency and purity. For example, marijuana purchased from a street 15 dealer may contain fungal spores, which may be deadly for AIDS patients who have suppressed 16 immune systems. As a result of the dangers of obtaining marijuana from the criminal market, some 17 patients who need the drug may choose to forego their medication.

18 11. The Drug Enforcement Administration's own administrative law judge, Francis L.
19 Young, concluded not only that marijuana's medical utility had been adequately demonstrated by the 20 evidence, but that marijuana had been shown to be "one of the safest therapeutically active 21 substances known to man." The DEA administrator ignored this opinion when he decided to 22 maintain marijuana as a Schedule I drug.

23 12. For many patients medical cannabis is necessary to avert imminent and often life-24 threatening harm. For many patients, such as those undergoing intensive chemotherapy or 25 experiencing AIDS-related "wasting syndrome," medical cannabis saves their lives. For patients 26 27 28

1 suffering from glaucoma, medical cannabis may save their vision. For patients suffering neurological 2 disorders resulting from spinal cord injuries and multiple sclerosis, medical cannabis may enable 3 them to physically cope in society, to go on with their lives and to endure pain.

4 I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing 5 is true and correct.

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

1 I, YVONNE WESTBROOK, declare as follows:

2 1. My name is Yvonne Renee Westbrook. I am 45 years of age, am of sound mind, and 3 am competent to testify to the matters stated herein.

4 2. I am a member of the Oakland Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative.

5 3. I was diagnosed with multiple sclerosis in 1979. Because of my condition, I am 6 confined to a wheelchair. Cannabis helps me cope with many of the conditions brought on by 7 my illness. True and correct copies from my medical record are attached as "Exhibit A."

8 4. Spasticity is one of my symptoms caused by multiple sclerosis -- my legs will jump 9 uncontrollably. My doctor has prescribed Valium for the spasticity, but it does not work as well 10 as cannabis. It takes Valium approximately one hour to take effect, and during that hour, my legs 11 continue to jump around. After the Valium does take effect, I just want to fall asleep, and cannot 12 function well. In contrast, after I take just a few puffs of cannabis, the spasticity immediately 13 subsides, and I can go about my normal activities. Cannabis makes it possible for me to live a 14 fulfilling life: Currently, my primary endeavor is working as a peer counselor for other people 15 with multiple sclerosis.

16 5. Chronic pain is another condition from which I suffer -- my feet and legs experience 17 throbbing aching. My doctor prescribed pain relievers, which help some at night, but during the 18 day, cannabis is the one and only medicine that helps me cope with the pain.

19 6. I suffer from terrible headaches. Cannabis helps me cope with that pain as well. My 20 doctor prescribed Vicodin for my headaches, but I try not to use it because it can be addictive and 21 can cause liver problems. Lord knows, I don't want liver problems along with multiple sclerosis.

22 7. Multiple sclerosis also makes it hard for me to sleep. Cannabis is effective at helping 23 me sleep, and the next morning I feel rested and refreshed. Other medications my doctor 24 prescribed for sleeping, such as Restoral, have side effects: The next morning I felt lethargic, 25 without energy, and not like myself. The prescription drugs rob me of energy, which is low 26 anyway because multiple of sclerosis.

27 8. Being disabled can make me depressed, and I suffer from mood swings, but cannabis 28 improves my attitude. For example, I sometimes suffer from depression because of my

1 condition, or I can become angry at my inability to perform simple daily tasks. In those 2 circumstances, I can medicate with cannabis and it quickly improves my mental outlook. Being 3 depressed aggravates the headaches and fatigue I experience, which are symptoms of multiple 4 sclerosis, whereas having a good mental attitude alleviates those symptoms and improves my 5 condition.

6 9. My doctor is very supportive of my use of cannabis. He is glad I have a medicine that 7 helps me in so many ways. In the hospital, at various times, the nurses have seen me medicating 8 with cannabis. They, too, have been very supportive of me.

9 10. I only use cannabis for medical purposes, not recreationally. I am 45 years old -- I 10 have neither the time nor the inclination to use drugs recreationally. Because I smoke several 11 cannabis cigarettes every day, it does not have a psychoactive effect on me.

12 11. The Oakland Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative provides a safe, clean, and comfortable 13 place to obtain cannabis. That is important to me because, being in a wheelchair, I do not want 14 to go to seedy places, or to parks or to the streets, in search of medicine. The elements I would 15 have to endure in order to get medicine there are dangerous, and it would be stressful. I am 16 afraid of the guns, neighborhoods, and unsavory people I would need to interact with in order to 17 obtain cannabis on the black market.

18 I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my 19 knowledge.

PHYSICIAN STATEMENT

My patient, Gyonne Westhead, is being treated for Multiple Sclerosis.

We have discussed the medical benefits and risks of marijuana use as a treatment for this condition. I would consider prescribing marijuana for this patient's condition if I were legally able to do so. If my patient chooses to use marijuana therapeutically, I will continue to monitor his/her condition and provide advice on his/her progress.

CLERK OF DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

ER0806

1 I, KENNETH ESTES, declare as follows:

2 1. My name is Kenneth Wayne Estes. I am 40 years of age, am of sound mind, and am 3 competent to testify to the matters stated herein.

4 2. I am a member of the Oakland Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative.

5 3. I am a quadriplegic. I am either confined to a wheelchair or bedridden. I use cannabis 6 for pain relief, appetite stimulation, and sleep.

7 4. I was injured in a motorcycle accident when I was 18 years old. I broke my neck at 8 cervical five and six. At first, all four of my limbs were paralyzed, but about two years after the 9 accident I regained some use of my arms, hands, and fingers. True and correct copies from my 10 medical record are attached as "Exhibit A."

11 5. I live with constant pain. Sometimes it is a "tingling" that will not stop, almost as if 12 you hit your funnybone. Other times, such as when I get spasms or back problems, the pain 13 becomes intense, powerful, and overwhelming. Without cannabis the pain would be excruciating 14 Even after I medicate with cannabis, the pain is still there -- it never goes away -- but cannabis 15 makes the pain bearable. Cannabis makes it possible for me to function in society and to deal 16 with other people because it alleviates the pain I experience.

17 6. Before I discovered medical cannabis, the pain in my back was so bad that it drove me 18 insane, and I wanted to kill myself. Having to live with the constant pain made me suicidal. I 19 wanted the pain to end at any cost.

20 7. I was wasting away. I could not eat and I could not sleep. I was dying.

21 8. In my suffering, a hospital orderly who held a marijuana pipe to my lips allowed me to 22 medicate with cannabis for the first time. It worked.

23 9. The pain went down. I was able to sleep through the night. The next morning, I 24 finished breakfast. The nurse even brought in the doctors to show them that I ate the whole meal.

25 10. I am thankful that there is an herb I can turn to to alleviate my pain, because now I 26 want to live, not die. With the three ingredients of rest, food, and my spirits raised, I can conquer 27 anything, including conquering this illness. Cannabis saved my life.

28 11. I have tried many prescription drugs, sometimes several medicines per day. For

1 example, I have tried Valium, Motrin, codeine, Vicadin, Darvocet, and many others. They either 2 did not work, or had side effects that made me not want to use them. The pharmaceutical pills 3 gave me stomach pain, other stomach problems, and constipation. They also made me 4 emotionally unstable: They made me want to cry, they made me angry at my condition, or they 5 made me frustrated.

6 12. The pills made my cognitive thinking defective and my mind blurred. I couldn't hold 7 thoughts together, couldn't have conversations, and couldn't communicate with other people. It 8 is hard to deal with paralysis -- all I have left are my words. When I couldn't communicate with 9 other people through words, it only made my condition worse.

10 13. The pharmaceuticals merely added to my discomfort. They gave me new pain 11 (stomach pain) and made me self-conscious about not being able to speak, which detrimentally 12 affected my eating and sleeping. Cannabis, by comparison, gives me no pain, helps me eat, helps 13 me sleep, and makes me more sociable with other people.

14 14. Some of the prescription sleeping pills I used to take lost their effectiveness after a 15 while, making me need to take more and more of them. The next morning I would feel "hung 16 over" and "cloudy," and I still had the stomach pain. If I use cannabis to help me sleep, I feel 17 better the next morning, I feel refreshed after a good night's sleep, and I have no stomach pain.

18 15. Pills can take 60 to 90 minutes to take effect. In contrast, the immediate effect of 19 smoked cannabis is one of its great attributes. Medicating with cannabis allows access to sleep 20 or hunger when I need it, either because it is nighttime and time to sleep or because a meal is 21 ready.

22 16. Pharmaceuticals may work for some people, but they do not work for me. I know, 23 because I have tried them. Cannabis, however, does work for me. It actually relieves my pain, 24 and it does not have the physical and emotional side effects of the prescription medications.

1 I, IMA CARTER, declare as follows:

2 1. My name is Ima Jean Carter. I am over the age of 21, am of sound mind, and am 3 competent to testify to the matters stated herein.

4 2. I am a member of the Oakland Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative. I was present at a press 5 conference held at the Cooperative's offices on May 21, 1998; however, I did not obtain any 6 medical cannabis at the press conference. At that press conference, I conducted interviews with 7 representatives of the media.

8 3. I have never obtained medical cannabis from Jeffrey Jones.

9 4. During the press conference, I left briefly to put money in the parking meter. On my 10 way back, I rode up in the elevator with a man I learned was a Drug Enforcement Administration 11 agent attempting to infiltrate our Cooperative.

I. PRELIMINARY STATEMENT.

The Members are seriously ill individuals who have a fundamental right guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment of the United States Constitution (the "Fifth Amendment") to be free from governmental interdiction of their personal, self-funded medical choice, made in consultation with their personal physician, to alleviate their suffering through the only effective treatment available for them. The Members use cannabis because it is the only drug which effectively alleviates their pain or otherwise treats the Members' chronic medical conditions.

Each of the Members is a member of one of the cooperatives named as a defendant in these three actions. The defendant cooperatives have served as the Members' source of legal, safe and affordable cannabis upon the recommendation of each Member's physician. In these actions, plaintiff and counter-defendant United States of America (the "Government") seeks to enjoin the defendant cooperatives from, among other things, distributing cannabis to their members. The Members, however, have a fundamental right and a liberty interest in obtaining and using cannabis for medicinal purposes that is guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment.

There is no question that the Members have an interest in the transactions which are the subject matter of this action. The Members would inevitably be on the other side of some of the very transactions the Government seeks to enjoin. The Members should be permitted to intervene because they are uniquely situated to assert both the medical necessity defense and a counterclaim based on the their fundamental right guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment.

1 II. FACTUAL BACKGROUND.

2 A. The instant federal lawsuits.

3 In January 1998, the Government filed six separate lawsuits against six 4 cooperative associations and individuals, seeking, among other things, a preliminary 5 and permanent injunction under the Controlled Substances Act (see 21 U.S.C. § 882) 6 to prevent these cooperative associations from distributing cannabis. See Complaints, 7 filed January 8, 1998 (Prayer). On or about May 19, 1998, the Court issued a 8 preliminary injunction as to each defendant enjoining it from engaging in the 9 manufacture, distribution or possession of marijuana in violation of section 841(a)(1) 10 of the Controlled Substances Act. See United States of America v. Cannabis 11 Cultivators Club, 1998 WL 257103, *19 (N.D. Cal. 1998).

12 In July 1998, the Government moved for an order to show cause why 13 defendants should not be held in contempt for failing to comply with the preliminary 14 injunction and for summary judgment. The hearing on the Government's motion is 15 scheduled for August 31, 1998. See Order, filed July 27, 1998. The Government's 16 initiation of this contempt proceeding demonstrates that it will seek to prevent the 17 defendant cooperatives from distributing cannabis to anyone, including those who, like 18 the Members, assert a medical necessity defense or, as we explain below, a 19 fundamental right guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment.

20 B. The Defendants and Counterclaimants-in-Intervention.

21 On the recommendation of their doctors, seriously ill Californians have gone to 22 the defendant cooperatives to obtain cannabis that was safe and affordable. For 23 example, Rebecca Nikkel used cannabis on the recommendation of her physician. See 24 Declaration of Rebecca Nikkel in Support of Motion for Leave to Intervene, filed and 25 served herewith ("Nikkel Decl."), ¶ 6. Ms. Nikkel is a member of the Marin Alliance 26 for Medical Marijuana. Id. ¶ 1. She has been a member since December 1997, and 27 she visits the Marin Alliance approximately every ten (10) days. Id. ¶ 8.

28

1 Ms. Nikkel suffers from severe and painful muscle spasms that are not treatable 2 by conventional medicines. She has fibromyalgia and multiple sclerosis. Id. ¶ 2.
3 Ms. Nikkel tried many conventional treatments and medicines, and only cannabis 4 effectively relieved the pain she experienced from muscle spasms. Nikkel Decl., ¶¶ 4.
5 6. One conventional medicine, baclofen, caused Ms. Nikkel to be unable to walk. Id.
6 ¶ 4. Another nearly caused her to die when she experienced a severe allergic reaction 7 which progressed to anaphylactic shock. Id. On the recommendation of her doctor, 8 Ms. Nikkel used cannabis to relieve the pain caused by the muscle spasms. Id. ¶ 6.
9 "The cannabis is the only medicine which effectively and safely alleviates the pain 10 caused by the muscle spasms. The use of cannabis is a medical necessity" for 11 Ms. Nikkel. Id. No other conventional medicine effectively manages the pain she 12 experiences. Id.

13 Other Californians also suffer severe pain from conditions such as arthritis and 14 cervical nerve damage which are not effectively treated by conventional medicines.
15 For many, cannabis is the only effective treatment for this pain and these conditions.
16 See Declaration of Edward Neil Brundridge in Support of Motion for Leave to 17 Intervene, filed and served herewith ("Brundridge Decl."), ¶ 4; Declaration of Ima 18 Carter in Support of Motion for Leave to Intervene, filed and served herewith ("Carter 19 Decl."), ¶ 10. For others, cannabis is the only medicine which maintains their health 20 and keeps them alive by stimulating their appetites. See Brundridge Decl., ¶¶ 7, 8; 21 Declaration of Lucia Y. Vier in Support of Motion for Leave to Intervene, filed and 22 served herewith ("Vier Decl."), ¶ 3.

23 Each of the Members uses cannabis on the recommendation of his or her 24 doctor. Nikkel Decl., ¶ 6; Brundridge Decl., ¶ 10; Carter Decl., ¶ 8; Vier Decl., ¶ 3.
25 Each of the Members has tried conventional medicines and found that cannabis is the 26 only medicine which effectively alleviates their pain, stimulates their appetite or 27 otherwise treats a chronic, medical condition. Nikkel Decl., ¶¶ 4-6; Brundridge Decl.,

28

1 ¶¶ 3-8; Carter Decl., ¶¶ 3-7, 10. Likewise, each of the Members visits one of the 2 defendant cooperatives and will suffer immediate and irreparable harm if it is closed.
3 Nikkel Decl., ¶¶ 1, 8; Brundridge Decl., ¶¶ 1, 7, 11; Carter Decl., ¶¶ 1, 7, 9, 10; Vier 4 Decl., ¶¶ 1, 5. If the cooperatives are prevented from distributing cannabis, the 5 Members will not be able legally to obtain cannabis that is safe and affordable. Id.

6 The Members are suffering a special harm as result of the relief the 7 Government seeks. In addition, the Members are not able to speak freely with their 8 doctors about their conditions and medical needs. Carter Decl., ¶ 8; Nikkel Decl., ¶ 7; 9 Brundridge Decl., ¶ 10. More importantly, the Members are not able to discuss with 10 their doctors the only medication which effectively alleviates their pain or stimulates 11 their appetite: cannabis. Id. Their privacy and relationships with their doctors have 12 been harmed and will continue to be harmed as a result of the Government's attempts 13 to obtain and enforce the preliminary injunction in these actions.

14 C. The Compassionate Use Act of 1996.

15 In 1996, the voters of the State of California passed a ballot initiative that 16 became known as the "Compassionate Use Act of 1996." See Calif. Health & Safety 17 Code § 11362.5. This initiative, now law, sought to ensure that seriously ill 18 Californians "have the right to obtain and use marijuana for medical purposes . . ."
19 upon the recommendation of their physicians. Id. Following passage of this act, 20 cooperative associations, including defendants, formed to provide "safe and affordable 21 distribution of marijuana to all patients in need of marijuana." Id.; see also Complaint 22 for Declaratory Relief, and Preliminary and Permanent Injunctive Relief, filed 23 January 9, 1998 in Case No. C•98-00088, ¶¶ 17-22 (alleging that defendant Oakland 24 Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative "from sometime early in 1997 to the present . . . [has] 25 been engaged in the sale or distribution of marijuana").

1 D. Changed circumstances in the instant litigation.

2 In July 1998, there was a change in the interests implicated in the instant 3 actions when the Government moved for an order to show cause why defendants 4 should not be held in contempt for allegedly not complying with the Court's 5 preliminary injunction and for summary judgment in the contempt proceeding. See 6 Plaintiff's Motion for An Order to Show Cause, etc., filed on or about July 6, 1998.
7 This order to show cause challenged the defendant cooperatives' medical necessity 8 defense that, despite the preliminary injunction, they could continue to provide 9 cannabis to members whose personal physicians had determined that they had no other 10 medical alternative to alleviate their serious medical conditions.

