

1 PILLSBURY MADISON & SUTRO LLP
THOMAS V. LORAN III #95255
2 MARGARET S. SCHROEDER #178586
235 Montgomery Street
3 Post Office Box 7880
San Francisco, CA 94120-7880
4 Telephone: (415) 983-1000

5 Attorneys for Proposed
Defendants and Counterclaimants-
6 in-Intervention Edward Neil
Brundridge, Ima Carter, Rebecca
7 Nikkel and Lucia Y. Vier

8

9

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

10

NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

11

12

13

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

14

Plaintiff,

15

vs.

16

17

CANNABIS CULTIVATOR'S CLUB, et al.,

18

Defendants.

19

20

AND RELATED ACTIONS

21

22

REPLY MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND

23

AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF MEMBERS'

24

MOTION FOR LEAVE TO INTERVENE

25

Date: August 31, 1998

26

Time: 2:30 PM

27

Room: 8

28

The Hon. Charles R. Breyer

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	Page
I. PRELIMINARY STATEMENT	1
II. ARGUMENT	2
A. The Government Has Failed to Rebut the Members' Showing that They Should be Permitted to Intervene as "of Right"	2
1. The Members' motion is timely: there has been no delay and no prejudice	3
a. None of the Government's authorities establish that the Members' motion is untimely as a matter of law	3
b. The Government presents no evidence of actual prejudice	6
c. The Members seek to intervene in the litigation, not the contempt proceeding.	7
2. The Government ignores that the Members have an interest in the transaction that is protected by the Constitution	8
3. The Government concedes that: (1) the disposition of these actions will impair the Members' rights and (2) the Members' interests may not be adequately represented by the parties	9
B. In the Alternative, the Members Should be Granted Permissive Intervention.	10
III. CONCLUSION	11

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

	Page(s)
Cases
1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28
Assoc. Gen. Contr. of Cal. v. Sec. of Com., Etc., 77 F.R.D. 31 (C.D. Cal. 1977), vacated, 438 U.S. 909 (1978)	6
Federal Sav. & Loan, 983 F.2d 211 (11th Cir. 1993)	9
Griswold v. Connecticut, 381 U.S. 479 (1965)	8
League of United Latin American Citizens v. Wilson, 131 F.3d 1297 (9th Cir. 1997)	3-6
N.L.R.B. v. Shurtenda Steaks, Inc., 424 F.2d 192 (10th Cir. 1970)	8
NAACP v. New York, 413 U.S. 345 (1973)	6
Officers for Justice v. Civil Service Com'n, 934 F.2d 1092 (9th Cir. 1991)	3, 4
Preston v. Thompson, 589 F.2d 300 (7th Cir. 1979)	5
Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113 (1973)	8, 11
S.E.C. v. Navin, 166 F.R.D. 435 (N.D. Cal. 1995)	5
Sagebrush Rebellion, Inc. v. Watt, 713 F.2d 525 (9th Cir. 1983)	2, 9
Security Ins. Co. of Hartford v. Schipporeit, 69 F.3d 1377 (7th Cir. 1995)	6
Sierra Club v. U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, 709 F.2d 175 (2d Cir. 1983)	7
U.S. v. State of Or., 913 F.2d 576 (9th Cir. 1990)	6
U.S. v. State of Wash., 86 F.3d 1499 (9th Cir. 1996)	5
United States v. Blue Chip Stamp Company, 272 F. Supp. 432 (C.D. Cal. 1967)	6

1 United States v. Fitch,
2 472 F.2d 548 (9th Cir. 1973) 8
3 Venegas v. Skaggs,
4 867 F.2d 527 (9th Cir. 1989) 10
5 Wilder v. Bernstein,
6 1994 WL 30480, *2 (S.D.N.Y. 1994) 7
7
8 Statutes and Codes
9 California Health and Safety Code
10 Section 11362.5(b)(1)(B) 8
11
12 Rules and Regulations
13 Federal Rules of Civil Procedure
14 Rule 24(a) 2, 8
15 Rule 24(b) 10
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