11 The Members' intervention in this litigation is necessary to facilitate the 12 Court's having a proper record upon which to evaluate and decide the Constitutional 13 and statutory issues implicated by the order to show cause re: contempt and the 14 Government's related motion for an order granting a summary judgment of civil 15 contempt (collectively, the "August 31 Proceedings"). See Declaration of Margaret S.
16 Schroeder in Support of Ex Parte Application, etc., filed and served herewith 17 ("Schroeder Decl."), ¶ 5. The Members' rights and interests will likely be affected by 18 the issues raised at the August 31 Proceedings. Id.

19 Since July 1998, when the Government filed the motions which are the subject 20 of the August 31 Proceedings, counsel for the Members have diligently attempted to 21 bring on this motion for leave to intervene to represent the unique position of the 22 Members. Id. Counsel's efforts were complicated by the defendant cooperatives' 23 members' secrecy, fears and physical conditions. Id. It took a significant period of 24 time just to identify, interview and obtain sworn statements from the Members, who 25 were among a larger group of potential intervenors. In fact, that process was not 26 complete itself until August 10. Accordingly, the motion is timely filed. Id.

1 III. ARGUMENT.

2 A. The Members should be permitted to intervene "of right".

3 The Members should be permitted to intervene as a matter of right. On a 4 timely application anyone shall be permitted to intervene in an action when the 5 applicant "claims an interest relating to the property or transaction which is the subject 6 of the action and the applicant is so situated that the disposition of the action may as a 7 practical matter impair or impede that person's ability to protect that interest, unless 8 the applicant's interest is adequately represented by existing parties." Fed. R. Civ. P.
9 24(a); see also Sagebrush Rebellion, Inc. v. Watt, 713 F.2d 525, 527 (9th Cir. 1983) 10 (reversing order denying intervention of right).

11 "Any doubt concerning the propriety of allowing intervention should be 12 resolved in favor of the proposed intervenors because it allows the court to resolve all 13 related disputes in a single action." Federal Sav. & Loan v. Falls Chase SP. Taxing 14 Dist., 983 F.2d 211, 216 (11th Cir. 1993). Rule 24 has traditionally received "a liberal 15 construction in favor of applicants for intervention." Washington State Bldg. & Const.
16 Trades v. Spellman, 684 F.2d 627, 630 (9th Cir. 1982) (allowing public interest group 17 that sponsored initiative being challenged to intervene as a matter of right); see also 18 Sierra Club v. U.S. E.P.A., 995 F.2d 1478, 1481 (9th Cir. 1993) (reversing order 19 denying intervention as of right).

20 As set forth below, the Members meet all the requirements of intervention as a 21 matter of right.

22 1. The motion to intervene is timely.

23 The Members have timely applied for leave to intervene. Whether a motion to 24 intervene is timely is determined by analyzing the following factors: (1) the stage of 25 the proceeding at which an applicant seeks to intervene; (2) the prejudice to other 26 parties; and (3) the reason for and the length of the delay. See Officers for Justice v.
27 Civil Service Com'n, 934 F.2d 1092, 1095 (9th Cir. 1991). In Officers for Justice, the 28

1 court reversed an order denying intervention on the ground that the applicant's motion 2 was untimely. The court held that the district court erroneously focused on the 3 amount of time that had passed since the commencement of the litigation sixteen years 4 earlier. Id. The proper focus is on the date the person attempting to intervene "should 5 have been aware his interests would no longer be protected adequately by the parties, 6 rather than the date the person learned of the litigation." Id. (internal quotations 7 omitted).

8 In this case, the Members learned in July 1998 that their interests would no 9 longer be adequately protected by the parties when the Government moved for its 10 order to show cause challenging the defendant cooperatives' reliance on the medical 11 necessity defense to provide cannabis to members who had a doctor's 12 recommendation. See Schroeder Decl., ¶¶ 5-6. Moreover, to be timely, an intervenor 13 does not have to move to intervene immediately. See S.E.C. v. Navin, 166 F.R.D.
14 435, 439 (N.D. Cal. 1995) (granting motion to intervene). In Navin, the applicant 15 moved to intervene after the court issued both a preliminary and permanent injunction 16 enjoining the defendants from violating the federal securities laws by making false and 17 misleading representations in connection with the sale of unregistered securities. The 18 court nevertheless permitted the applicant to intervene and file a complaint. In 19 addition, the timeliness requirement for intervention as of right should be treated more 20 leniently than for permissive intervention because of the likelihood of more serious 21 harm. United States v. State of Or., 745 F.2d 550, 552 (9th Cir. 1984) (reversing 22 order denying intervention as of right where applicant filed motion to intervene one 23 week before court entered order affecting applicant's interest).

24 There will be no prejudice to the other parties if the Members are permitted to 25 intervene. If the Government complains of prejudice, its concerns can have little to do 26 with timeliness. The Government cannot suggest that its problems are materially 27 different now than they would have been several weeks ago had the Members sought

28

1 to intervene then. See, e.g. id. at 553. The proceedings are at an early stage. No trial 2 date has been set. no discovery has been taken, no dispositive motions have been 3 heard and only a preliminary injunction has been issued.

4 The Members' motion is also timely because they only became aware last 5 month that their interests would not be adequately protected by defendants. and the 6 Members have worked diligently since then to bring on this motion. See Officers for 7 Justice, 934 F.2d at 1095; see also Schroeder Decl., ¶ 6. The Members are intervening 8 to assert a medical necessity defense and to file a counterclaim asserting their 9 fundamental right described below (see § III.A.2., infra). No party will be prejudiced 10 by this intervention. The Members have taken several weeks to file this motion 11 because of complications by the defendant cooperative members' secrecy, fears of 12 criminal prosecution and physical conditions and disabilities. Schroeder Decl., ¶ 6.

13 2. The Members have an interest in the transaction.

14 The Members should be permitted to intervene because they have an interest in 15 being able legally to obtain cannabis that is safe and affordable: the Members have a 16 fundamental right guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment to be free from governmental 17 interdiction of their personal, self-funded medical choice, in consultation with their 18 personal physician, to alleviate their suffering through the only effective treatment 19 available for them. This fundamental right admittedly has not as yet been recognized 20 in reported case law. However, it is in accord with the principles and teaching of the 21 United States Supreme Court in Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113, 154 (1973) (recognizing 22 a fundamental right to abortion), Eisenstadt v. Baird, 405 U.S. 438, 453-54 (1972)
23 (recognizing a fundamental right to contraception), Loving v. Virginia, 388 U.S. 1, 12 24 (1967) (recognizing a fundamental right to marriage), Griswold v. Connecticut, 25 381 U.S. 479, 484-85 (1965) (recognizing a fundamental right to marital privacy), 26 Skinner v. Oklahoma, 316 U.S. 535, 541-42 (1942) (recognizing a fundamental right

27

28

1 to procreate), and Pierce v. Society of Sisters, 268 U.S. 510, 534-35 (1925) 2 (recognizing a fundamental right to child rearing and education).

3 An applicant shall be permitted to intervene when "it claims an interest relating 4 to the property or transaction which is the subject of the action . . . ." Fed. R. Civ. P.
5 24(a)(2). In the instant actions, the Government seeks to enjoin the defendant 6 cooperatives from distributing cannabis. See Complaints, filed January 9, 1998.
7 (Prayer). By the contempt proceedings, the Government further seeks to prevent the 8 defendant cooperatives from distributing cannabis to anyone, including those with a 9 medical necessity defense or fundamental right.

10 The Members have a legal interest in obtaining cannabis. See Ex. D 11 (Counterclaim-in-Intervention for Declaratory and Injunctive Relief, ¶ 17); see also 12 Calif. Health & Safety Code § 11362.5(b)(1)(B) ("To ensure that seriously ill 13 Californians have the right to obtain and use marijuana for medical purposes where 14 that medical use is deemed appropriate and has been recommended by a physician 15 . . ."). To intervene, an applicant must have a "protectable interest." Sierra Club, 16 995 F.2d at 1481. In Sierra Club, the court of appeal reversed an order denying the 17 City of Phoenix's motion to intervene as of right and permissively in an action by the 18 Sierra Club against the Environmental Protection Agency. The court found that the 19 City had a right to intervene as a defendant in the action. "Our adversary process 20 requires that we hear from both sides before the interests of one side are impaired by a 21 judgment." Id. at 1483.

22 Each of the Members has found that cannabis is the only effective medicine to 23 alleviate their pain or to stimulate their appetite to keep them alive. See Nikkel Decl., 24 ¶ 6; Brundridge Decl., ¶¶ 4, 6, 8; Carter Decl., ¶ 10; Vier ¶ 3. Likewise, each of the 25 Members uses cannabis on the recommendation of his or her doctor. Nikkel ¶ 6; 26 Brundridge Decl., ¶ 10; Carter Decl., ¶ 8; Vier Decl., ¶ 3. The Members are the 27 beneficiaries of the Compassionate Use Act and the defendant cooperatives' operations

1 which the Government seeks to enjoin. When injunctive relief will have "direct, 2 immediate, and harmful effects upon a third party's legally protectable interests, that 3 party satisfies the 'interest' test of Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(2): he has a significantly 4 protectable interest that relates to the property or transaction that is the subject of the 5 action." Forest Conservation Council v. U.S. Forest Service, 66 F.3d 1489, 1494 6 (9th Cir. 1995) (reversing order denying intervention of right).

7 The "interest test" is "primarily a practical guide to disposing of lawsuits by 8 involving as many apparently concerned persons as is compatible with efficiency and 9 due process." Navin, 166 F.R.D. at 440 (citations omitted). There is no question that 10 the Members satisfy this test.

11 3. Disposition of these actions will as a practical matter impair the 12 Members' ability to protect the right to obtain cannabis.

13 If the Government's requested relief is granted, as a practical matter, the 14 Members' ability to obtain cannabis legally, that is safe and affordable, will be 15 severely impaired. Intervention of right shall be granted if the applicant "is so situated 16 that the disposition of the action may as a practical matter impair or impede the 17 applicant's ability to protect that interest . . . ." Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(2); see also 18 Sagebrush Rebellion, 713 F.2d at 528 (holding that adverse decision in suit would 19 impair the intervenor-society's interest in the preservation of birds and their habitats).

20 As discussed above, the Members have a protectable interest in obtaining 21 cannabis. If the defendant cooperatives are closed, the Members will not be able to 22 obtain cannabis legally. Nikkel Decl., ¶ 8; Brundridge Decl., ¶ 11; Carter Decl., ¶ 10; 23 Vier Decl., ¶ 5. The practical effect of the Government's obtaining a permanent 24 injunction is closure of the defendant cooperatives. An adverse decision in these 25 actions would plainly impair the Members' interest to legally obtain cannabis that is 26 safe and affordable. "This conclusion is fully in accord with our past decisions 27 recognizing practical limitations on the ability of intervention applicants to protect 28

1 interests in the subject litigation after court-ordered equitable remedies are in place."
2 See U.S. v. State of Or., 839 F.2d 635, 639 (9th Cir. 1988) (reversing order denying 3 intervention of right) (emphasis added). In addition, the Members can demonstrate 4 that the injunction sought by the Government poses a "tangible threat" to their 5 protectable interest because the Government has included in its prayer "those persons 6 in active concert or participation with [defendants] who receive actual notice of the 7 order," and the Members "could be legally bound by the court's decree." Forest 8 Conservation Counsel, 66 F.3d at 1496. Decisions in the instant actions may also, 9 under the principles of stare decisis, bar the Members from relitigating certain facts or 10 legal issues.

11 Although the Members' right to obtain and use cannabis does not arise under 12 the Controlled Substances Act, it is enough "that the interest is protectable under some 13 law, and that there is a relationship between the legally protected interest and the 14 claims at issue." Sierra Club, 995 F.2d at 1484. The Members satisfy this 15 requirement.

16 4. The Members' interest may not be adequately represented by the 17 parties.

18 The Members satisfy the last prong of the intervention of right rule. Their 19 interests are not adequately represented by existing parties. See Fed. R. Civ. P.
20 24(a)(2). "The proposed intervenors' burden to show that their interests may be 21 inadequately represented is minimal." Federal Sav. & Loan, 983 F.2d at 216 (original 22 emphasis); see also, Sagebrush Rebellion, 713 F.2d at 528 (same). In Sagebrush 23 Rebellion, the court of appeals found that the intervenor satisfied this minimal 24 showing for several reasons, including that the intervenor "offers a perspective which 25 differs materially from that of the present parties to this litigation." Id.

26 Here, the Members are the "seriously ill Californians" who need to use 27 cannabis because it is the only effective treatment for their pain or other chronic 28

1 conditions. The Members seek to intervene to file a counterclaim seeking declaratory 2 and injunctive relief concerning their fundamental right guaranteed by the Fifth 3 Amendment. No other party may be able to assert this claim. The Government 4 brought this action against individuals and the defendant cooperatives, and challenges.
5 as we understand it, whether these defendants having standing to assert adequately the 6 constitutional defenses and claims of their members. Hence, if granted intervention.
7 the Members will be able to insure that a proper record exists upon which to assert 8 such claims and defenses.

9 Moreover, the Members have suffered an "injury in fact." The Members seek 10 to assert constitutional rights, for which they have standing. They have suffered an 11 "actual or imminent" "injury in fact" as a result of the threat of being prohibited from 12 obtaining legal, safe and affordable cannabis. Hence, the injunction has caused or will 13 cause the injury in fact, and court intervention would redress their harm. See, e.g.
14 Bennett v. Spear, 117 S. Ct. 1154, 1163 (1997). For these reasons, the Members 15 satisfy the minimal burden of showing that the representation of their interests in this 16 action "may be" inadequate.

17 B. In the alternative, the Members should be granted permissive 18 intervention.

19 If the Members are not permitted to intervene as of right, they should be 20 granted permissive intervention. "Upon timely application anyone may be permitted to 21 intervene in an action . . . (2) when an applicant's claim or defense and the main 22 action have a question of law or fact in common." Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b). A court 23 may grant permissive intervention under Rule 24(b) if three conditions are met: (1) 24 the movant must show an independent ground for jurisdiction, (2) the motion must be 25 timely, and (3) the movant's claim or defense and the main action must have a 26 question of law and fact in common. Venegas v. Skaggs, 867 F.2d 527, 529 (9th Cir.

28

1 1989) (reversing order denying permissive intervention).<sup>2</sup> See also Bureerong v.
2 Uvawas, 167 F.R.D. 83, 85 (C.D. Cal. 1996) (granting government's ex parte motion 3 to intervene). If these conditions are met, "then the question of whether a party will 4 be allowed to intervene is within the sound discretion of the trial court." Id. The 5 Members meet all the requirements for permissive intervention.

6 Because the Members' claims are against the federal government and involve a 7 question of federal law, there are independent grounds for the Court's exercise of 8 subject matter jurisdiction. See 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331, 1346(a).

9 The Members' motion is also timely. See, § III.A.1, supra. In addition, the 10 parties to these actions will not be prejudiced if the Members are granted permissive 11 intervention. As discussed above, the proceedings have not proceeded to such a point 12 that the Government would be prejudiced by the Members' intervention: no trial date 13 has been set, no discovery has been taken, no dispositive motions have been heard and 14 only a preliminary injunction has issued. See, e.g. Bureerong, 167 F.R.D. at 86, n. 7 15 (finding no prejudice and that arguments against intervention went to merits of 16 movant's purposes for intervening rather than delay and prejudice).

17 Finally, the Members' defense of medical necessity and their proposed 18 counterclaim plainly have numerous questions of law and fact in common with the 19 instant actions. The existence of a "common question" is liberally construed. Id. at 20 85; see also Venegas, 867 F.2d at 530 (finding common questions of law and fact and 21 that "all of the considerations which guide the exercise of judicial discretion clearly 22 weighed in favor of permissive intervention").

25 2 The Venegas court also held that in deciding whether to permit permissive 26 intervention, a court should consider "whether the movant's 'interests are adequately 27 represented by existing parties.'" Venegas, 867 F.2d at 530 (citations omitted). As previously discussed, the Members interests are not adequately represented by existing parties. See, § III.A.4, supra.

1           Some of the common questions of fact and law are: (1) whether cannabis was 2 distributed in violation of the preliminary injunction, (2) whether cannabis was 3 distributed in violation of the Controlled Substances Act. (3) whether the medical 4 necessity defense applies, and (4) whether the injunction the Government seeks 5 violates the Members' fundamental right guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment to be 6 free from governmental interdiction of in their personal, self-funded medical choice, in 7 consultation with their personal physician, to alleviate their suffering through the only 8 effective treatment available for them. The facts and questions of law plainly arise out 9 of the same transactions alleged in the complaints and in support of the Government's 10 motions.