1 I. PRELIMINARY STATEMENT.

2 The Members have established that they meet all of the requirements for 3 intervention as of right and, in the alternative, for permissive intervention. In its 4 opposition, the Government advances pro forma arguments to defeat the motion to 5 intervene that are devoid of evidentiary or legal support. The Government's principal 6 argument, for example, is that the motion to intervene is untimely as a matter of law.
7 None of the authorities on which the Government relies, however, supports this 8 conclusion. Likewise, the Government makes exaggerated claims of "possible 9 prejudice" related to the Members' intervention, but these too are make-weight. The 10 Government's opposition offers no evidence of actual prejudice, and its claims of 11 prejudice therefore are without substance.

12 Moreover, although the Government declined to serve the Members with its 13 "Consolidated Replies" in support of the other pending motions set for hearing on 14 August 31, it is transparent from a review of the entire record of this proceeding that 15 in opposing the Members' motion for intervention, the Government is talking out of 16 both sides of its mouth. On the one hand, the Government asserts in opposing their 17 motion that the Members' interests are adequately represented by the existing parties.
18 See Plaintiff's Opposition to Motion for Leave to Intervene, filed on or about 19 August 24, 1998 ("Opp."), at 7-8. On the other hand, in its "Consolidated Replies,"
20 the Government begs the Court to refrain from presenting the contempt charge to a 21 jury on the basis, among other things, that the "non-compliant defendants" assertedly
22 have no standing to rely on the due process defense invoked by the Members in their 23 motion to intervene. See Plaintiff's Consolidated Replies in Support of Motion to 24 Show Cause, etc., filed on or about August 24, 1998 ("Consolidated Replies"), at 25 17-18. The Court therefore should reject the Government's cynical attempt to prevent 26 the Members from participating in this case and thereby avoid judicial scrutiny of its 27 attempted interdiction of their personal, self-funded medical choice, in consultation
28

1 with their personal physician, to alleviate their suffering through the only effective
2 treatment available for them.

3

4 II. ARGUMENT.

5 A. The Government Has Failed to Rebut the Members' Showing
6 that They Should be Permitted to Intervene as "of Right".

7 The Government agrees with the Members that under applicable Ninth Circuit
8 authorities, intervention as of right is determined on the basis of a four-pronged test.
9 See Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a); Sagebrush Rebellion, Inc. v. Watt, 713 F.2d 525, 572 (9th 10 Cir. 1983) (setting forth requirements for intervention as a matter of right). The 11 Government likewise concedes that the Members have satisfied the third element of 12 the test: namely, that they are so situated that the disposition of this action may 13 impair or impede the Members' ability to protect their interests. Finally, as just 14 described, the Government makes no credible argument that the Members fail to 15 satisfy the fourth prong of the test. It pays lip service to the notion that the Members'
16 interests are adequately represented by the existing parties (see Opp. at 7-8), but this 17 cannot be considered a serious position in light of the other arguments the Government
18 is simultaneously advancing to support its summary judgment motion. See 19 Consolidated Replies at 17-18.

20 Accordingly, the motion to intervene as of right turns on the first two prongs of 21 the test. On these key points, the Government fails to rebut the Members' showing 22 that they have made a timely application and claim a protectable interest relating to 23 the transactions that are the subject of this litigation. The Government makes much of 24 the asserted untimeliness of the motion but offers no palpable evidence whatever to 25 support its claim of prejudice. Likewise, the Government refuses to address the 26 substantive due process claim advanced by the Members, suggesting in its opposition
27 only that the Members have no protectable interest under the Controlled Substances
28 Act. Thus, the Court's granting the motion to intervene is the only way to permit

1 plenary consideration of the merits of the Members' constitutional claims and
2 defenses.

3 1. The Members' motion is timely: there has been no delay and no
4 prejudice.