11           For these reasons, the Members should be granted permissive intervention.

12

13           IV.    CONCLUSION.

14           For the foregoing reasons, the Court should permit the Members to intervene as 15 of right. In the alternative, the Court should grant the Members permissive 16 intervention in these actions.

17           Dated: August 14, 1998.

Nikkel answers the allegations of the numbered paragraphs of the Complaint using the same paragraph numbers:

1. Nikkel is without knowledge or information sufficient to enable her to form a belief as to the truth or falsity of plaintiff's averments concerning its intent and state of mind. Answering the remaining allegation of paragraph 1, Nikkel avers that the Complaint speaks for itself and that provisions of the Controlled Substances Act (the "Act"), 21 U.S.C. § 801 et seq., are conclusions of law, which speak for themselves. Except as so averred, Nikkel denies the allegations of paragraph 1.

2. Nikkel avers that section 512(a) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 882(a), is a matter of law that speaks for itself and further avers upon information and belief that this Court has jurisdiction over the claims alleged pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1345 and that venue lies in this district. Except as so averred, Nikkel denies the allegations of paragraph 2.

3. Nikkel admits the allegations of paragraph 3 upon information and belief.

4. Nikkel avers upon information and belief that the Marin Alliance is an unincorporated association located at 6 School Street Plaza, Suite 210, Fairfax, California that operates as a not for profit organization pursuant to and in accordance with the statewide mandate of Proposition 215 to help provide medicine for members who need it. Except as so averred, Nikkel denies the allegations of paragraph 4.

5. Nikkel avers upon information and belief that Lynette Shaw ("Shaw") is the director of the Marin Alliance. Except as so averred, Nikkel is without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth or falsity of the allegations of paragraph 5.

6. Nikkel avers that 21 U.S.C. § 801 et seq. is a matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, Nikkel denies the allegations of paragraph 6.

1           7.       Nikkel avers that section 501(a) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 871(a), is a
2 matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, Nikkel denies the
3 allegations of paragraph 7.

4           8.       Nikkel avers that section 101 of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 801, is a matter of 5 law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, Nikkel denies the allegations of 6 paragraph 8 to the extent the quoted language is taken out of context. Nikkel 7 specifically denies that the findings excerpted in paragraph 8 represent all of the 8 Congressional findings in 21 U.S.C. § 801 that are pertinent to this action.

9           9.       Nikkel avers that section 102(6) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 802(6), is a 10 matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, Nikkel denies the 11 allegations of paragraph 9.

12          10.       Nikkel avers that section 202(b) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 812(b), is a 13 matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, Nikkel denies the 14 allegations of paragraph 10.

15          11.       Nikkel avers that section 202(c) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 812(c), is a 16 matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, Nikkel denies the 17 allegations of paragraph 11.

18          12.       Nikkel avers that section 401(a) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 841(a)(1), is a 19 matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, Nikkel denies the 20 allegations of paragraph 12.

21          13.       Nikkel avers that section 102(15) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 802(15), is a
22 matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, Nikkel denies the 23 allegations of paragraph 13.

24          14.       Nikkel avers that section 416(a) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 856(a)(1), is a
25 matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, Nikkel denies the 26 allegations of paragraph 14.

SIXTH DEFENSE

Nikkel is informed and believes, and on that basis alleges, that at all times relevant to the matters alleged in the Complaint, plaintiff was fully informed of the alleged rights it now asserts in its Complaint. Having such knowledge, plaintiff intentionally conducted itself in a manner inconsistent with the assertion of those rights and caused Nikkel to believe that it had relinquished said rights. As a result, plaintiff has waived the rights it now claims to assert.

SEVENTH DEFENSE

Nikkel's actions are lawful under the doctrine of necessity.

EIGHTH DEFENSE

The statutes and regulations upon which plaintiff relies, as applied herein, violate the Commerce Clause of the United States Constitution.

NINTH DEFENSE

The statutes and regulations upon which plaintiff relies, as applied herein, violate the substantive due process rights of life, privacy, freedom from government interference to use the most effective medication, bodily integrity and the doctor-patient relationship and privilege as recognized by the United States Constitution.

TENTH DEFENSE

The statutes and regulations upon which plaintiff relies, as applied herein, violate Nikkel's rights as recognized by the Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Amendments to the United States Constitution.

Nikkel's actions about which plaintiff complains are the result of entrapment.

FOURTEENTH DEFENSE

Nikkel's actions have caused no irreparable injury.

FIFTEENTH DEFENSE

The balancing of hardships weighs in favor of Nikkel's actions.

SIXTEENTH DEFENSE

Nikkel's actions are lawful as consistent with the public interest.

SEVENTEENTH DEFENSE

Nikkel's actions lawfully constitute an exercise of power retained by the State of California, and by the people of the State of California, under the Tenth Amendment to the United States Constitution.

EIGHTEENTH DEFENSE

Any alleged act or omission giving rise to this action was committed or omitted without knowledge of Nikkel.

WHEREFORE, Nikkel prays for judgment on the Complaint in her favor and against plaintiff as follows:

- (a) That plaintiff take nothing by reason of its Complaint;
- (b) That the Complaint be dismissed with prejudice;
- (c) That no declaration issue finding that Nikkel has violated the Controlled Substances Act;
- (d) That no permanent injunction issue;
- (e) That Nikkel be awarded her costs of suit and attorneys' fees incurred herein; and
- (f) For such other relief as the Court may deem just and proper.

Vier answers the allegations of the numbered paragraphs of the Complaint using the same paragraph numbers:

1. Vier is without knowledge or information sufficient to enable her to form a belief as to the truth or falsity of plaintiff's averments concerning its intent and state of mind. Answering the remaining allegation of paragraph 1, Vier avers that the Complaint speaks for itself and that provisions of the Controlled Substances Act (the "Act"), 21 U.S.C. § 801 et seq., are conclusions of law, which speak for themselves. Except as so averred, Vier denies the allegations of paragraph 1.

2. Vier avers that section 512(a) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 882(a), is a matter of law that speaks for itself and further avers upon information and belief that this Court has jurisdiction over the claims alleged pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1345 and that venue lies in this district. Except as so averred, Vier denies the allegations of paragraph 2.

3. Vier admits the allegations of paragraph 3 upon information and belief.

4. Vier avers upon information and belief that the Ukiah Coop is an unincorporated association located at 40A Pallini Lane, Ukiah, California that operates as a not for profit organization pursuant to and in accordance with the statewide mandate of Proposition 215 to help provide medicine for members who need it. Except as so averred, Vier denies the allegations of paragraph 4.

5. Vier avers upon information and belief that Cherrie Lovett ("Lovett") is the director of the Ukiah Coop. Except as so averred, Vier is without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth or falsity of the allegations of paragraph 5.

6. Vier is without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth or falsity of the allegations of paragraph 6.

7. Vier is without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth or falsity of the allegations of paragraph 7.

1           8.       Vier avers that 21 U.S.C. § 801 et seq. is a matter of law that speaks 2 for itself. Except as so averred, Vier denies the allegations of paragraph 8.

3           9.       Vier avers that section 501(a) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 871(a), is a
4 matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, Vier denies the allegations 5 of paragraph 9.

6           10.      Vier avers that section 101 of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 801, is a matter of 7 law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, Vier denies the allegations of 8 paragraph 10 to the extent the quoted language is taken out of context. Vier 9 specifically denies that the findings excerpted in paragraph 10 represent all of the 10 Congressional findings in 21 U.S.C. § 801 that are pertinent to this action.

11          11.      Vier avers that section 102(6) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 802(6), is a
12 matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, Vier denies the allegations 13 of paragraph 11.

14          12.      Vier avers that section 202(b) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 812(b), is a 15 matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, Vier denies the allegations
16 of paragraph 12.

17          13.      Vier avers that section 202(c) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 812(c), is a 18 matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, Vier denies the allegations
19 of paragraph 13.

20          14.      Vier avers that section 401(a) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 841(a)(1), is a
21 matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, Vier denies the allegations
22 of paragraph 14.

23          15.      Vier avers that section 102(15) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 802(15), is a
24 matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, Vier denies the allegations
25 of paragraph 15.

26          16.      Vier avers that section 416(a) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 856(a)(1), is a
27 matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, Vier denies the allegations 28 of paragraph 16.

ER0847

1           17.       Vier avers that section 416(a) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 856(a)(2), is a
2 matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, Vier denies the allegations
3 of paragraph 17.

4           18.       Vier avers that section 406 of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 846, is a matter of 5 law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, Vier denies the allegations of 6 paragraph 18.

7           19.       Vier avers that section 512(a) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 882(a), is a
8 matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, Vier denies the allegations
9 of paragraph 19.

10          20.       Vier avers upon information and belief that the Ukiah Coop is an 11 unincorporated association located at 40A Pallini Lane, Ukiah, California that operates 12 as a not for profit organization pursuant to and in accordance with the statewide
13 mandate of Proposition 215 to help provide medicine for members who need it. Vier
14 further avers upon information and belief that Lovett is the director of the Ukiah 15 Coop. Except as so averred, Vier denies the allegations of paragraph 20.

16          21.       Vier avers upon information and belief that the Ukiah Coop is an 17 unincorporated association located at 40A Pallini Lane, Ukiah, California that operates
18 as a not for profit organization pursuant to and in accordance with the statewide
19 mandate of Proposition 215 to help provide medicine for members who need it. Vier
20 further avers upon information and belief that Lovett is the director of the Ukiah 21 Coop. Except as so averred, Vier is without knowledge or information sufficient to 22 form a belief as to the truth or falsity of the allegations of paragraph 21.

23          22.       Vier avers upon information and belief that the Ukiah Coop is an 24 unincorporated association located at 40A Pallini Lane, Ukiah, California that operates
25 as a not for profit organization pursuant to and in accordance with the statewide
26 mandate of Proposition 215 to help provide medicine for members who need it. Vier
27 further avers upon information and belief that Lovett is the director of the Ukiah 28

1 Coop. Except as so averred, Vier is without knowledge or information sufficient to 2 form a belief as to the truth or falsity of the allegations of paragraph 22.

3 23. Vier avers upon information and belief that the Ukiah Coop is an
4 unincorporated association located at 40A Pallini Lane, Ukiah, California that operates
5 as a not for profit organization pursuant to and in accordance with the statewide
6 mandate of Proposition 215 to help provide medicine for members who need it. Vier
7 further avers upon information and belief that Lovett is the director of the Ukiah
8 Coop. Except as so averred, Vier is without knowledge or information sufficient to 9 form a belief as to the truth or falsity of the allegations of paragraph 23.

10 24. Vier avers upon information and belief that the Ukiah Coop is an 11 unincorporated association located at 40A Pallini Lane, Ukiah, California that operates
12 as a not for profit organization pursuant to and in accordance with the statewide
13 mandate of Proposition 215 to help provide medicine for members who need it. Vier
14 further avers upon information and belief that Lovett is the director of the Ukiah 15 Coop. Except as so averred, Vier is without knowledge or information sufficient to 16 form a belief as to the truth or falsity of the allegations of paragraph 24.

17 25. Vier avers upon information and belief that the Ukiah Coop is an 18 unincorporated association located at 40A Pallini Lane, Ukiah, California that operates
19 as a not for profit organization pursuant to and in accordance with the statewide
20 mandate of Proposition 215 to help provide medicine for members who need it. Vier
21 further avers upon information and belief that Lovett is the director of the Ukiah
22 Coop. Except as so averred, Vier is without knowledge or information sufficient to 23 form a belief as to the truth or falsity of the allegations of paragraph 25.

24 26. Vier refers to and incorporates by reference herein as if fully set forth 25 her answers to paragraphs 1 through 25 of the Complaint.

26 27. Vier is without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as 27 to the truth or falsity of the allegations of paragraph 27.

ER0849

1 intentionally conducted itself in such a way as to lead Vier to believe plaintiff 2 intentionally relinquished the rights and claims which it may have had against Vier.
3 Plaintiff is therefore estopped from seeking damages and any other relief based on the 4 allegations of the Complaint.

FIFTH DEFENSE

7 Vier is informed and believes, and on that basis alleges, that plaintiff 8 knowingly and unreasonably delayed in asserting the claims contained in the 9 Complaint, without good cause and under circumstances permitting and requiring 10 diligence, and thereby prejudiced Vier. For that reason, the Complaint and each 11 purported cause of action therein are barred by the doctrine of laches.

SIXTH DEFENSE

14 Vier is informed and believes, and on that basis alleges, that at all times 15 relevant to the matters alleged in the Complaint, plaintiff was fully informed of the 16 alleged rights it now asserts in its Complaint. Having such knowledge, plaintiff 17 intentionally conducted itself in a manner inconsistent with the assertion of those 18 rights and caused Vier to believe that it had relinquished said rights. As a result, 19 plaintiff has waived the rights it now claims to assert.

SEVENTH DEFENSE

22 Vier's actions are lawful under the doctrine of necessity.

24

EIGHTH DEFENSE

25 The statutes and regulations upon which plaintiff relies, as applied herein, 26 violate the Commerce Clause of the United States Constitution.

The Members answer the allegations of the numbered paragraphs of the Complaint using the same paragraph numbers:

1. The Members are without knowledge or information sufficient to enable them to form a belief as to the truth or falsity of plaintiff's averments concerning its intent and state of mind. Answering the remaining allegation of paragraph 1, the Members aver that the Complaint speaks for itself and that provisions of the Controlled Substances Act (the "Act"), 21 U.S.C. § 801 et seq., are conclusions of law, which speak for themselves. Except as so averred, the Members deny the allegations of paragraph 1.

2. The Members aver that section 512(a) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 882(a), is a matter of law that speaks for itself and further aver upon information and belief that this Court has jurisdiction over the claims alleged pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1345 and that venue lies in this district. Except as so averred, the Members deny the allegations of paragraph 2.

3. The Members admit the allegations of paragraph 3 upon information and belief.

4. The Members aver upon information and belief that the Oakland Coop is an unincorporated cooperative association located at 1755 Broadway Avenue in Oakland, California that operates as a not for profit organization pursuant to and in accordance with the statewide mandate of Proposition 215 to help provide medicine for members who need it. Except as so averred, the Members deny the allegations of paragraph 4.

5. The Members aver upon information and belief that Jeffrey Jones ("Jones") is the director of the Oakland Coop. Except as so averred, the Members are without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth or falsity of the allegations of paragraph 5.

1           6.       The Members aver that 21 U.S.C. § 801 et seq. is a matter of law that 2 speaks for itself. Except as so averred, the Members deny the allegations of paragraph 3 6.

4           7.       The Members aver that section 501(a) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 871(a), is 5 a matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, the Members deny the 6 allegations of paragraph 7.

7           8.       The Members aver that section 101 of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 801, is a
8 matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, the Members deny the 9 allegations of paragraph 8 to the extent the quoted language is taken out of context.
10 The Members specifically deny that the findings excerpted in paragraph 8 represent all 11 of the Congressional findings in 21 U.S.C. § 801 that are pertinent to this action.

12          9.       The Members aver that section 102(6) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 802(6), is 13 a matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, the Members deny the 14 allegations of paragraph 9.

15          10.       The Members aver that section 202(b) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 812(b), is 16 a matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, the Members deny the 17 allegations of paragraph 10.

18          11.       The Members aver that section 202(c) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 812(c), is 19 a matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, the Members deny the 20 allegations of paragraph 11.

21          12.       The Members aver that section 401(a) of the Act, 21 U.S.C.
22 § 841(a)(1), is a matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, the 23 Members deny the allegations of paragraph 12.

24          13.       The Members aver that section 102(15) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 802(15), 25 is a matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, the Members deny the 26 allegations of paragraph 13.

27

1           14.       The Members aver that section 416(a) of the Act, 21 U.S.C.
2 § 856(a)(1), is a matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, the 3 Members deny the allegations of paragraph 14.

4           15.       The Members aver that section 406 of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 846, is a
5 matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, the Members deny the 6 allegations of paragraph 15.

7           16.       The Members aver that section 512(a) of the Act, 21 U.S.C. § 882(a), is 8 a matter of law that speaks for itself. Except as so averred, the Members deny the 9 allegations of paragraph 16.

10          17.       The Members aver upon information and belief that the Oakland Coop
11 is an unincorporated cooperative association located at 1755 Broadway Avenue in 12 Oakland, California that operates as a not for profit organization pursuant to and in 13 accordance with the statewide mandate of Proposition 215 to help provide medicine
14 for members who need it. The Members further aver upon information and belief that 15 Jones is the director of the Oakland Coop. Except as so averred, the Members deny 16 the allegations of paragraph 17.

17          18.       The Members aver upon information and belief that the Oakland Coop
18 is an unincorporated cooperative association located at 1755 Broadway Avenue in 19 Oakland, California that operates as a not for profit organization pursuant to and in 20 accordance with the statewide mandate of Proposition 215 to help provide medicine
21 for members who need it. The Members further aver upon information and belief that 22 Jones is the director of the Oakland Coop. Except as so averred, the Members are 23 without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth or falsity 24 of the allegations of paragraph 18.