5 As stated in the Members' opening memorandum (Mem. at 7), whether a 6 motion to intervene is timely is determined by analyzing three factors: (1) the stage of 7 the proceeding at which an applicant seeks to intervene, (2) the prejudice to other 8 parties and (3) the reason for and length of the delay. See Officers for Justice v. Civil 9 Service Com'n, 934 F.2d 1092, 1095 (9th Cir. 1991). The Government asserts that the 10 Members' motion is untimely. However, as we show below, the Government's 11 contentions in this regard are without merit. The motion for intervention satisfies all 12 of the applicable factors for measuring timeliness.

13 a. None of the Government's authorities establish that the Members'
14 motion is untimely as a matter of law.

15 According to the Government, too much time has passed since these actions
16 were filed to permit intervention as of right. In support of its argument, the 17 Government relies on League of United Latin American Citizens v. Wilson, 131 F.3d
18 1297 (9th Cir. 1997). That decision, however, in fact supports the Members' position
19 that the motion is timely. In League of Latin American Citizens, the court denied the 20 applicant's motion for leave to intervene as untimely because, among other things, the 21 applicant "waited twenty-seven months after the plaintiffs filed their original 22 complaints, and at least eighteen months after four other groups had successfully
23 intervened in the case, to move the district court for intervention." Id. at 1304
24 (emphasis added).

25 The decision in League of United Latin American Citizens invalidates the 26 Government's objections to the timeliness of the motion to intervene in several 27 respects. First, in that case, the district court permitted four sets of applicants to 28 intervene nine months after the litigation was filed. Id. at 1301. The Members are

1 seeking leave to intervene here only seven months after the litigation was filed. Thus,
2 even by the Government's measure, the Members' motion is timely.

3 Second, League of United Latin American Citizens establishes that the measure
4 of the timeliness of a motion to intervene is contrary to what the Government
5 proposes. In its opposition, the Government proffers a mechanical test for assessing 6 timeliness solely with reference to the lapse of time after the action is filed. This is 7 erroneous. League of United Latin American Citizens holds that the proper focus 8 should be on the date the person attempting to intervene "should have been aware his 9 'interest[s] would no longer be protected adequately by the parties,' rather than the 10 date the person learned of the litigation." Id. at 1304 (quoting Officers for Justice, 11 934 F.2d at 1095).

12 Here, the Government's contempt proceedings made the Members aware that 13 their interests might not be adequately protected by the parties. On July 6, 1998, the 14 Government filed a motion for an order to show cause why certain of the defendant
15 cooperatives should not be held in contempt. See Plaintiff's Motion for An Order to 16 Show Cause, etc., filed on or about July 6, 1998 (hereinafter, "Contempt Mot."). In 17 that motion, the Government sought to have the United States Marshal close certain of 18 the defendant cooperatives, which will cause the Members' irreparable harm (see 19 Brundridge Decl., ¶ 11; Carter Decl., ¶ 10; Nikkel Decl., ¶ 8; Vier Decl., ¶ 5). In its 20 motion, the Government claimed, among other things, that only members of the 21 defendant cooperatives might have standing to assert a medical necessity defense.
22 Contempt Mot. at 20.

23 The Government's initiation of contempt proceedings created the risk of 24 inadequate representation that resulted in the motion to intervene. The timeliness of 25 the Members' motion is thus measured from July 1998 (when the Government
26 initiated contempt proceedings), not January 1998 (when the action was filed).
27 Because the Members filed their motion for leave to intervene approximately one 28

1 month after the Government initiated the contempt proceedings, the Government's 2 claim of protracted delay is specious as a matter of law.

3 Finally, the League of United Latin American Citizens court found that the 4 applicant's failure to explain the reason for its delay was even more damaging than the 5 delay itself. Id. at 1304. Here, the Members have satisfactorily explained their reason
6 for taking several weeks to file their motion, namely, to talk to potential intervenors
7 whose involvement was complicated by secrecy concerns, fears of criminal prosecution
8 and their physical conditions and disabilities. See Schroeder Decl., ¶ 6.

9 The Government's other authorities do not support the view that the motion is 10 untimely. For example, in U.S. v. State of Wash., 86 F.3d 1499 (9th Cir. 1996), the 11 court affirmed the district court's findings that two applicants' motions to intervene 12 were untimely because (1) the applicants sought to intervene three months after the 13 court issued its memorandum opinion (id. at 1503-04, 1506), (2) intervention would 14 upset the delicate balance achieved by the district court after six years of litigation 15 because the applicants sought to relitigate issues that had already been decided (id. at 16 1504, 1506), and (3) the applicants' reasons for delay were unsatisfactory (id.). In 17 contrast, the Members are seeking leave to intervene in this litigation at an early stage
18 in the proceedings. A trial date has not even been set. See, e.g. S.E.C. v. Navin, 166
19 F.R.D. 435, 439 (N.D. Cal. 1995) (granting motion to intervene after both preliminary 20 and permanent injunction issued). In addition, the Members explained their reason for 21 taking a month to prepare their intervention motion. Hence, the motion is timely, and 22 none of the Government's authorities dictates a contrary conclusion.¹

23
24 1 For example, in Preston v. Thompson, 589 F.2d 300 (7th Cir. 1979), the court
25 affirmed the denial of an intervention motion filed by prison guards on the grounds 26 that the guards were previously aware of the litigation and in fact participated as 27 witnesses. Id. at 304. Nevertheless, the guards waited three weeks after the court
28 issued a preliminary injunction to file their motion. The preliminary injunction followed a three-month "lockdown" during which prisoners were not permitted to leave their six by ten feet two-man cells and were not permitted to shower. The preliminary injunction required, among other things, that prison officials provide the (continued...)

1 b. The Government presents no evidence of actual prejudice.

2 The Government asserts that the Members' intervention "would prejudice the 3 United States by possibly causing delay to the Court's consideration" of the contempt
4 proceedings. Opp. at 5 (emphasis added). It is not a proper objection to intervention
5 that it will delay the litigation. See League of United Latin American Citizens, 131
6 F.3d at 1304 ("additional delay is not alone decisive (otherwise every intervention
7 motion would be denied out of hand because it carried with it, almost by definition,
8 the prospect of prolonging the litigation)") (original emphasis). The Government also 9 offers no evidence, in the form of an attorney declaration or otherwise, to support its 10 claim of "possible" prejudice. In any event, the Government can hardly be said to be 11 prejudiced by having to prove up claims it chose to initiate. See, e.g. Security Ins.
12 Co. of Hartford v. Schipporeit, 69 F.3d 1377, 1381 (7th Cir. 1995) (holding 13 intervention would avoid additional litigation and conflicting results and would enable 14 court to address important issues in the case once, with fairness and finality).
15 Moreover, the Members seek to intervene to litigate issues such as the medical 16 necessity defense and their substantive due process claims that have not been decided.
17 Under such circumstances, the Government's claims of prejudice are without 18 evidentiary or legal support and should be rejected.

19 _____
20 1(...continued)

21 inmates two hours of yard recreation and two showers a week. This case is hardly 22 analogous to this litigation. See also Assoc. Gen. Contr. of Cal. v. Sec. of Com., Etc., 23 77 F.R.D. 31, 36, 39 (C.D. Cal. 1977), vacated, 438 U.S. 909 (1978) (intervention
24 motion denied because court lacked jurisdiction since matter appealed to United States
25 Supreme Court and motion filed post-judgment); United States v. Blue Chip Stamp 26 Company, 272 F. Supp. 432, 436 (C.D. Cal. 1967) (applicant's motion for leave to 27 intervene properly denied as untimely where applicants filed amicus curiae briefs in 28 opposition to consent decree but filed intervention motion after consent decree entered, following two years of extensive negotiations); U.S. v. State of Or., 913 F.2d 576, 588 (9th Cir. 1990) (motion denied as untimely because filed after consent decree entered, beyond geographical limits of decree and offered no explanation for delay); NAACP v.
New York, 413 U.S. 345, 366-69 (1973) (motion to intervene untimely when filed four months after applicants learned their interests might be inadequately protected and litigation was at "critical" stage).

1 c. The Members seek to intervene in the litigation, not the contempt
2 proceeding.