25          19.       The Members aver upon information and belief that the Oakland Coop
26 is an unincorporated cooperative association located at 1755 Broadway Avenue in 27 Oakland, California that operates as a not for profit organization pursuant to and in 28 accordance with the statewide mandate of Proposition 215 to help provide medicine

1 for members who need it. The Members further aver upon information and belief that 2 Jones is the director of the Oakland Coop. Except as so averred, the Members are 3 without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth or falsity
4 of the allegations of paragraph 19.

5           20. The Members aver upon information and belief that the Oakland Coop
6 is an unincorporated cooperative association located at 1755 Broadway Avenue in 7 Oakland, California that operates as a not for profit organization pursuant to and in 8 accordance with the statewide mandate of Proposition 215 to help provide medicine
9 for members who need it. The Members further aver upon information and belief that 10 Jones is the director of the Oakland Coop. Except as so averred, the Members are 11 without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth or falsity 12 of the allegations of paragraph 20.

13           21. The Members aver upon information and belief that the Oakland Coop
14 is an unincorporated cooperative association located at 1755 Broadway Avenue in 15 Oakland, California that operates as a not for profit organization pursuant to and in 16 accordance with the statewide mandate of Proposition 215 to help provide medicine
17 for members who need it. The Members further aver upon information and belief that 18 Jones is the director of the Oakland Coop. Except as so averred, the Members are 19 without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth or falsity 20 of the allegations of paragraph 21.

21           22. The Members aver upon information and belief that the Oakland Coop
22 is an unincorporated cooperative association located at 1755 Broadway Avenue in 23 Oakland, California that operates as a not for profit organization pursuant to and in 24 accordance with the statewide mandate of Proposition 215 to help provide medicine
25 for members who need it. The Members further aver upon information and belief that 26 Jones is the director of the Oakland Coop. Except as so averred, the Members are 27 without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth or falsity 28 of the allegations of paragraph 22.

1 may have had against the Members. Plaintiff is therefore estopped from seeking 2 damages and any other relief based on the allegations of the Complaint.

FIFTH DEFENSE

5 The Members are informed and believe, and on that basis allege, that plaintiff 6 knowingly and unreasonably delayed in asserting the claims contained in the 7 Complaint, without good cause and under circumstances permitting and requiring 8 diligence, and thereby prejudiced the Members. For that reason, the Complaint and 9 each purported cause of action therein are barred by the doctrine of laches.

SIXTH DEFENSE

12 The Members are informed and believe, and on that basis allege, that at all 13 times relevant to the matters alleged in the Complaint, plaintiff was fully informed of 14 the alleged rights it now asserts in its Complaint. Having such knowledge, plaintiff 15 intentionally conducted itself in a manner inconsistent with the assertion of those 16 rights and caused the Members to believe that it had relinquished said rights. As a 17 result, plaintiff has waived the rights it now claims to assert.

20 The Members' actions are lawful under the doctrine of necessity.

21

22

EIGHTH DEFENSE

23 The statutes and regulations upon which plaintiff relies, as applied herein, 24 violate the Commerce Clause of the United States Constitution.

NINTH DEFENSE

27 The statutes and regulations upon which plaintiff relies, as applied herein, 28 violate the substantive due process rights of life, privacy, freedom from government

1 interference to use the most effective medication, bodily integrity and the doctor-2 patient relationship and privilege as recognized by the United States Constitution.

4 TENTH DEFENSE

5 The statutes and regulations upon which plaintiff relies, as applied herein, 6 violate the Members' rights as recognized by the Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Amendments 7 to the United States Constitution.

9 ELEVENTH DEFENSE

10 The Members' actions are not unlawful purchase, but rather constitute joint 11 possession or joint use.

12

13 TWELFTH DEFENSE

14 The Members' actions are lawful as activities of ultimate users.

15

17 The Members' actions about which plaintiff complains are the result of 18 entrapment.

21 The Members' actions have caused no irreparable injury.

22

24 The balancing of hardships weighs in favor of the Members' actions.

25

26 SIXTEENTH DEFENSE

27 The Members' actions are lawful as consistent with the public interest.

28

1 SEVENTEENTH DEFENSE

2 The Members' actions lawfully constitute an exercise of power retained by the 3 State of California, and by the people of the State of California, under the Tenth 4 Amendment to the United States Constitution.

7 Any alleged act or omission giving rise to this action was committed or 8 omitted without knowledge of the Members.

10 NINETEENTH DEFENSE

11 Any alleged act or omission giving rise to this action was committed or 12 omitted without consent of the Members.

13
14 WHEREFORE, the Members pray for judgment on the Complaint in their favor 15 and against plaintiff as follows:

- 16 (a) That plaintiff take nothing by reason of its Complaint;
17 (b) That the Complaint be dismissed with prejudice;
18 (c) That no declaration issue finding that the Members have violated 19 the Controlled Substances Act;
20 (d) That no permanent injunction issue;

21

22 I, IMA CARTER, declare as follows:

23 1. I am a member of the Oakland Cannabis Buyers' 24 Cooperative in Oakland, California (the "Oakland Club"). I 25 am submitting this declaration in support of the motion for 26 leave to intervene in this action. Except where stated on 27 information and belief, I have personal knowledge of the 28

1 matters set forth in this declaration and could and would 2 testify competently to them if called on by the Court to do 3 so.

4       2. I am 55 years old. I suffer from several 5 different conditions and injuries which cause me significant 6 and constant pain. I use cannabis for several of these 7 conditions: congenital scoliosis, fibromyalgia and cervical 8 nerve damage which I suffered as a result of being involved 9 in several car accidents in which I was rear-ended. These 10 conditions which include cervical nerve damage in C4 through 11 C7 of my spine, cause me enormous pain in my back. This 12 pain is marked by frequent muscle spasms, and a recurring 13 shooting pain in my head. Cannabis is the only drug in my 14 experience that has effectively treated this pain.

15       3. I have tried numerous traditional medicines for 16 these conditions, none of which was effective. For example, 17 I took steroids and anti-inflammatory drugs. These drugs 18 have caused me to bleed internally.

19       4. I have also tried rhizotomy, which is a laser 20 treatment. During this treatment, a laser beam was burned 21 into the cervical nerves to create scar tissue. The 22 treatment required that I be awake during it and it was 23 excruciatingly painful. It is my understanding that 24 physicians have now discontinued prescribing rhizotomy 25 treatments because they are unbearably painful and useless.
26 The rhizotomy treatments did not relieve my back pain. This 27 pain feels like a hot burning pain going down my left arm 28 into my hand.

1           5.    In addition, I underwent breast reduction surgery to 2 relieve the scoliosis pain in my back. I also tried many 3 different forms of physical therapy, including various 4 exercises, ultrasound, ice packs, jacuzzi treatments and 5 others. None of these even touched the recurring shooting 6 pain I experience in my head.

7           6.    I also have a therapeutic electrical neuro-8 stimulator (a "TENS") unit that controls some of my pain from 9 the cervical nerve damage and scoliosis. However, the TENS 10 unit does not stop or dull in any way the shooting pain that 11 occurs in my head at frequent intervals. I am presently 12 taking morphine as prescribed by my doctor, but it--like the 13 TENS unit--does not stop or dull in any way the frequent pain 14 in my head.

15          7.    I first tried cannabis on the recommendation of my 16 nutritionist, and it is the only drug that I have used that 17 has dulled or stopped the pain. I was once forced to go 18 without cannabis. During this period of time, the pain was 19 completely disabling and prevented me from being able to 20 function. During this time, I could not leave my bedroom due 21 to the pain that recurred every few minutes, and therefore I 22 could not do any of my regular daily activities, such as 23 answering the phone, doing the dishes, running errands, 24 watching television, reading and taking care of my finances.

25          8.    I was afraid to ask my doctor for a recommendation 26 for cannabis. I was afraid of alienating him by asking him 27 for a drug which I understood the government was threatening 28 to prosecute doctors for prescribing. When I asked him, I

1 was nervous and upset. Nevertheless, I asked my doctor to 2 give me a written recommendation for cannabis and he agreed.
3 My doctor monitors my use of cannabis by seeing me 4 frequently and discussing my treatment. In addition, he 5 renews my letter of referral every few months. I feel that 6 my private relationship with my doctor is endangered because 7 of the government's threat of prosecution. The fear it has 8 caused me makes me unable to speak freely with my doctor 9 about my condition and my medical needs when a nurse or 10 assistant is present. Because of this fear, I had been 11 reluctant to discuss openly and extensively with my doctor 12 the possibility of using cannabis to treat my condition.

13 9. In addition, I feel that my privacy rights have 14 been violated as a result of plaintiff's action to close the 15 Oakland Club and the other defendant clubs to prevent the 16 medicinal use of cannabis. I live in constant fear that I 17 will be prosecuted for my use of cannabis and that my doctor 18 will be prosecuted for recommending that I use cannabis. I 19 also fear that my private conversations with my physician 20 and my medical records will be made public as a result of 21 the relief sought by plaintiff. If the Oakland Club is 22 closed, I will not be able legally to obtain cannabis, which 23 is the only effective treatment available to alleviate my 24 pain and frequent muscle spasms associated with congenital 25 scoliosis, fibromyalgia and nerve damage.

26 10. As described above, I have previously gone without 27 using cannabis. If the Oakland Club and other defendant 28

1 clubs are shut down or I am in some other way prohibited
 2 from obtaining cannabis, I will suffer immediate harm.
 3 Using cannabis is a medical necessity for me. When I am not 4 using cannabis, I am completely incapacitated and cannot 5 leave my room. Without cannabis, I experience intense 6 intervals of pain in my head that occur every few minutes.
 7 There is no drug other than cannabis that alleviates these 8 shooting pains. I have tried many traditional drugs, 9 including morphine, steroids, rhizotomy treatments and 10 breast reduction surgery, none of which has alleviated the 11 shooting pains.

12 I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing
 13 is true and correct.

14 Executed this 4th day of August, 1998 at Oakland, 15 California.

1 matters set forth in this declaration and could and would 2 testify competently to them if called on by the Court to 3 do so.

4       2. I am 58 years old. I had Hepatitis C which 5 caused damage to my liver. As a result, I am not able to 6 take many traditional medications.

7       3. I have severe arthritis in my right knee. The 8 arthritis is so extensive that I have had to use a cane 9 for the past year. My doctor wanted to prescribe 10 ibuprofen to relieve the swelling caused by the 11 arthritis, but I am allergic to ibuprofen. I understand 12 that ibuprofen is what my doctor generally recommends to 13 alleviate the swelling associated with arthritis. To 14 alleviate the pain caused by the arthritis, I have tried 15 other traditional medicines. These medicines were not 16 effective in relieving that pain. I was either allergic 17 to the traditional medications or they did not alleviate 18 my pain.

19       4. I have successfully used cannabis, however, to 20 alleviate this pain. In addition, cannabis also allows 21 me to be alert, which many of the traditional medicines 22 do not. Cannabis is the only medicine I have used which 23 effectively alleviates the pain caused by the arthritis.

24       5. The traditional medicines I have tried either 25 do not work or are so strong that I cannot participate in 26 the activities that I need to do every day. These 27 necessary daily activities include driving, taking my dog 28 out for walks, shopping, talking to other people, taking

1 care of my finances, riding public transportation, doing 2 the dishes, cleaning my house, reading and answering the 3 telephone. Cannabis, however, alleviates the pain 4 without preventing me from functioning in my daily life.

5       6. I also suffer from insomnia. The cannabis 6 helps me sleep and relieves my anxiety. Without 7 cannabis, I would not be able to sleep. Conventional 8 sleeping pills are highly addictive, and, for that 9 reason, I am not able to take them. I cannot handle 10 conventional sleeping medications and my doctor will not 11 prescribe them for me.

12       7. My doctor told me that I will need to enter the 13 liver institute very soon, which will put me in line for 14 a liver transplant in the next several years. This news 15 has caused me to suffer from anxiety and extreme 16 depression. I am presently seeing a therapist for 17 treatment for these conditions. As a result of my 18 anxiety and depression, I no longer had an appetite. I 19 use cannabis to relieve the stress of my depression and 20 to give me an appetite. I once went without cannabis, 21 and I lost 30 pounds in three weeks. I am presently 22 taking Prozac, which helps alleviate my anxiety and 23 depression, but it does nothing to stimulate my appetite.

24       8. Cannabis is the only drug that effectively 25 gives me an appetite. Without using cannabis, I believe 26 I would not be alive today. For this reason, the use of 27 cannabis is a medical necessity for me. There is no drug 28 other than cannabis that alleviates my pain and

1 depression and gives me the appetite I need to stay 2 alive. I have tried many traditional drugs, none of 3 which is effective in alleviating my pain and stimulating 4 my appetite. Many of these traditional drugs were not 5 effective because I was allergic to them.

6 9. There is another reason that I cannot take many 7 traditional medicines. I am a recovering drug abuser and 8 alcoholic. I cannot take many traditional pain relievers 9 because of these addictions. I become easily addicted to 10 traditional pain killers.

11 10. My doctor recommended that I use cannabis, but 12 he was afraid to give me a written recommendation for 13 fear of prosecution by the government and therefore would 14 not give me a written recommendation for cannabis.
15 Nevertheless, he telephoned the Oakland Club and gave it 16 an oral recommendation for cannabis for me. I feel that 17 my private relationship with my doctor has been damaged 18 because of the government's threat of prosecution and the 19 fear it has caused in my doctor to treat me with the only 20 effective medicine for alleviating my pain and 21 stimulating my appetite: cannabis. Because of this 22 fear, I feel that my doctor has been reluctant to discuss 23 cannabis as a possible treatment and he has been 24 reluctant to prescribe it.

25 11. In addition, I feel that my privacy rights have 26 been violated as a result of plaintiff's action to close the 27 Oakland Club and the other defendant clubs to prevent the 28

1 medicinal use of cannabis. I live in constant fear that I 2 will be prosecuted concerning my use of cannabis and that my 3 doctor will be prosecuted for recommending that I use 4 cannabis. I also fear that my private conversations with my 5 physician and my medical records will be made public as a 6 result of the relief sought by plaintiff. If the Oakland 7 Club and the other defendant clubs are closed, I will suffer 8 immediate harm since I will not be able legally to obtain 9 cannabis, which is the only effective treatment available to 10 alleviate my pain and stimulate my appetite.

11 I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing
12 is true and correct.

13 Executed this 5th day of August, 1998 at San Francisco, 14 California.

2       More than seven months after these actions commenced; almost five months after the 3 March 24, 1998 hearing on the United States' motions for preliminary injunction; nearly three 4 months after the Court issued its May 13, 1998 Memorandum Opinion and Order and May 19, 5 1998 Preliminary Injunction Orders; and more than one month after the United States moved to 6 hold three groups of non-compliant defendants<sup>1</sup> in civil contempt and to modify the Preliminary 7 Injunction Orders, Edward Neil Brundrige, Ima Carter, Rebecca Nikkel, and Lucia Y. Vier 8 (collectively the "Members") move to intervene in these actions. The Members' motion should be 9 denied. It is far too late in the game for the Members to intervene in these actions, particularly 10 now, in the context of civil contempt proceedings. Indeed, courts have uniformly held that 11 intervention is inappropriate in the context of contempt proceedings. Intervention by the Members 12 also might prejudice to the United States by delaying resolution of the government's motions to 13 hold the non-compliant defendants in civil contempt and to modify the Preliminary Injunction 14 Orders. Nor do the Members deny that they have been aware of these actions since they were 15 commenced, and none of the Members' excuses for delay is persuasive. Finally, the Members do 16 not have a protectable interest in obtaining marijuana, for it is unlawful under the Controlled 17 Substances Act, 21 U.S.C. § 844, and the Members' interests appear to be adequately represented 18 by the existing parties. For all these reasons, the Members' motion to intervene should be denied.

ARGUMENT

L THE MEMBERS' MOTION TO INTERVENE AS OF RIGHT SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE IT IS UNTIMELY; WOULD PREJUDICE THE UNITED STATES; AND BECAUSE THE MEMBERS ARE ADEQUATELY REPRESENTED BY EXISTING PARTIES

Intervention in the federal courts is governed by Rule 24 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Rule 24(a), which governs intervention of right, provides:

(a) Intervention of Right. Upon timely application anyone shall be permitted to intervene in an action: (1) when a statute of the United States confers an unconditional right to intervene; or (2) when the applicant claims an interest relating to the property or transaction which is the subject of the action and the applicant is so situated that the disposition of the action may as a practical matter impair or impede the applicant's ability to protect that interest, unless the applicant's interest is adequately represented by existing parties.

The Members seek to intervene pursuant to subsection (2) of Rule 24(a). The Ninth Circuit has adopted four requirements for granting intervention of right under Rule 24(a)(2):

(1) the application for intervention must be timely; (2) the applicant must have a significantly protectable interest relating to the property or transaction that is the subject of the transaction; (3) the applicant must be so situated that disposition of the action may, as a practical matter, impair or impede the applicant's ability to protect that interest; and (4) the applicant's interest must be inadequately represented by the existing parties in the lawsuit.

Northwest Forest Resource Council v. Glickman, 82 F.3d 825, 836 (9th Cir. 1996) (citations omitted).

In these actions, the Members' motion to intervene should be denied because it is untimely, because the Members do not have a protectable interest in obtaining marijuana under the Controlled Substances Act, and because the Members appear to be adequately represented by existing parties.

A. The Members' Motion to Intervene is Untimely

As the language of Rule 24(a) makes clear, in considering a motion for intervention, "the court where the action is pending must first be satisfied as to timeliness." NAACP v. New York, 413 U.S. 345, 365 (1973). Indeed, "[t]imeliness is 'the threshold requirement' for intervention as of right." League of United Latin American Citizens v. Wilson, 131 F.3d 1297, 1302 (9th Cir. 1997) (quoting United States v. Oregon, 913 F.2d 576, 588 (9th Cir. 1990)). If a court decides

1 that a motion to intervene was not timely, it "need not reach any of the remaining elements of Rule 2 24." United States v. Washington, 86 F.3d 1499, 1503 (9th Cir. 1996).

3 In the Ninth Circuit, courts generally look to three factors in determining whether a motion 4 to intervene is timely: "(1) the stage of the proceeding at which the applicant seeks to intervene, 5 (2) the prejudice to other parties; and (3) the reason for and length of the delay." League of 6 United Latin American Citizens, 131 F.3d at 1302 (internal quotation omitted). In considering 7 these factors, a court must be mindful that "any substantial lapse of time weighs heavily against 8 intervention." Washington, 86 F.3d at 1503. See also United States v. Blue Chip Stamp Co., 272 9 F. Supp. 432, 436 (C.D. Cal. 1967) ("[T]he courts do not look with favor upon one who, fully 10 aware of what has transpired, fails to act on his rights and is unreasonably tardy in filing a petition 11 for intervention."), affirmed, 389 U.S. 580 (1968). The determination of timeliness should be made 12 in each case in light of the circumstances of the litigation. As the Supreme Court has indicated, 13 "[t]imeliness is to be determined from all the circumstances." NAACP v. New York, 413 U.S. at 14 366.

15 Under any of the factors set forth in League of United Latin American Citizens, the 16 Member's Motion to Intervene must be denied as untimely. First, these actions have reached a 17 stage of proceedings in which intervention is inappropriate. On May 13, 1998, the Court rendered 18 its decision on the United States' motions for preliminary injunctions, and entered six preliminary 19 injunctions requested by the United States on May 19, 1998. Based on the open and notorious 20 violations of the Preliminary Injunction Orders by the non-compliant defendants, the United States 21 moved to hold these defendants in civil contempt on July 6, 1998, and to modify the Injunction 22 Orders to authorize the United States Marshal to close the defendant cannabis clubs. The hearing 23 on this matter is scheduled to be heard on August 31, 1998.

24 In these circumstances, the federal courts, including the Ninth Circuit, have consistently 25 denied motions for intervention where the motion was first raised in the context of contempt 26 proceedings. In United States v. Fitch, 472 F.2d 548 (9th Cir.) (per curiam), cert. denied, 412

1 U.S. 954 (1973), the Ninth Circuit affirmed the denial of a motion to intervene, brought by a third 2 party who had been indicted by a federal grand jury, who had sought to intervene in a civil 3 contempt proceeding against two witnesses who had refused to testify before the same grand jury.
4 The Ninth Circuit “agree[d] with the district court that [the witness], as a matter of right was not 5 entitled to intervene.” Id. at 549-50. Although noting that Fed. R. Crim. P. 12 might permit a 6 protective order under appropriate circumstances, the Ninth Circuit held that the third party 7 nonetheless was not entitled “to make himself a party to a civil contempt proceeding before the 8 district court.” Id. at 550.

9 This same conclusion was reached by the Tenth Circuit in NLRB v. Shurtenda Steaks, Inc., 10 424 F.2d 192 (10th Cir. 1970). In that case, a union had moved to intervene in a civil contempt 11 proceeding brought by the National Labor Relations Board. The Tenth Circuit denied the petition 12 to intervene because “the union could have intervened in the enforcement proceeding, but failed to 13 do so,” instead waiting until the Board had initiated contempt proceedings. Id. at 194. In 14 pertinent part, the court concluded that “[w]e believe that, absent extraordinary and unusual 15 circumstances, intervention, by a party who did not participate in the litigation giving rise to the 16 judgment claimed to be violated, should not be permitted.” Id.

17 To the same effect is Preston v. Thompson, 589 F.2d 300 (7th Cir. 1978). In that case, a 18 prisoner class action, the Seventh Circuit affirmed the district court’s denial of a motion to 19 intervene where the complaint had been filed on August 31, 1978, the court had issued a 20 preliminary injunction on November 3, 1978, but the intervenors “did not present its motion until 21 November 28, over three weeks after the preliminary relief was granted.” Id. at 194. Noting that 22 the proposed intervenors “were aware of the litigation,” but “did nothing until three weeks after 23 the State received an adverse decision,” the Seventh Circuit held that the district court’s order 24 denying the motion to intervene was proper. Id.

25 Likewise, the Ninth Circuit has also affirmed the denial of a motion to intervene after the 26 entry of preliminary injunctive relief, but before contempt proceedings had been initiated. In

1 League of United Latin American Citizens, a foundation involved in immigration issues sought to 2 intervene in the litigation challenging Proposition 187 in California. Noting that the district court 3 had already issue a temporary restraining order and a subsequent preliminary injunction, the Ninth 4 Circuit concluded that “the fact that the district court has substantively -- and substantially -- 5 engaged the issues in this case weighs heavily against allowing intervention as of right under Rule 6 24(a)(2).” 131 F.3d at 1303.

7 This uniform line of authority demonstrates that these related actions have reached a stage 8 of proceedings in which intervention by the Members would be inappropriate.

9 Second, intervention by the Members would prejudice the United States by possibly 10 causing delay to the Court’s consideration of the government’s motions to hold the non-compliant 11 defendants in civil contempt, and to modify the Preliminary Injunction Orders. Courts in the Ninth 12 Circuit have consistently found prejudice to existing parties when a proposed intervention could 13 have the effect of prolonging the litigation. See, e.g., League of United Latin American Citizens, 14 131 F.3d 1304 (intervention by foundation “will have the inevitable effect of prolonging the 15 litigation to some degree,” and that this “counsels against granting [the foundation] motion.”); 16 Washington, 86 F.3d at 1504 (district court did not abuse discretion in determining that “other 17 parties would be prejudiced by the requested intervention, because intervention would complicate 18 the issues and prolong the litigation”); Associated General Contractors v. Secretary of Commerce, 19 77 F.R.D. 31, 39 (C.D. Cal. 1977) (“The concept of prejudice to the original parties * * * 20 encompasses prejudice not only to the original parties’ substantive legal rights, but also to their 21 right to proceed without delay.”).

22 Similarly, courts have found prejudice to existing parties when a motion to intervene has 23 been raised in the context of contempt proceedings. In Sierra Club v. U.S. Army Corp. of 24 Engineers, 709 F.2d 175 (2d Cir. 1983), for example, the Second Circuit affirmed the denial of 25 motion to intervene raised in a civil contempt proceeding, holding that “[t]o expand the number of 26 litigants * * * might unduly delay the contempt proceeding,” and that “[i]n a case of this nature,

1 irrespective of the outcome, it is important that the district court proceed expeditiously * * * *”
2 Id. at 177. See also Wilder v. Bernstein, No. 78-CIV-957 (RJW), 1994 WL 30480, at * 4
3 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 28, 1994) (“Unless restricted, granting intervention could conceivably permit 4 applicants to delay adjudication of the contempt proceeding and, hence, prejudice existing parties 5 to the case.”).

6 Similarly here, where the Members are asking the Court to hear their motion to intervene 7 on the same date and time as the hearing on the government’s motions to hold the non-compliant 8 defendants in civil contempt and to modify the Preliminary Injunction Orders, allowing intervention 9 might extend the Court’s deliberations on the contempt issue, thereby prejudicing the United 10 States’ interest in an expeditious resolution of these contempt matters.

11 Third, and finally, the Members’ explanation for their delay in seeking intervention is 12 unpersuasive. The Members do not deny that they have been aware of these related actions since 13 their inception. Rather, they assert that they only became aware that “their interests would no 14 longer be adequately protected by the parties when the Government moved for its order to show 15 cause challenging the defendant cooperatives’ reliance on the medical necessity defense to provide 16 cannabis to members who had a doctor’s recommendation.” Motion for Leave to Intervene at 8.
17 This explanation, quite simply, is unreasonable. From the very outset of these related actions, the 18 United States has sought to enjoin the defendants from distributing, cultivating, or possessing with 19 the intent to distribute or cultivate marijuana for any reason at all, including those in which the 20 defendants have alleged a medical necessity defense. Consequently, the Members’ contention that 21 it was not until the United States initiated contempt proceedings that they realized their interests 22 were not adequately protected is simply incorrect.

25 26
27

1           B.     The Members Do Not Have a Protectable Interest in Obtaining Marijuana

2           The Members' motion to intervene also fails to satisfy the Ninth Circuit's requirement that a 3 party seeking intervention demonstrate it has a significantly protectable interest relating to the 4 property or transaction at issue. Here, the proffered interest the Members seek to protect -- the 5 right to continue obtaining marijuana from the three non-compliant cannabis clubs -- is not a 6 protectable interest because the Members have no right to obtain marijuana under the Controlled 7 Substances Act, 21 U.S.C. § 844. Nor does the passage of Proposition 215 change this 8 conclusion. As this Court recognized in the context of distribution, "[a] state law which purports 9 to legalize the distribution of marijuana for any purpose * * * nonetheless directly conflicts with 10 federal law, 21 U.S.C. § 841(a)(1)." May 13, 1998 Memorandum and Order at 17. Similarly, 11 Proposition 215 in no way undermines the Controlled Substances Act's prohibition on the 12 possession of marijuana. Hence, the Members' do not have a protectable interest in obtaining the 13 drug.

14           C.     The Interests of the Members are Adequately Represented by the Non-Compliant
15                    Defendants

16           Finally, the Members' motion to intervene should be denied because their interests are 17 adequately represented by existing parties. "In determining whether an applicant's interest is 18 adequately represented by the parties, we consider (1) whether the interest of a present party is 19 such that it will undoubtedly make all the intervenor's arguments; (2) whether the present party is 20 capable and willing to make such arguments; and (3) whether the would-be intervenor would offer 21 any necessary elements to the proceedings that other parties would neglect." Northwest Forest 22 Resource Council, 82 F.3d at 838. In establishing the adequacy of representation, "[t]he 23 prospective intervenor bears the burden of demonstrating that existing parties do not adequately 24 represent its interests." Id. (citing Sagebrush Rebellion, Inc. v. Watt, 713 F.2d 525, 528 (9th Cir.
25 1983)). In addition, "[u]nder well-settled precedent in this circuit, [w]here an applicant for 26 intervention and an existing party have the same ultimate objective, a presumption of adequacy of

1 representation arises." League of United Latin American Citizens, 131 F.3d at 1297 (emphasis 2 supplied) (internal quotation omitted)).

3 In these related actions, the non-compliant defendants seek exactly the same objective as 4 the Members; namely, to continue the operations of the three non-compliant cannabis clubs.
5 Because there can be no doubt that the non-compliant defendants have, and will continue to 6 vigorously pursue this ultimate objective, the interests of the Members are adequately represented 7 by these defendants.<sup>2</sup>

8 II. THE COURT ALSO SHOULD DENY THE MEMBERS' MOTION FOR 9 PERMISSIVE INTERVENTION

10 The Members' request that the Court grant them leave to intervene permissively should also 11 be denied. Rule 24(b), which governs permissive intervention, provides:

12 (b) Permissive Intervention. Upon timely application anyone may be permitted to 13 intervene in an action: (1) when a statute of the United States confers a conditional right to 14 intervene; or (2) when an applicant's claim or defense and the main action have a question 15 of law or fact in common. When a party to an action relies for ground of claim or defense 16 upon any statute or executive order administered by a federal or state governmental officer or agency or upon any regulation, order, requirement, or agreement issued or made pursuant to the statute or executive order, the officer or agency upon timely application may be permitted to intervene in the action. In exercising its discretion the court shall consider whether the intervention will unduly delay or prejudice the adjudication of the rights of the original parties.

17 In the Ninth Circuit, the three prerequisites for granting a motion for permissive intervention are:
18 "(1) an independent grounds for jurisdiction exists; (2) the motion is timely; and (3) the applicants's 19 claim or defense and the main action have a question of law or a question of fact in common."

20 Northwest Forest Resource Council, 82 F.3d at 839.

21 In these related actions, the Members request for permissive intervention is both untimely 22 and would cause prejudice to the United States, for the reasons described above. In determining

23 24 <sup>2</sup> The Members also contend that their interests are not adequately represented by the non-25 compliant defendants because the United States has challenged these parties standing to raise the 26 defenses of medical necessity and substantive due process on behalf of their customers. Because 27 the Members and non-compliant defendants share the same ultimate objectives, however, the fact that the government has raised this issue of standing is insufficient to overcome the "presumption of adequacy of representation" between them. Id. at 1297.

1 | timeliness under Rule 24(b)(2) permissive intervention, the Ninth Circuit has indicated that a court
2 | should consider "precisely the same three factors" -- the stage of the proceedings, the prejudice to
3 | existing parties, and the length of and reason for delay -- as are considered in determining
4 | timeliness under Rule 24(a)(2) intervention of right. See League of United Latin American
5 | Citizens, 131 F.3d at 1308. The Ninth Circuit has made clear, however, that "in the context of 6 | permissive intervention * * * we analyze the timeliness element more strictly than we do with 7 | intervention as of right." Id. Thus, in League of United Latin American Citizens, the court of 8 | appeals affirmed the denial of a motion for permissive intervention, holding that "[a] fortiori,
9 | our previous conclusion that [the foundation's] intervention motion was untimely is controlling."
10 | Id.

11 | In these related actions, for the same reasons set forth above, see supra Part I.A., the 12 | Members' motion for permissive intervention should be denied as untimely.

13 | In addition, the Court's decision on a motion for permissive intervention is committed to its
14 | discretion, and it may deny intervention even if the prerequisites of Rule 24(b) are met. See 7C
15 | Charles Alan Wright, Arthur R. Miller & Mary Kay Kane, Federal Practice and Procedure § 1913
16 | (2d ed. 1986) ("It is wholly discretionary with the court whether to allow intervention under Rule
17 | 24(b) and even though * * * there is a common question of law or fact, or the requirements of 18 | Rule 24(b) are otherwise satisfied, the Court may refuse to allow intervention."). Here, the
19 | Members have waited through the extensive briefing and argument on the United States' motion
20 | for preliminary injunctive relief, the Court's Memorandum Opinion and Order and entry of the 21 | Preliminary Injunction Orders, and the government's motions for civil contempt and to modify the
22 | Injunction Orders, before finally moving to enter this litigation a mere 17 days before the hearing
23 | on these motions, which is scheduled for August 31, 1998. The Members entrance into the case
24 | now will only prolong the litigation and prejudice the United States as it prepares for the August
25 | 31 hearing and for the further disposition of this case. Moreover, the Members will add no new or
26 | unique arguments to the briefing already before the Court, as the current defendants are raising the

1 very issues and defenses that the Members would assert. Given these circumstances, even if the 2 Court finds that the Members have met the prerequisites of Rule 24(b), the equities of the current 3 situation should lead the Court to exercise its discretion and deny the motion for permissive 4 intervention.

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

"[A] contempt proceeding does not open to reconsideration the legal or factual basis of the order alleged to have been disobeyed and thus become a retrial of the original controversy." Maggio v. Zeitz, 333 U.S. 56, 69 (1948). Yet this is precisely what the non-compliant defendants<sup>1</sup> are attempting to do here. Rather than present any specific evidence justifying their non-compliance with this Court's May 19, 1998 Preliminary Injunction Orders, to say nothing of their ongoing violations of the Controlled Substances Act, 21 U.S.C. §§ 841(a)(1); 846; 856(a)(1), the non-compliant defendants merely assert that they are entitled to a jury trial, and that they will eventually present evidence in support of their alleged defenses at that time.

This Court should no longer tolerate the non-compliant defendants' open and notorious defiance of the May 19, 1998 Preliminary Injunction Orders. The Supreme Court has admonished that "[t]he procedure to enforce a court's order commanding or forbidding an act should not be so inconclusive as to foster experimentation with disobedience." Maggio, 333 U.S. at 69. The non-compliant defendants' flagrant violations of the Preliminary Injunction Orders not only are causing irreparable injury to the United States, but also are calling into question the authority of the Court and the rule of law. This should go on no longer.

The uncontroverted facts in these cases establish that the non-compliant defendants are in flagrant violation of this Court's Preliminary Injunction Orders. Virtually since the entry of these Injunction Orders on May 19, 1998, these defendants have announced to the world that they will continue to distribute marijuana (and have, in fact, continued such distribution), in violation of both this Court's specific Injunction Orders and federal law. This Court, therefore, should grant the United States' motion for summary judgment to hold them in civil contempt. For these same reasons, the Court should grant the United States' motion for modification of the Preliminary

1 Injunction Orders authorizing the United States Marshal to forcibly close those clubs being 2 operated and maintained by the non-compliant defendants.