3 The Government also claims that the Members should not be permitted to 4 intervene in the contempt proceeding. Opp. at 3-5. But this is a red herring. The 5 Members are not seeking leave to intervene in the contempt proceeding. They are 6 seeking leave to intervene in the litigation.

7 In any event, contrary to the Government's erroneous arguments, there is no
8 blanket prohibition against intervention in contempt proceedings. For example, in 9 Wilder v. Bernstein, 1994 WL 30480, *2 (S.D. NY. 1994), the court granted the 10 applicants' motion to intervene in a contempt proceeding brought seven years after a 11 stipulation had been entered. The court found that the applicants "had no reason to be 12 aware of their interest in the matter until July 1993, when plaintiffs sought a finding 13 of contempt"

14 Likewise, in Sierra Club v. U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, 709 F.2d 175, 176
15 (2d Cir. 1983), the court denied a motion to intervene because the applicant's claimed 16 interest in the contempt proceeding--that its reputation would be affected--was not 17 cognizable. The contempt proceedings in Sierra Club concerned whether the parties
18 had violated the district court's orders entered to ensure compliance with the National 19 Environmental Policy Act and the Clean Water Act. Id. Moreover, unlike the instant
20 litigation, the applicant was "not alleged itself to have engaged in the misconduct
21 resulting in the contempt motion." Id. at 177. Here, the Members are part of the class
22 of persons alleged to have participated in the asserted misconduct which is the subject
23 of the contempt proceeding. See, e.g. Contempt Mot. at 11 (asserting defendant 24 cooperatives continued "to engage in the distribution of marijuana").

25 All of the cases cited by the Government in which intervention in contempt
26 proceedings was denied arose in a markedly different procedural context. In each of 27 those cases, the underlying action had been reduced to final judgment, such as by 28

1 permanent injunction or consent decree.² Hence, intervention was denied to prevent
2 relitigation of issues that have already been adjudicated. Here, the contempt
3 proceedings are ancillary to ongoing litigation and raise issues not finally decided in 4 the main action. Accordingly, intervention is proper.

5 2. The Government ignores that the Members have an interest in 6 the transaction that is protected by the Constitution.

7 The Government contends that the Members do not have a protected interest in 8 the transaction because they "have no right to obtain marijuana under the Controlled 9 Substances Act, 21 U.S.C. § 844." Opp. at 7. Whether the Members have a right to 10 obtain cannabis under the Controlled Substances Act, however, is irrelevant. The 11 Members here have claimed a protectable interest under the medical necessity defense, 12 the Fifth Amendment of the United States Constitution and California law (see Cal.
13 Health & Safety Code § 11362.5(b)(1)(B)). The Government nowhere addresses these 14 claims in its opposition, and the Court should refrain from deciding this important
15 constitutional issue on the merits under the erroneous guise of a procedural ruling
16 under Rule 24(a).³

17
18
19

20 2 See, e.g. United States v. Fitch, 472 F.2d 548, 549-50 (9th Cir. 1973) (holding 21 applicant, already under criminal indictment, had no standing to intervene in civil 22 contempt proceeding); and N.L.R.B. v. Shurtenda Steaks, Inc., 424 F.2d 192, 194 23 (10th Cir. 1970) (denying motion to intervene in enforcement proceeding as untimely when filed after judgment entered).

24 3 When parties have previously requested that courts recognize a fundamental 25 constitutional right, the right typically has been asserted in litigation in which the 26 exercise of the claimed right is claimed to conflict with positive law. See, e.g. Roe v.
27 Wade, 410 U.S. 113, 120 (1973) (action seeking declaratory judgment that Texas
28 criminal abortion statutes were unconstitutional); Griswold v. Connecticut, 381 U.S.
479, 480 (1965) (action alleging unconstitutionality of Connecticut statutes prohibiting use of contraceptives). Hence, the fact that no reported decision has as yet declared the right that the Members invoke is not a ground for denial of the motion on the basis that no protectable interest exists.

1 3. The Government concedes that: (1) the disposition of these
2 actions will impair the Members' rights and (2) the Members'
3 interests may not be adequately represented by the parties.

4 The Government makes no credible argument that the Members have failed to 5 meet either of the last two requirements for intervention. First, the Government
6 offered no opposition whatever to the Members' showing that the disposition of these
7 actions will impair or impede their ability to protect their interest. The Government
8 therefore concedes this requirement has been met.

9 Second, contrary to its arguments in opposition to this motion, the Government
10 has elsewhere argued that the Members' rights may be inadequately represented by 11 existing parties. This satisfies the last requirement for intervention of right. (See 12 Federal Sav. & Loan, 983 F.2d 211, 216 (11th Cir. 1993) ("The proposed intervenors' 13 burden to show that their interests may be inadequately represented is minimal")
14 (original emphasis); see also Sagebrush Rebellion, 713 F.2d at 528 (same).

15 For example, the Government argued that the defendant cooperatives do not 16 have standing to raise their members' constitutional claims. In rejecting the defendant
17 cooperatives' substantive due process claim, the Government stated that "it is doubtful 18 that the non-compliant defendants have standing to raise any such defense on behalf of 19 their customers." See Consolidated Replies at 17. See also Contempt Mot. at 20.
20 The Government's inconsistent positions are also undermined by its repeated
21 acknowledgements of the centrality of the Members' claims to the litigation and to the 22 contempt proceeding. See, e.g. id. at 9-11 (arguing defendant cooperatives have not 23 carried their burden of production because they failed to "identify a single person [to 24 whom] they distributed marijuana after May 19, 1998; have failed to establish the 25 medical condition which allegedly would have justified the sale of marijuana to that 26 individual; and have failed to introduce any evidence regarding their alleged 27 defenses").

28

1 B. In the Alternative, the Members Should be Granted Permissive
2 Intervention.

3 The Government has failed to rebut the Members' showing that they should be 4 granted permissive intervention if they are denied intervention as of right. The 5 Government again contends that the Members' motion is not timely. For the reasons
6 discussed above and in the Members' moving papers, the motion is plainly timely.

7 The Members have satisfied the requirements for permissive intervention, and 8 the Government seeks to oppose the Members' request by inventing new requirements.
9 For example, the Government contends the Members should not be granted permissive 10 intervention because they will supposedly "add no new or unique arguments to the 11 briefing already before the Court" Opp. at 10. There is no requirement that an 12 applicant seeking permissive intervention add "new or unique arguments." See, e.g.
13 Venegas v. Skaggs, 867 F.2d 527, 529 (9th Cir. 1989) (setting forth requirements for 14 permissive intervention). See also Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b) (same).

15 Moreover, the Government ignores that "judicial economy is a relevant 16 consideration in deciding a motion for permissive intervention." Id. at 531. In 17 Venegas, the court reversed an order denying permissive intervention. The court
18 found that the "district court in this case is in the best position to decide these issues"
19 because it was "well acquainted with the underlying litigation" and the parties. Id.

20 This Court is well acquainted with the parties and the issues. It makes sense to 21 permit the Members to intervene in this action. They satisfy all the requirements for 22 permissive intervention, and granting this motion is within the Court's discretion.

23
24
25
26
27
28

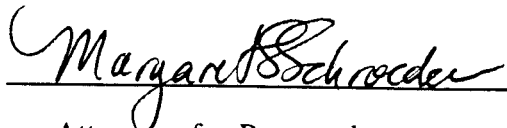

1 III. CONCLUSION.

2 For the foregoing reasons, the Court should permit the Members to intervene as 3 of right. In the alternative, the Court should grant the Members' motion for 4 permissive intervention.

5 Dated: August 27, 1998.

6 Respectfully submitted,

7 PILLSBURY MADISON & SUTRO LLP
8 THOMAS V. LORAN III
9 MARGARET S. SCHROEDER
 235 Montgomery Street
 Post Office Box 7880
 San Francisco, CA 94120-7880

11 By

12 Attorneys for Proposed
13 Defendants and Counterclaimants-
14 in-Intervention Edward Neil
15 Brundridge, Ima Carter, Rebecca
 Nikkel and Lucia Y. Vier