3 In addition, defendants Oakland Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative and Jeffery Jones' ("OCBC 4 Defendants") motion to dismiss should be denied because their proffered interpretation of 21 5 U.S.C. § 885(d) is both unsupportable and illogical. The OCBC Defendants' argument not only 6 does violence to the plain language of the Controlled Substances Act, but also to the unmistakable 7 intent of that law, which is to provide the means to "combat" the distribution of illegal drugs, not 8 to immunize those who engage in such actions.

9 ARGUMENT

10 I. THE UNITED STATES HAS ESTABLISHED A PRIMA FACIE CASE THAT THE 11 NON-COMPLIANT DEFENDANTS ARE IN CONTEMPT OF THE MAY 19, 1998 PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION ORDERS

12 The non-compliant defendants' first contention, that the United States has not made a 13 prima facie showing of contempt, see Defendants' Memorandum in Opposition to Plaintiff's 14 Motion to Show Cause, and for Summary Judgment ("Show Cause Opp.") at 4-5, cannot be taken 15 seriously. The defendants do not deny that they are currently engaged in the distribution of 16 marijuana, or that they are using the premises of the buildings which house the defendant 17 cannabis clubs for the purposes of distributing marijuana. Nor do they take factual issue with any 18 of the evidence produced by the United States. Instead, they offer up wholly insubstantial 19 evidentiary objections to this evidence, which smack more of gamesmanship than serious legal 20 analysis. Indeed, the Supreme Court has specifically cautioned that civil contempt proceedings 21 are not be "'treated as an invitation to a game of hare and hounds, in which the witness must 22 testify only if cornered at the end of the chase.'" United States v. Rylander, 460 U.S. 752, 762 23 (1983) (quoting United States v. Bryan, 338 U.S. 323, 331 (1950)). Because this is precisely what 24 the non-compliant defendants are attempting to do here, and because the United States has more 25 than made a prima facie showing that each of the non-compliant defendants is in contempt of the 26
27

1 Court's Preliminary Injunction Orders, the defendants' contention that the government has not 2 established a prima facie case of civil contempt must be rejected.<sup>2</sup>

3 The United States has produced individualized evidence of actual violations with respect 4 to each group of non-compliant defendants. With respect to defendants Oakland Cannabis 5 Buyers' Cooperative and Jeffrey Jones ("OCBC Defendants"), the United States produced the 6 OCBC's own World Wide Web page, which states that: "Currently, we are providing medical 7 cannabis and other services to over 1,300 members," Exhibit 3 July 6, 1998 Declaration of Mark 8 T. Quinlivan ("Quinlivan Dec."),<sup>3</sup> and a facsimile transmission from defendant Jones to the United 9 States Attorney which announced that, on May 21, 1998, the OCBC would engage in the 10 distribution of marijuana on May 21, 1998. Id. Exhibit 1. The United States also produced the 11 eyewitness testimony of a DEA Special Agent, Peter Ott, who, on May 21, 1998, two days after 12 this Court had entered the Preliminary Injunction Orders, personally observed an individual who 13 identified himself as defendant Jones distribute marijuana to several individuals in front of news 14 cameras, and further observed ten additional over-the-counter sales of marijuana by the employees 15 of the OCBC. Declaration of Special Agent Peter Ott ("Ott Dec.") ¶¶ 3-4. And the United States 16 produced evidence of two telephone calls made to the OCBC Defendants by undercover DEA 17 agents, again following entry of the Preliminary Injunction Orders, which confirmed that the 18 OCBC was nonetheless open for business and accepting new members. Declaration of Special 19 Agent Bill Nyfeler ("Nyfeler Dec.") ¶ 5; Declaration of Special Agent Dean Arnold ("Arnold 20 Dec.") ¶ 3.

21 _____
22 <sup>2</sup> Indeed, the arguments advanced by the OCBC Defendants in their Motion to Dismiss, see 23 infra Parts IV-V, would not make any sense if the OCBC was not continuing to distribute 24 marijuana.

25 <sup>3</sup> The OCBC's current Web page, which indicates that it was updated on August 12, 1998, 26 makes the very same statement. See Exhibit 1 to August 24, 1998 Declaration of Mark T.
27 Quinlivan. Moreover, the Web page also lists the "Bud Bar hours" as being from "11 am through 28 7 pm Mondays and Fridays, 11 am until 1 pm Tuesdays through Thursdays, and 1-4 pm Saturdays." Id.

1 The evidence regarding the other two groups of defendants is similar. With respect to the 2 defendants Marin Alliance for Medical Marijuana and Lynnette Shaw ("Marin Defendants"), the 3 United States produced evidence that defendant Shaw had stated that the Marin Alliance was 4 remaining open for business, and that she would continue to distribute marijuana even if the 5 Marin Alliance was closed. Exhibit 5 to Quinlivan Dec. The United States also produced 6 eyewitness testimony from a DEA Special Agent, Bill Nyfeler, who, on May 27, 1998, personally 7 observed 14 individuals enter the Marin Alliance over a two and one-half hour period, several of 8 whom, upon exiting the Marin Alliance, would roll what appeared to be marijuana cigarettes and 9 smoke them in the area directly outside the Marin Alliance. Nyfeler ("Nyfeler Dec.") ¶ 3. And 10 the United States produced evidence of two telephone calls made to the Marin Defendants by 11 undercover DEA agents, following entry of the Preliminary Injunction Orders, which confirmed 12 that the Marin Alliance was open for business and accepting new members. Id. ¶ 6; Arnold Dec. ¶ 13 4.<sup>4</sup> Finally,

14 With respect to the Ukiah Cannabis Buyer's Club, Cherrie Lovett, Marvin Lehrman, and 15 Mildred Lehrman ("Ukiah Defendants"), the United States produced evidence that defendant 16 Marvin Lehrman had publicly stated that the UCBC was there to supply medical marijuana to its 17 customers. Exhibits 7 & 8 to Quinlivan Dec. The United States also produced evidence of two 18 telephone calls made to the Ukiah Defendants by undercover DEA agents, following entry of the 19 Preliminary Injunction Orders, which confirmed that the UCBC was open for business and 20 accepting new members. Nyfeler Dec. ¶ 4; Arnold Dec. ¶ 5.

21 This evidence constitutes clear and convincing evidence that the non-compliant defendants 22 are continuing to engage in the distribution of marijuana and are continuing to use the premises of 23 the buildings which house the respective clubs for the purpose of distributing marijuana, both in 24 violation of the Court's Preliminary Injunction Orders. See Transamerica Computer Co. v.

25 _____
26 <sup>4</sup> The Marin Alliance's Web page also provides "information on how to become a member of 27 the Cannabis Buyers Club, and what documentation is required." Exhibit 2 to August 24, 1998
28 Declaration of Mark T. Quinlivan.

1 International Business Machines Corp., 698 F.2d 1377, 1388 (9th Cir.) (clear and convincing 2 evidence means "that it is highly probably true"), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 955 (1983). Nor is there 3 any merit to the defendants' evidentiary objections. The statements made by defendants Jones, 4 Shaw, and Lehrman, along with the facsimile transmission sent to the U.S. Attorney by the 5 OCBC, and the OCBC and Marin Alliance Web sites, all constitute admissions of a party-6 opponent, which are admissible under Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(2).<sup>5</sup> Likewise, counsel for the United 7 States has attested that the Web pages of the OCBC and Marin Alliance, and the facsimile 8 transmission sent to the U.S. Attorney by the OCBC, are "true and correct copies" of these 9 admissions. Accordingly, the United States has made a prima facie case by clear and convincing 10 evidence that the non-compliant defendants are in violation of (and are continuing to violate) the 11 Court's Preliminary Injunction Orders.

12 II. THE UNITED STATES IS ENTITLED TO SUMMARY JUDGMENT ON ITS 13 CLAIM THAT THE NON-COMPLIANT DEFENDANTS ARE IN CIVIL 14 CONTEMPT

14 The non-compliant defendants have failed to carry their burden of production in 15 responding to the United States' motion for summary judgment that they are in civil contempt.
16 Rather than presenting "specific facts" or "detailed factual allegations" regarding each and every 17 person to whom the three non-compliant cannabis clubs distributed marijuana following entry of 18 the May 19, 1998 Preliminary Injunction Orders, these defendants instead assert that they are 19 entitled to present their alleged defenses of medical necessity, substantive due process, and joint 20 users to a jury, and that they will submit evidence in support of these defenses only at that time.

22 <sup>5</sup> To be sure, in Larez v. City of Los Angeles, 946 F.2d 630 (9th Cir. 1991), the Ninth Circuit 23 held that quotations of a party that appear in a newspaper article did not meet the best evidence 24 requirement of Fed. R. Evid. 803(24), because testimony from the reporters themselves would be 25 the best evidence available. Id. at 643-44. At least one court has subsequently ruled, however, 26 that, if there is more than one source of evidence that corroborates the newspaper quotations, 27 testimony from the reporter who authored the newspaper article in which the quotes appeared 28 would not be necessary. In re Columbia Securities Litigation, 155 F.R.D. 466, 478-79 (S.D.N.Y.
1994). Here, in view of the substantial additional evidence regarding the non-compliant defendants' violations of the Court's Preliminary Injunction Orders, the newspaper articles which quote defendants Jones, Shaw, and Lehrman should be deemed admissible under Rule 803(24).

1 See Show Cause Opp. at 6 ("If the Court finds * * * that the government has met its burden of 2 establishing that defendants are in contempt of the Order, then defendants must be allowed to 3 present detailed evidence that they are in good faith and substantial compliance with the Order." ).
4 This argument fundamentally misapprehends both the summary judgment requirements of the 5 Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and this Court's May 13, 1998 Memorandum and Order, as we 6 demonstrate below.

7 A. Summary Judgment Is Procedurally Proper Under 21 U.S.C. § 882(b)

8 As a preliminary matter, there is no merit to the non-compliant defendants' assertion that 9 section 882(b) prohibits the United States from seeking summary judgment for civil contempt.
10 The statutory language provides that, "[i]n case of an alleged violation of an injunction or 11 restraining order issued under this section, trial shall, upon demand of the accused, be by a jury in 12 accordance with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure." 21 U.S.C. § 882(b) (emphasis supplied).
13 Rule 1 of the Federal Rules provides that, "[t]hese rules govern the procedure in the United States 14 district courts in all suits of a civil nature whether cognizable as cases at law or in equity * * * *" 15 Fed. R. Civ. P. 1 (emphasis supplied). And Rule 56(a) of the Federal Rules in turn provides that 16 "[a] party seeking to recover upon a claim * * * or to obtain a declaratory judgment may, at any 17 time after the expiration of 20 days from the commencement of the action * * * move with or 18 without supporting affidavits for a summary judgment in the party's favor upon all or any part 19 thereof." Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

20 Hence, the United States' motion for summary judgment is entirely consistent with the 21 language of section 882(b), read in conjunction with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. See 22 Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 327 (1986) ("Summary judgment procedure is properly 23 regarded not as a disfavored procedural shortcut, but rather as an integral part of the Federal Rules 24 as a whole * * * *"). As the Supreme Court recognized in United States v. Bailey, 444 U.S. 394 25 (1980), "[i]n a civil action, the question whether a particular affirmative defense is sufficiently 26 supported by testimony to go to the jury may often be resolved on a motion for summary 27 judgment * * * *." Id. at 412 n.9. Indeed, any contrary reading of section 882(b) would require a

1 jury trial, upon demand of the accused, even where there are no genuine issues of material fact in 2 dispute.

3 The defendants also quote United States v. Powers, 629 F.2d 619 (9th Cir. 1980), for the 4 proposition that "procedural safeguards of Rule 42 [of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure] 5 apply equally to civil contempt proceedings." Id. at 624. A cursory review of Ninth Circuit case 6 law, however, reveals a substantial body of precedent holding to the contrary. In Alexander v.
7 United States, 173 F.2d 865 (9th Cir. 1949), decided prior to Powers, the Ninth Circuit stated that:
8 "The Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure apply to criminal proceedings. One of them (Rule 42) 9 applies to criminal contempt proceedings. None of them applies to civil contempt proceedings." 10 Id. at 866-67 (emphasis supplied). Likewise, in United States v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp., 648 11 F.2d 642 (9th Cir. 1981), decided after Powers, the Ninth Circuit held that "[t]he district court 12 need not follow the procedures set out in Fed. R. Civ. P. 42(b) before levying a civil contempt 13 fine." Id. at 652. See also United States v. Rylander, 714 F.2d 996, 1004 (9th Cir. 1983) ("There 14 are many safeguards applicable in a criminal contempt proceeding, such as the right to a jury trial 15 in some cases, the right to counsel, the right not to take the witness stand, and the 'beyond a 16 reasonable doubt' burden of proof, which do not apply in a civil contempt proceeding."), cert.
17 denied, 467 U.S. 1209 (1984). The continuing viability of this statement in Powers, therefore, is 18 subject to serious question.

19 In any event, even if Fed. R. Crim. P. 42(b) were to be applied to this civil contempt 20 proceeding, the result would not change. In pertinent part, Rule 42(b) provides that a defendant 21 "is entitled to a trial by jury in any case in which an act of Congress so provides." Here, again, 22 section 882(b) provides that a defendant is entitled to a jury trial "in accordance with the Federal 23 Rules of Civil Procedure," 21 U.S.C. § 882(b), which allow for summary judgment motions in all 24 civil actions. See Celotex Corp., 477 U.S. at 327. Hence, the defendants' argument that Rule 25 42(b) requires a jury trial in all cases of civil contempt is not well-taken, and in no way 26 undermines Bailey's clear guidance that whether an affirmative defense "is sufficiently supported 27

1 by testimony to go to the jury may often be resolved on a motion for summary judgment * * * *."
2 444 U.S. at 412 n.9.

3 The non-compliant defendants' argument that they are entitled to a jury trial because the 4 underlying criminal statutes authorize criminal penalties of up to 25 years in prison and $250,00 5 to $1,000,000 in fines, also is mistaken. The United States' motion for summary judgment is 6 premised upon the non-compliant defendants' violations of 21 U.S.C. § 882(a), not the underlying 7 criminal provisions. Thus, there is no merit to their assertion that these contempt proceedings 8 must be deemed criminal in nature.<sup>6</sup> Moreover, the remedy proposed by the United States is as 9 follows:

10 The United States Marshal is empowered to enforce this Preliminary Injunction. In 11 particular, the United States Marshal is authorized to enter the premises of the [respective 12 defendant cannabis club], at any time of day or night, evict any and all tenants, inventory 13 the premises, and padlock the doors, until such time as the defendants can "satisfy [the Court] that [they are] no longer in violation of the injunctive order and that [they] would in good faith thereafter comply with the terms of the order." Lance v. Plummer, 353 F.2d 585, 592 (5th Cir. 1965), cert. denied, 384 U.S. 929 (1966).

14 Because this proposed remedy allows the non-compliant defendants the opportunity to abate the 15 proposed sanction through compliance, these contempt proceedings are civil in nature. See 16 International Union, United States Mine Workers v. Bagwell, 512 U.S. 821, 829 (1994).<sup>7</sup>

17 _____ 18 <sup>6</sup> The non-compliant defendants' contention that, "regardless of what punishment the 19 government seeks or the Court may impose, the defendants have a Sixth Amendment a right [sic] 20 to a jury trial on the contempt charges," Show Cause Opp. at 19, also is plainly wrong. Because 21 the Controlled Substances Act expressly allows the government to seek civil injunctive relief for 22 violations of the Act, see 21 U.S.C. § 882(a), there is no merit to the suggestion that a motion to 23 enforce any such injunction must be deemed criminal in nature. Moreover, the discussions of the 24 right to a jury trial in Bloom v. Illinois, 391 U.S. 194 (1968), and Rylander, 714 F.2d 996, were 25 entirely in the context of sanctions for criminal, as opposed to civil, contempt.

26 <sup>7</sup> The non-compliant defendants' citation to Bagwell's discussion of "[c]ontempts involving 27 out-of-court disobedience to complex injunctions," Show Cause Opp. at 20 n.10, is inapposite.
28 The Preliminary Injunction Orders entered by the Court are not complex; they simply require the defendants to refrain from distributing or manufacturing marijuana, as well as other related activities. In such circumstances, the Bagwell Court held that "indirect contempts involving discrete, readily ascertainable acts, such as turning over a key or payment of a judgment,

1 B. The Non-Compliant Defendants Have Failed to Meet the Requirements Both of 2 Rule 56(e) and This Court's May 13, 1998 Memorandum and Order

3 Rule 56(e) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provides that:

4 When a motion for summary judgment is made and supported as provided by [Rule 56(c)], 5 an adverse party may not rest upon the mere allegations or denials of the adverse party's 6 pleading, but the adverse party's response, by affidavits or as otherwise provided in this 7 rule, must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. If the 8 adverse party does not so respond, summary judgment, if appropriate, shall be entered 9 against the adverse party.

10 Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e) (emphasis supplied). In other words, the party opposing a motion for 11 summary judgment "must present affirmative evidence to defeat a properly supported motion for 12 summary judgment," even where "the evidence is likely to be in the possession of the [moving 13 party]." Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 257 (1986). See also THI-Hawaii, Inc. v.
14 First Commerce Financial Corp., 627 F.2d 991, 994 (9th Cir. 1980) ("Once the moving party has 15 met the initial burden of going forward, the opposing party may not defeat summary judgment in 16 the absence of any significant probative evidence tending to support his or her theory."). As the 17 Sixth Circuit colorfully noted, in the aftermath of the Supreme Court's decisions in Anderson v.
18 Liberty Lobby and Celotex Corp., a party who has been served with a motion for summary 19 judgment must "put up or shut up." Street v. J.C. Bradford & Co., 886 F.2d 1472, 1478 (6th Cir.
20 1989).

21 The non-compliant defendants have failed to "put up." The United States has made a 22 prima facie showing that each of the three non-compliant cannabis clubs is violating the Court's 23 May 19, 1998 Preliminary Injunction Orders, and has moved for summary judgment that these 24 defendants are therefore in civil contempt of the Preliminary Injunction Orders. Rule 56(e), 25 therefore, obligates the non-compliant defendants to present "specific facts" which either 26 controverts the evidence submitted by the United States or supports their alleged defenses of 27 medical necessity, substantive due process, and joint users with respect to each and every

28 _____
29 <sup>7</sup>(...continued)

30 properly may be adjudicated through civil proceedings since the need for extensive, impartial 31 factfinding is less pressing." 512 U.S. at 833.

1 individual to whom they distributed marijuana after May 19, 1998. This is because each and 2 every such distribution of marijuana presumptively constitutes a violation of the Preliminary 3 Injunction Orders, as does the ongoing use of the premises of the buildings which house the 4 defendant clubs for the purpose of distributing marijuana.

5 Indeed, this was the very process that the Court contemplated in its May 13, 1998 6 Memorandum and Order. In pertinent part, the Court determined that, if the United States alleged 7 that the defendants had violated an injunction, "there will be specific facts and circumstances 8 before the Court from which the Court can determine if the jury should be given a necessity 9 instruction as a defense to the alleged violation of the injunction." May 13, 1998 Memorandum 10 Order at 21. Such a showing was necessary, the Court ruled, because, otherwise, "for the defense 11 [of necessity] to be available here, defendants would have to prove that each and every patient to 12 whom it provides cannabis is in danger of imminent harm; that the cannabis will alleviate the 13 harm for that particular patient; and that the patient had no other alternatives * * * *." May 13, 14 1998 Memorandum and Order at 20 (emphasis supplied). Likewise, with respect to substantive 15 due process, the Court determined that this defense would be available only where "the trier of 16 fact is presented with a particular transaction to a particular patient under a particular set of facts," 17 because, otherwise, "the Court would have to find that the substantive due process right of each 18 and every patient to whom the defendants will dispense marijuana in the future will be violated if 19 the government prevents defendants from doing so." Id. at 23 (emphasis supplied).

20 The non-compliant defendants have failed to meet this burden. Despite being on notice 21 that the government was moving for summary judgment for civil contempt, the non-compliant 22 defendants have once again failed to offer any "specific facts" in support of their alleged defenses, 23 as required by Rule 56(e). Indeed, these defendants have failed to identify a single person whom 24 to they distributed marijuana after May 19, 1998; have failed to establish the medical condition 25 which allegedly would have justified the sale of marijuana to that individual; and have failed to 26
27

1 introduce any other evidence regarding their alleged defenses.<sup>8</sup> Nor may the non-compliant 2 defendants defeat summary judgment merely by asserting, without factual support, that they have 3 "identified a multitude of facts, based on the defenses expressly left open by this Court, that 4 illustrate the presence of genuine issues requiring a trial," Show Cause Opp. at 21, or that "all 5 defendants categorically deny the alleged violations of the Preliminary Injunction Order." Modify 6 Opp. at 1. As the Ninth Circuit has repeatedly made clear, "legal memoranda and oral argument 7 are not evidence, and they cannot by themselves create a factual dispute sufficient to defeat a 8 summary judgment motion where no dispute otherwise exists." British Airways Bd. v. The 9 Boeing Co., 585 F.2d 946, 952 (9th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 981 (1979). See also 10 Taylor v. List, 880 F.2d 1040, 1045 (9th Cir. 1989) ("A summary judgment motion cannot be 11 defeated by relying solely on conclusory allegations unsupported by factual data.").

12 In any event, the "multitude of facts" which the non-compliant defendants allege they 13 would prove at trial appear to be identical to those offered at the preliminary injunction stage of 14 these actions, and which the Court rejected as being legally insufficient. In pertinent part, the 15 defendants assert they would show that:

16 "For many patient members, such as those experience debilitating pain, undergoing 17 chemotherapy or experiencing AIDS-related conditions, medical cannabis saves their lives." Show Cause Opp. at 6-7 (emphasis supplied);

18 "[F]or most patient-members no other medicine provides the same effective relief in such 19 a safe and reliable manner." Id. at 12 (emphasis supplied);

20 "For some patient members, medical cannabis saved their lives when it is doubtful any 21 other drug would have." Id. at 12-13 (emphasis supplied);

22 "Without [marijuana] some will suffer pain, some will risk blindness, and others will die 23 by wasting away." Id. at 14 (emphasis supplied); and 24 <sup>8</sup> The declarations submitted by Kenneth Estes, Yvonne Westbrook, Ima Carter, David 25 Sanders, and John P. Morgan, M.D., all are irrelevant to the issue of civil contempt. None of the 26 "patient" declarants states that one of the three non-compliant cannabis clubs distributed 27 marijuana to them after May 19, 1998. Nor does Dr. Morgan attest that he is treating a patient who was provided marijuana by one of these three clubs after May 19, 1998. Accordingly, all five declarations are irrelevant to the issue before the Court. See Fed. R. Evid. 402.

1 "Defendants can show that many patient-members would find their lives needlessly placed 2 in jeopardy were they denied the right to the medical use of cannabis." Id. at 16 (emphasis supplied).

3 In its Memorandum and Order, this Court found that similar offers of proof made at the 4 preliminary injunction stage are "not the same as saying that for each or every person to whom 5 [the defendants] provide, and will provide marijuana, legal drugs are not effective such that 6 marijuana is a necessity." May 13, 1998 Memorandum and Order at 21. This is because, as the 7 Court ruled, "the defense of necessity has never been allowed to exempt a defendant from the 8 criminal laws on a blanket basis." Id. at 20. See also id. at 23 (defendants' substantive due 9 process defense "is not available * * * to exempt generally the distribution of marijuana from the 10 federal drug laws."). The defendants' "multitude of facts" suffer from the same defect here.

11 The non-compliant defendants' remaining arguments in no way undermine this conclusion.
12 Their complaint that "neither the Court nor the defendants know who is alleged to have purchased 13 medical cannabis and when (other than the date) they are alleged to have done so," Show Cause 14 Opp. at 5, is rather breathtaking in its disingenuity. This is not a situation in which the relevant 15 evidence is in the possession of the opposing party. The non-compliant defendants know full well 16 to whom they distributed marijuana after May 19, 1998. They also know full well that the United 17 States contends that each and every such distribution constitutes a violation of the Preliminary 18 Injunction Orders (not to mention the Controlled Substances Act, 21 U.S.C. §§ 841(a)(1); 19 856(a)(1)).<sup>9</sup> Hence, their assertion that they have not been given notice as to which of these 20 several distributions of marijuana constitute violations of the Preliminary Injunction Orders is 21 very wide of the mark.

22 Nor does the defendants' assertion that they "are unable to rebut the government's vague 23 and conclusory allegations for fear of criminal prosecution," Show Cause Opp. at 5, provide them 24 any refuge. "A defendant has no absolute right not to be forced to choose between testifying in a

---

26 <sup>9</sup> The non-compliant defendants also are presumably aware of the medical conditions of all 27 persons to whom they distributed marijuana after May 19, 1998, for, if they were not so aware, it would further undermine their alleged defenses of medical necessity and substantive due process.

1 civil matter and asserting his Fifth Amendment privilege." Keating v. Office of Thrift 2 Supervision, 45 F.3d 322, 326 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 827 (1995). Indeed, "[n]ot only is 3 it permissible to conduct a civil proceeding at the same time as a related criminal proceeding, 4 even if that necessitates invocation of the Fifth Amendment privilege, but it is even permissible 5 for the trier of fact to draw adverse inferences from the invocation of the Fifth Amendment in a 6 civil proceeding." Id. (citing Baxter v. Palmigiano, 425 U.S. 308, 318 (1976)). The defendants' 7 alleged fear of criminal prosecution, therefore, is no impediment whatsoever to the Court's 8 consideration of the United States' summary judgment motion.

9 The Ninth Circuit has held that, "[i]n the absence of specific facts, as opposed to 10 allegations, showing the existence of a genuine issue for trial, a properly supported summary 11 judgment motion should be granted." Nilsson, Robbins, Dalgarn, Berliner, Carson & Wurst v.
12 Louisiana Hydrolec, 854 F.2d 1538, 1545 (9th Cir. 1988). Because this is precisely the situation 13 here, the Court should grant the United States' motion for summary judgment that the non-14 compliant defendants are in civil contempt of the May 19, 1998 Preliminary Injunction Orders.

15 C. The Defenses of Medical Necessity, Substantive Due Process, and Joint Users 16 Fail as a Matter of Law

17 That the non-compliant defendants are continuing to engage in the distribution of 18 marijuana is simply a non-issue in this proceeding, leaving only the legal validity of their defenses 19 to be determined. Yet even if the non-compliant defendants had introduced evidence sufficient to 20 maintain their alleged defenses of medical necessity, substantive due process, and joint users, 21 which they have not, the defenses advanced by the defendants nonetheless are unavailable to them 22 as a matter of law and, consequently, should never be allowed to be presented to a jury.

23 1. Medical Necessity

24 The defendants' arguments in support of their alleged defense of medical necessity have no 25 legal substance. We respond briefly to each of the points they make.

26 First, although the defendants attempt to minimize the holding of Maggio v. Zeitz, the 27 Court's admonition that "[a] contempt proceeding does not open to reconsideration the legal or

1 | factual basis of the order alleged to have been disobeyed and thus become a retrial of the original
2 | controversy," and that "[t]he procedure to enforce a court's order commanding or forbidding an act
3 | should not be so inconclusive as to foster experimentation with disobedience," 333 U.S. at 69, is
4 | particularly apt here. Indeed, these motions embody the very concerns raised by the Maggio
5 | Court. The non-compliant defendants do not appear to have changed their practices one whit in
6 | response to the Court's Preliminary Injunction Orders. Instead, they raise the same generalized
7 | defenses that this Court rejected in its May 13, 1998 Memorandum Opinion and Order. In these 8 | circumstances, the D.C. Court of Appeal's admonition that "[c]ivil contempt could become
9 | meaningless if a lawful defense could rest on the ground that a party took a different view,
10 | however reasonable, of the potential harm in compliance," Morgan v. Foretich, 546 A.2d 407, 411
11 | (D.C. 1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 1007 (1989), is particularly prescient.

12 |         This Court therefore should follow the lead of the Supreme Judicial Court of 13 | Massachusetts, which held that, even in cases in which a defense of necessity is being raised, a
14 | "defendant's avenue of relief is to challenge or seek to modify the court order, not to violate it."
15 | Commonwealth v. Brogan, 415 Mass. 169, 176, 612 N.E.2d 656, 660 (1993). Here, of course, the
16 | non-compliant defendants could have appealed the Preliminary Injunction Orders, see 28 U.S.C. §
17 | 1292(a)(1); moved to modify the Injunction Orders to allow the distribution of marijuana in cases
18 | in which they believed a necessity existed, . see Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b);<sup>10</sup> and sought expedited
19 | relief from the Court under the Local Rules. See Local Rule 7-10 (allowing for expedited
20 | motions); Local Rule 7-11 (allowing for ex parte motions). Having failed to avail themselves of 21 | any of these legal, reasonable alternatives, the non-compliant defendants are foreclosed from
22 | arguing medical necessity as a general legal defense to these contempt motions. Bailey, 444 U.S.
23 | at 410 ("[I]f there was a reasonable, legal alternative to violating the law, 'a chance both to refuse
24 | to do the criminal act and also to avoid the threatened harm,' the defenses [of necessity] will

1 fail.”); Sekaquaptewa v. McDonald, 544 F.2d 396, 406 (9th Cir. 1976), cert. denied, 430 U.S. 931 2 (1977) (party must take "all the reasonable steps within [one's] power to insure compliance with 3 the orders.”).

4 Second, the non-compliant defendants offer no real response to the government's showing 5 that the defense of medical necessity is legally unavailable to them as a result of Congress's 6 placement of marijuana in Schedule I,<sup>11</sup> which establishes -- as a matter of law -- that the 7 substance has "no currently accepted medical use in treatment in the United States," and "a lack of 8 accepted safety for use * * * under medical supervision." 21 U.S.C. § 812(b)(1). Congress 9 further prevented practitioners from prescribing substances in Schedule I, id. §§ 829(a)-(c); and 10 indicated that the only legitimate medical or scientific use for a substance in Schedule I is in the 11 context of a controlled research project approved by the Secretary of Health and Human Services 12 and registered with the DEA. Id. § 823(f). Under these circumstances, Congress has made a 13 binding legislative determination that marijuana has no medical value, which precludes any 14 possibility of a defense of medical necessity here. See 1 Walter LaFave & Austin W. Scott, Jr., 15 Substantive Criminal Law § 5.4, at 631 (1986).<sup>12</sup>

16 Third, there is no merit to the non-compliant defendants' argument that, although those 17 courts which have allowed a medical necessity defense for marijuana have done so only in cases 18 involving possession, "[d]istribution is the necessary antecedent to possession. If possession is 19 legally justified as to a person for whom medical cannabis is a necessity, then so too is 20 distribution to this person." Show Cause Opp. at 11. If this were the law, the entire marijuana 21 cultivation and distribution network could claim the defense of necessity as a "necessary

22
23 <sup>11</sup> See 21 U.S.C. § 812 Schedule I(c)(10).

24 <sup>12</sup> Four of five state courts to have considered this question have held that the placement of 25 marijuana on schedule I by their respective state legislatures precludes the defense of medical 26 necessity for the substance. See State v. Tate, 102 N.J. 64, 70, 505 A.2d 941, 944 (1986); State
27 v. Cramer, 174 Ariz. 522, 524, 851 P.2d 147, 149 (1992); State v. Hanson, 468 N.W.2d 77, 78-
79 (Minn. Ct. App. 1991); Kauffman v. State, 620 So.2d 90, 92 (Ala. Crim. App. 1992). But see
Jenks v. State, 582 So.2d 676 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App.), review denied, 589 So.2d 292 (Fla. 1991).

1 antecedent" to possession. It therefore comes as no surprise that the only authority the defendants
2 muster in support of this proposition is a concurring opinion in People v. Peron, 59 Cal. App. 4th 3 1383, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 20 (1997), review denied (Feb. 25, 1998), in which the concurring judge 4 stated that he found it "unnecessary in this case to determine whether the sale and furnishing of 5 marijuana remain absolutely prohibited after the enactment of Proposition 215." Id. at 1401, 70 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d at 32 (Kline, J., concurring). Moreover, the defendants fail to note that the majority 7 in Peron expressly rejected any notion that distribution is a "necessary antecedent" to possession.
8 Id. at 1390-1396, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d at 25-28 (holding that sale or distribution of marijuana remains 9 illegal under California law even following the passage of Proposition 215). This same result 10 should be reached here.

11 Fourth, the non-compliant defendants' attempt to distinguish Bailey's requirement of 12 imminent harm and immediate abatement where there are continuing offenses is singularly 13 unconvincing. The defendants argue that, because their patients' illnesses "never lose their 14 'coercive force,'" they are not required to abate their unlawful conduct when a patient leaves, even 15 though their ongoing violation of section 856(a)(1) constitutes a continuing offense. Yet the 16 defendants' argument here is precisely that which was advanced by Justice Blackmun in his 17 dissent in Bailey. In pertinent part, Justice Blackmun argued that:

18 The conditions that led to respondents' initial departure from the D.C. jail continue 19 unabated. If departure was justified -- and on the record before us that issue, I feel, is for 20 the jury to resolve as a matter of fact in the light of the evidence, and not for this Court to 21 determine as a matter of law -- it seems too much to demand that respondents, in order to 22 preserve their legal defenses, return forthwith to the hell * * * that compelled their leaving 23 in the first instance.

24 444 U.S. at 419-420 (Blackmun, J., dissenting). The majority rejected this argument, however, 25 determining that, because prison escape constitutes a continuing offense, "an escapee can be held 26 liable for failure to return to custody as well as for his initial departure," and that the evidence was 27 "not even close" that the defendants had "either surrendered or offered to surrender at their earliest 28 possible opportunity." Id. at 413, 415.

1 Similarly here, because each of the non-compliant defendants has been charged with a 2 continuing offense under the Controlled Substances Act -- violating 856(a)(1), which makes it 3 unlawful for anyone from "knowingly open[ing] or maintain[ing] any place for the purpose of * * 4 * distributing * * * any controlled substance" -- these defendants must demonstrate that they have 5 made a bona fide effort to comply with section 856(a)(1) "as soon as the claimed duress or 6 necessity has lost its coercive force." 444 U.S. at 413. In other words, as soon as the individual 7 to whom one of the defendant clubs had distributed marijuana had left the premises, the club 8 would have to close in order to comply with section 856(a)(1). Because the non-compliant 9 defendants cannot come close to making this showing, this failure offers yet another reason why 10 the defense of medical necessity is unavailable to these defendants as a matter of law.

11 2. Substantive Due Process

12 In their Show Cause Opposition, the non-compliant defendants do not offer anything new 13 with respect to their alleged defense of substantive due process, but instead simply repeat (often 14 verbatim) the argument made in their opposition to the government's motion for preliminary 15 injunctions. Show Cause Opp. at 13-17. Remarkably, however, the defendants fail to even 16 address the governing Ninth Circuit authority on this issue, Carnohan v. United States, 616 F.2d 17 1120 (9th Cir. 1980), or the substantial body of case law holding that no person has a 18 constitutional right to any particular medication.<sup>13</sup> As we have demonstrated previously, in 19 Carnohan, a case involving laetrile, the Ninth Circuit held that the constitutional rights of privacy 20 and personal liberty did not give anyone the right to any particular form of medication free from 21 the lawful exercise of the government's police power. Id. at 1122 (citing Rutherford v. United 22 States, 616 F.2d 455 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 937 (1980)). In any event, it is doubtful 23 that the non-compliant defendants have standing to raise any such defense on behalf of their 24 customers. See, e.g., Warth v. Seldin, 422 U.S. 490, 499 (1975) (a party "must assert his own 25

26 <sup>13</sup> Indeed, the Court specifically raised this issue with defendants during the March 24, 1998 27 hearing. Transcript of March 24, 1998 Proceedings ("Transcript") at 40, 83-84.

1 legal rights and interests, and cannot rest his claim to relief on the legal rights or interests of third 2 parties"). Accordingly, there is no merit to the non-compliant defendants' defense of substantive 3 due process.

4 3. Joint User

5 Finally, the non-compliant defendants' reiteration of the alleged joint user defense, based 6 on the Second Circuit's decision in United States v. Swiderski, 548 F.2d 445 (2d Cir. 1977), must 7 be rejected once again. As this Court has recognized, "Swiderski involved a simultaneous 8 purchase by a husband and wife who testified that they intended to use the controlled substance 9 together. Applying Swiderski to a medical marijuana cooperative would extend Swiderski to a 10 situation in which the controlled substance is not literally purchased simultaneously for immediate 11 consumption." May 13, 1998 Memorandum Opinion and Order at 18. Under these 12 circumstances, and in view of the fact that Swiderski has not been adopted by the Ninth Circuit, 13 see United States v. Wright, 593 F.2d 105, 108 (9th Cir. 1979) (expressing no opinion as to 14 whether Swiderski is good law), the Court should reject the joint user defense as a matter of law.

15 * * *

16 Because the basic facts are undisputed, and because the defendants' legal defenses, in any 17 event, fails as a matter of law, the United States is entitled to summary judgment on its claim that 18 the non-compliant defendants are in civil contempt of the May 19, 1998 Preliminary Injunction 19 Orders.

20 III. THE UNITED STATES ALSO IS ENTITLED TO MODIFICATION OF THE 21 PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION ORDERS

22 The United States also has moved for modification of the Preliminary Injunction Orders, 23 as discussed supra Part II, based on the open and notorious nature of the defendants' defiance of 24 this Court's Preliminary Injunction Orders. The non-compliant defendants raise four objections to 25 modification of the Preliminary Injunction Orders. First, the non-compliant defendants argue that 26 it is "well established" that the Court may only modify the injunction when there is a change in the 27 underlying factual circumstances. Defendants' Memorandum in Opposition to Plaintiff's Ex Parte

1 Motion to Modify May 19, 1998, Preliminary Injunction Orders ("Modify Opp.") at 6. This 2 notion was laid to rest by Judge Friendly in King-Seeley Thermos Co. v. Alladin Indus., 418 F.2d 3 31 (2d Cir. 1969), in which the court stated that "[w]hile changes in fact or in law afford the 4 clearest bases for altering an injunction, the power of equity has repeatedly been recognized as 5 extending also to cases where a better appreciation of the facts in light of experience indicates that 6 the decree is not properly adapted to accomplishing its purposes." Id. at 35. See also System 7 Federation v. Wright, 364 U.S. 642, 647 (1961) ("The source of the power to modify is of course 8 the fact that an injunction often requires continuing supervision by the issuing court and always a 9 continuing willingness to apply its power and processes on behalf of the party who obtained 10 equitable relief.") (emphasis supplied)). Here, the non-compliant defendants' open and notorious 11 violations of the Preliminary Injunction Orders clearly fall within the framework outlined in King-12 Seeley.

13 The defendants' related suggestion that, because the Court rejected similar language when 14 it entered the Preliminary Injunction Orders, it should decline to modify the Injunction Orders 15 now on the same ground, Modify Opp. at 1-2, also is meritless. The language proposed by the 16 United States on May 18, 1998, was based on several public statements made by some of the 17 defendants that they would violate any injunction that was entered by the Court. In contrast, the 18 modification proposed by the United States here is based on the demonstrated violations of the 19 Preliminary Injunction Orders by the defendants.

20 Second, the non-compliant defendants complain that the Court is relinquishing its 21 contempt power to the United States Marshal. Modify Opp. at 2. This is not the case. If the 22 Court enters the proposed modification, it would be making its own determination of the need for 23 further relief and simply direct United States Marshal to enforce the Injunction Orders by forcibly 24 closing the clubs. Such duties are consistent with Congress's express statutory authorization to the 25 U.S. Marshal to enforce orders issued by the federal courts. See 28 U.S.C. §§ 566(a), (c). Hence, 26
27

1 contrary to the defendants' suggestion, this Court would not be relinquishing its contempt power 2 to the Marshal, or requiring the Marshal to maintain a supervisory role over the clubs.

3 Third, the non-compliant defendants strive mightily to distinguish United States v. White, 4 893 F. Supp. 1423 (C.D. Cal. 1995); and United States v. Roach, 947 F. Supp. 872 (E.D. Pa.
5 1996), on the ground that (according to them) there are serious factual differences between those 6 cases and the instant actions. This argument is too simplistic. Almost every case could be 7 distinguished on the ground that the underlying facts between the cases are different. The central 8 similarity between the instant related actions and White and Roach is that those courts (like this 9 Court now) were confronted with intransigent parties who stated their intention to violate any and 10 all injunctions entered by the courts. Under such circumstances, the courts empowered the United 11 States Marshal, consistent with its statutory authorization, to assist the courts in enforcing the 12 injunctions in place, and that is exactly what this Court should do here.

13 IV. OAKLAND ORDINANCE NO. 12706 DOES NOT IMMUNIZE DEFENDANTS 14 FROM VIOLATING THE CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES ACT, NOR DOES IT
15 PROTECT THEM FROM BEING HELD IN CONTEMPT

16 The OCBC Defendants move to dismiss the lawsuit against them on the ground that they 17 have been designated "duly authorized officer[s]" of the City of Oakland to enforce California 18 Health & Safety Code § 11362.5 and Oakland Ordinance No. 12076 C.M.S. In particular, the 19 OCBC Defendants contend that, following their designation as a medical cannabis provider by the 20 City Manager of Oakland on August 12, 1998, they are now immune from suit under 21 U.S.C. § 21 885(d). Motion to Dismiss at 3-5. This argument does not deserve to be taken seriously.

22 21 U.S.C. § 885(d) provides:

23 Except as provided in sections 2234 and 2235 of title 18, United States Code, no civil or 24 criminal liability shall be imposed by virtue of this title upon any duly authorized Federal 25 officer lawfully engaged in the enforcement of this title, or upon any duly authorized 26 officer of any State, territory, political subdivision thereof, the District of Columbia, or 27 any possession of the United States, who shall be lawfully engaged in the enforcement of any law or municipal ordinance relating to controlled substances.

Hence, in order to be protected by section 885(d), an "officer" must be "lawfully engaged" in the enforcement of "any law or municipal ordinance relating to controlled substances." The OCBC

1 Defendants do not satisfy this statutory requirement. Section 841(a)(1) of the Controlled 2 Substances Act prohibits anyone from engaging in the distribution of marijuana, and this Court 3 has determined that "[a] state law which purports to legalize the distribution of marijuana for any 4 purpose * * * nonetheless directly conflicts with federal law, 21 U.S.C. § 841(a)(1)." May 13, 5 1998 Memorandum and Order at 17. Hence, notwithstanding the Oakland ordinance, the OCBC 6 Defendants cannot be said to be "lawfully engaged" in the enforcement of a law relating to 7 controlled substances.

8       Moreover, it is an "elementary rule of construction that the act cannot be held to destroy 9 itself," Citizens Bank of Maryland v. Strumpf, 516 U.S. 16, 20 (1995) (quotation omitted), and 10 that a court is obligated "to give effect, if possible, to every clause and word of a statute, rather 11 than to emasculate an entire section * * * ." United States v. Menasche, 348 U.S. 528, 538-39 12 (1955). The OCBC Defendants construction of section 885(d) would violate these cardinal 13 principles of statutory construction, and lead to an absurd result. According to the OCBC 14 Defendants, any state, city, or local subdivision could determine that it would become engaged in 15 the distribution of controlled substances, designate an agency or private party to engage in the 16 distribution of the controlled substance, and thereby immunize that agency or private party from 17 criminal or civil liability under the Controlled Substances Act. The City and County of San 18 Francisco could effectively legalize heroin, for example, the City of San Jose could legalize crack, 19 or the City of Los Angeles could legalize LSD or PCP, and (according to the OCBC Defendants) 20 the federal government would be powerless to take any enforcement action. Any such 21 construction of section 885(d) is plainly absurd, which the courts are obligated to avoid. See, e.g., 22 Public Citizen v. U.S. Dept. of Justice, 491 U.S. 440, 454 (1989) ("Where the literal reading of a 23 statutory term would compel an odd result, we must search for other evidence of congressional 24 intent to lend the term its proper scope." (internal quotation omitted)).

25       Indeed, the OCBC Defendants' construction of section 885(d) would have the effect of 26 destroying section 841(a)(1)'s prohibition on the distribution and manufacture of controlled 27

1 substances; section 856(a)(1)'s prohibition on the maintenance of any facility for the purposes of 2 distributing or manufacturing controlled substances, as well as numerous other sections of the 3 Controlled Substances Act, in derogation of the Supreme Court's commands in Citizens Bank of 4 Maryland and Menasche. Moreover, any such reading of section 885(d) would run contrary to 5 Congress's finding that the distribution of controlled substances, even if wholly intrastate, "ha[s] a 6 substantial and direct effect upon interstate commerce.," 21 U.S.C. § 801(3), as well as Congress's 7 specific findings that the intrastate manufacture, distribution, and possession of controlled 8 substances "have a substantial and direct effect upon interstate commerce," id. § 801(3), including 9 findings that the intrastate traffic in controlled substances "contribute[s] to swelling the interstate 10 traffic in such substances," id. § 801(4); "cannot be differentiated from controlled substances 11 manufactured and distributed interstate," 801(5); and that "[f]ederal control of the intrastate 12 incidents of the traffic in controlled substances is essential to the effective control of the interstate 13 incidents of such traffic." Id. § 801(6).

14 Accordingly, because the OCBC Defendants' construction of section 885(d) would lead to 15 absurd results, and would run contrary to the very purpose of the Controlled Substances Act, 16 which is to provide the means to "combat" the distribution of illegal drugs, not to immunize those 17 who engage in such actions, their contention that section 885(d) provides them with immunity 18 from federal prosecution or enforcement actions is spurious.

19 Moreover, an examination of the statutory language of section 885(d), when read in 20 conjunction with the rest of the Controlled Substances Act, demonstrates that Congress intended 21 section 885(d)'s grant of immunity to be limited to federal, state, or local law enforcement officers 22 engaged in police or adjudicative functions in connection with the enforcement of the controlled 23 substance laws. First, any interpretation of section 885(d) must take into account the qualifying 24 clause of this provision, which exempts from its reach anyone who violates 18 U.S.C. §§ 2234 25 26
27

1 and 2235.<sup>14</sup> Section 2234 provides that, "[w]hoever, in executing a search warrant, willfully 2 exceeds his authority or exercises it with unnecessary severity, shall be fined not more than 3 $1,000 or imprisoned not more than one year." 18 U.S.C. § 2234. Section 2235, in turn, provides 4 that, "[w]hoever maliciously and without probable cause procures a search warrant to be issued 5 and executed, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than one year." 18 6 U.S.C. § 2235. In other words, both sections involve actions by law enforcement officials acting 7 in a police or adjudicative function and who are engaged in the enforcement of the criminal laws.
8 These provisions thus strongly support the reading of "officer" in section 885(d) as referring to a 9 law enforcement officer engaged in police functions in the enforcement of the controlled 10 substance laws. See Reno v. Koray, 515 U.S. 50, 56 (1995) ("[I]t is a 'fundamental principle of 11 statutory construction (and, indeed, of language itself) that the meaning of a word cannot be 12 determined in isolation, but must be drawn from the context in which it is used.'" (quoting Deal v.
13 United States, 508 U.S. 129, 132 (1993))).

14 Second, any construction of the terms "officer" and "enforcement" in section 885(d) is 15 constrained by a sister provision of the Act, section 848(e)(2), which provides that, "[a]s used in 16 paragraph (1)(b) [of section 848(e)], the term 'law enforcement officer' means a public servant 17 authorized by law or by a Government agency or Congress to conduct or engage in the 18 prevention, investigation, prosecution, or adjudication of an offense, and includes those engaged 19 in corrections, probation, or parole functions." 21 U.S.C. § 848(e)(2).<sup>15</sup> This sister provision of 20 section 885(d) further attests that the construction of the terms "officer" engaged in the 21

---

22
23 <sup>14</sup> "A bedrock principle of statutory construction requires us to find meaning in [a] qualifying 24 clause * * * 'It is our duty to give effect, if possible, to every clause and word of a statute, rather 25 than to emasculate an entire section.'" Estate of Reynolds v. Martin, 985 F.2d 470, 473 (9th Cir.
26 1993) (quoting Menasche, 348 U.S. at 538-39).

27 <sup>15</sup> It is well settled that, "[t]he 'normal rule of statutory construction' [is] that 'identical words 28 used in different parts of the same act are intended to have the same meaning.'" Gustafson v.
Alloyd Co., 513 U.S. 561, 570 (1995) (quotation omitted)).

1 "enforcement" of the controlled substance laws must be limited to a law enforcement officer 2 acting in a police or adjudicative function in the enforcement of the controlled substance laws.<sup>16</sup>

3 For all these reasons, the OCBC Defendants motion to dismiss should be denied.

4 V. THE OCBC'S NINTH AMENDMENT ARGUMENT IS FRIVOLOUS

5 In a last-gasp effort, the OCBC Defendants also argue that Congress's prohibition on the 6 distribution of marijuana violates their Ninth Amendment rights. This argument is wholly 7 insubstantial. The Ninth Circuit has consistently held that the Ninth Amendment "has not been 8 interpreted as independently securing any constitutional rights for purposes of making out a 9 constitutional violation." Schowengerdt v. United States, 944 F.2d 483, 490 (9th Cir. 1991), cert.
10 denied, 503 U.S. 951 (1992). It therefore comes as no surprise that the defendants fail to cite any 11 case in which a court has found a Ninth Amendment right to smoke marijuana, and there is none.

12 In addition, the OCBC Defendants' contention that, because the people of California and 13 Oakland have authorized the possession and (in the case of Oakland) the distribution of marijuana 14 for purposes of state and local law, these interests are now protected by the Fifth and Ninth 15 Amendments to the United States Constitution, see Motion to Dismiss at 5, is plainly wrong.
16 Federal constitutional rights have never been subject to the political vagaries of an individual state 17 legislature or local municipality, nor are they now.

18 The OCBC Defendants' Fifth and Ninth Amendment claims, therefore, must be rejected.

25 <sup>16</sup> That 885(d) was intended to facilitate the prevention, investigation, prosecution, and/or 26 adjudication of offenses relating to controlled substances, rather than the construction offered by 27 the OCBC Defendants, is further bolstered by an examination of the regulations implementing the Controlled Substances Act. See 21 C.F.R. § 1301.24.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons set forth above, the Court should hold the non-compliant defendants in civil contempt as a matter of law, and enter the relief and modification proposed by the United States.

Respectfully submitted,
